CASH OF ALLIES TO STAY IN BANKS

Plan to Let Them Hold the Proceeds of the Credit Pro Rata to Subscriptions.

AIM TO EASE MONEY MARKET

Suggested That Payments May Be Made in Installments Over a Period of Months.

MUNITION PROBLEM SOLVED

With Other Needs Provided For, War Supplies Can Be Paid For by Buying Exchange.

Steps to prevent a serious disturbance in the money market when subscriptions are received for the huge credit to Great Britain and France were under discussion yesterday by bankers working with the Anglo-French commission. While none of the money to be provided will leave the United States, there is expected to be such a shifting about of cash in the banks when the notes are brought out that efforts will be made to minimize the shock of withdrawals.

To accomplish this end two prospects are receiving serious consideration. The first calls for the payment of subscriptions in installments running over several months, the first to be perhaps 25 per cent. of the amount subscribed. It was pointed out that the Allies did not want a credit of $600,000,000 or $800,000,000 all at one time, since the payments to be financed under it were expected to be spread over many weeks. If the full amount were to be paid in on the first day the allied Governments would pay interest on a big sum of money lying idle in the depositaries. For that reason the commission is ready to acquiesce in a suggestion that the payments be spread over a considerable period, so that the money will come in as settlements fall due.

To Stabilize Cash Movements.

The second proposal had to do with the handling of the subscriptions as they are paid up. It is understood that J. P. Morgan & Co. will be disbursing agents for the money held to the credit of the Allies, but there is no desire on their part to concentrate in New York institutions several hundred million dollars awaiting the call of the borrowers.

To minimize the movement of cash and preserve the banking equilibrium, it is proposed that the receipts under the note offer be redopsited in the subscribing institutions in proportion to the amount of notes which they take. In other words, a bank which subscribes for notes will not forward the amount required to New York, to be held by the disbursing agents, but will transfer a credit for the sum on its books to J. P. Morgan & Co.

As the money is needed in payment for supplies, Morgan & Co. will draw on a number of the depositaries for small sums, rather than on one institution for the full amount of the payment being made. As the money paid to manufacturers and produce dealers will soon find its way back into the banks, it is believed that the whole transaction can be carried through with little surface disturbance.

Conversion Clause Possible.

Another suggestion which was receiving consideration by the bankers yesterday was that the credit be made through five-year 5 per cent. notes, which will net the borrowers 97½, and that the notes carry a conversion privilege. It was said that the conferences might result in the attachment of a clause providing for conversion at maturity into long-term Government bonds bearing interest at 4½ per cent. Conservative bond men in the financial district said yesterday that if the war ended in the next two years or so such a conversion privilege would add materially to the value of the notes.

The President of one of the leading trust companies said that if this conversion privilege were borne by the notes he would recommend to his Directors that the bank subscribe for nearly the full amount permitted under the law. He looks for a low interest rate following the war, and he predicts a considerable appreciation of the notes when peace is secured.

The Allies' Commissioners are optimistic over the progress of the negotiations, even though they consider a number of important points still unsettled. Basil B. Blackett, Secretary, said last night at the Hotel Biltmore that there were no new developments that he cared to talk about.

Munition Problem Solving Itself.

From a eNw York banker conversant with the trend of the negotiations it was learned that if no further hitch occurred an important meeting to be held tomorrow afternoon might be followed by a formal statement to the effect that an agreement on the broader features of the plan had been reached. The problem of a separate method of paying for munitions of war seems to be solving itself, and the fact that the purpose of the credit is primarily for commercial uses will not be stressed.

From the commission's standpoint, if the size of the credit is made to conform to the estimated commercial needs no declaration of its purpose will be necessary. It is held that if all of the credit is used for commercial payments it will be an easy matter to buy exchange for munitions.

With the big loan on the eve of completion, financiers were fully awake yesterday to the necessity of making the note offering a great popular appeal throuhgout the country. A widespread publicity campaign will be inaugurated to educate investors to the duty of buying the foreign notes for the protection of American trade. In line with this it was intimated strongly that important banking interests which had not figured in the conferences would be invited to participate in the syndicate.

LAWYER A SUICIDE IN WOOLWORTH BUILDING

John Ennhy and Samuel Mauriello, watchmen in the Woolworth Building, were making the rounds on the eighth floor at 9 o'clock last night when they saw a light burning under the door of Room 805, occupied by Bernard Robinson, a lawyer. They opened the door with a pass key and found Robinson, with his coat off, sitting in a chair with a bullet through his right temple.

The blood had dried on his face, indicating that he had been dead for some time, and it is believed that he had been in the building since the afternoon. In his hand was a five-chambered revolver of a cheap make, and the box in which he had got it was still lying on the desk. On the desk, too, lay a letter addressed "To my wife."

Coroner Feinberg later pronounced it a clear case of suicide, and notified Mrs. Sara Robinson, the wife of the dead man, who lived with their two children, Sara, aged 6, and Benny, aged 2, at 69 East Ninety-third Street.

There was not a cent of money in th eoffice, but in a drawer were found pawn tickets in great number, many of them for household articles. The letter to his wife, addressed "Darling Sara," the full text of which the police woud not give out, contained the sentence, "It's too hard; I cannot continue this struggle."

Robinson shared a suite of four rooms on the Barclay Street side, 805 to 809, with the Burbank Publishing Company, publishers of law books. Up till a few months ago he was a member of the firm of Robinson & Lauber, at 135 Broadway, but the prtnership was dissolved. This was the first suicide in the Woolworth Building.

Robinson ran for Assemblyman on the Republican ticket in the Second District six years ago, and was defeated. He was a graduate of the Norfolk Street School, the College of the City of New York, and the Law School of the University of Minnesota. He had been married eight years, and met his wife when she was a soloist in a synagogue.

FORD TO SEE DANIELS.

Will Submit Plan for New Type of Diminutive Submarine.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Secretary Daniels today made an appointment to see Henry Ford of Detroit, who, it is understood, will submit a plan for a new type of diminutive submarine. The appointment for the conference was made through a friend, it was explained, and not by direct communication with Mr. Ford.

Newspaper reports from Detroit have stated that the new submarine would be equipped with a gasoline motor, and would be one-fourth the size of those now in commission, and less expensive to operate. Mr. Daniels said today that he was glad to receive ideas from any source to improve the submarine arm of the navy, or in any other way develop the navy, and that he would listen to Mr. Ford with an open mind.

BELL AS FINANCE CHAIRMAN.

Indianapolis Mayor Handled Contributions to County Committee.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 20.—Mayor Bell, who is on trial charged with fraud committed at the last election, was Chairman of the Democratic County Finance Committee in the 1914 campaign, and was suggested for the position by County Chairman Fred Barrett, according to J. W. Joseph, Treasurer of the Democratic Committee, who testified today. Joseph's memory had to be refreshed from his testimony before the Grand Jury before he could say who suggested the Mayor for the position. Barrett was indicted with Mayor Bell.

"Some of the sub-Treasurers reported to the Mayor's office in the City Hall," continued the witness. "The money collected by them is not accounted for in my report unless it was included in the funds presented to me by Mayor Bell."

Dr. Melville E. Heiner, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for County Coroner, testified that he attended two meetings of candidates at which Mayor Bell presided.

"At one meeting," the witness said, "fear was expressed that the Kervan crowd would get out an injunction to block the burning of the ballots after the primary in a South Side precinct. Mayor Bell said, 'We have Judges and clerks that are all right, and Judge Charles Orbison said we need have no fear, that his court will be closed for a week.'"

A number of witnesses were called by the State to show that men purporting to vote the Democratic ticket from certain street addresses were not known in those neighborhoods. Some of these witnesses were women. All were excused without cross-examination.

RACED TO HUSBAND DYING.

Wife a Patient in the Same Hospital Where Clayton Expired.

Special to The New York Times.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Sept. 20.—Mrs. Mary Clayton of 664 Monroe Avenue is critically ill tonight in the General Hospital unaware that her husband, George Clayton, a prominent shipbuilder, died in the same hospital last night.

Mrs. Clayton arrived here arter a race against death from Pueblo, Col., where she was visiting her son. She was ill before she left the West, and the excitement and worry that accompanied the trip after she was told of her husband's dangerous illness led to a collapse.

As soon as she arrived here physicians ordered her removal to the hospital, where four hours later her husband died. There is little hope of her recovery, but doctors attending her announced tonight that as there was an improvement in her condition they had advised withholding the news that her husband had died.

Mr. Clayton was connected with the New Jersey Dry Dock Company.

SEARCH FOR 'BODY' IN VAIN.

Jersey City Police Doubt Truth of Tale Told by Boys.

After an all-day and unsuccessful search of the pond at Montgomery and Florence Streets, Jersey City, the police were convinced last night that the small boys who told of having seen three men in an automobile dump a white bundle "that might have contained a body" into the pond on Sunday, were telling a tale originating in their imagination. The search, however, has not been abandoned, and it is possible that the pond may be drained today.

There are many who believe the little sheet of water may hide a mystery, for the police found the track of the automobile at the spot where the boys say it stopped, and there are tire marks to show that it turned about at that point. The search was conducted by Captain James Larkin of the West Montgomery Street Police Station. Last night the police still guarded the pond, and today it will be decided whether the search will be continued.

AMERICANS TELL OF ZEPPELIN RAID

Arrivals Here from London Say Many Lives Were Lost in Attack on Sept. 8.

ALL IN MOTOR BUS KILLED

One Bomb Destroyed a Tenement—Another Started a Big Fire in Cheapside.

PEOPLE REMAINED CALM

Regarded It as Interesting Spectacle—Doubt as to Number of Raiders and Damage to Them.

A number of passengers who arrived here from England yesterday, when three liners reached New York, saw the spectacular Zeppelin raid on London on Sept. 8, and a few of them saw something of the raid on the London suburbs on the previous night. The passengers supplemented the first uncensored stories of the raid sent from the ships by wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES on Sunday night by Haddon Chambers, the English playright, and others, and produced yesterday morning.

The three vessels were the Rotterdam of the Holland-Amerika Line, the Philadelphia of the American Line, and the Orduna of the Cunard Line. Among the arrivals were such well-known men as Frederic R. Coudert, the international law expert, and H. Gordon Selfridge, the American owner of one of the biggest department stores in London. Both of them witnessed the raid on the night of Sept. 8.

There seems to be a general agreement among those who saw this latter raid that the loss of life was a good deal greater than was admitted by the British authorities. They tell of a motor omnibus which was destroyed by a bomb from a Zeppelin, every one in it being killed, though the stories the story as to where this tragedy occurred vary, the location being put as far apart as Liverpool Street and Charing Cross. The passengers who arrived yesterday, however, are agreed in regard to a destructive fire caused by another Zeppelin bomb in Wood Street, Cheapside, one of the most ancient thoroughfares in London. This bomb narrowly missed hitting the famous Bow Church, Cheapside, celebrated in legend and history.

Though resulting in considerable loss of life and destruction of property, the bombs utterly failed to cause any real alarm among the millions of inhabitants of London who were not immediately affected. The people remained calm, but were, of course, excited and curious. They seemed to regard the Zeppelin raids as a sort of highly interesting show.

E. C. Fowell's Story.

Zeppelin bombs narrowly missed the Woolwich Arsenal the night before the more noted raid over London took place, according to E. C. Fowell of Detroit, a chemist connected with one of the largest American chemical concerns, who, during a two months' stay in London on business, had unusual sources of information. Mr. Fowell, who arrived yesterday on the Philadelphia, saw much of the Zeppelin raid of Sept. 8, and the next morning examined some of its effects in company with a well-known English chemist. Mr. Fowell had just left the Cheshire Cheese, in Fleet Street, after dining there with a friend, when he heard the explosion of the first bomb.

"We were walking along Fleet Street toward the Strand," said Mr. Fowell at the Imperial yesterday, when we saw the rays of searchlights begin playing overhead. Almost immediately we heard a tremendous explosion, which sounded quite near us. Then the anti-aircraft guns began to roar. I took out my watch, without knowing why, and noticed that at was 10:50 o'clock.

"Now let me tell you that the man who would claim that under the conditions that followed he would not be scared is either an untruthful person or he is too stupid to know when he is in peril. I will acknowledge that I was scared stiff. I was paralyzed. It seemed as if the end were getting nearer during each of the fifteen or twenty minutes that the racket continued.

"We could make out one of the Zeppelins coming along from the direction of St. Paul's. I couldn't tell how many there were in all, because the narrowness of the street made a limited field of vision. I don't know whether I saw three or four. But one of the Zeppelins was handled wonderfully, and somewhat fearfully, for at times it seemed almost to stand on end. And, from whatever height it dropped its bombs, there was one time when it could not have been more than 1,000 feet above the city.

"There were very few people in that part of London in the streets at the time. Most whom I saw were in windows, and the women were hysterical. We couldn't see much at first, and had some difficulty in getting a taxi. Four or five passed us at full speed, empty, their drivers seeking safety. One we found at the Savoy Hotel, however, got us to the scene of the Gresham Street explosion before the firemen had got a stream on the burning buildings.

"That bomb fell not further away from the Bank of England than seventy-five yards. The explosion itself, with the fire that followed, demolished two business houses, one of them, I think, a wholesale dry goods merchant's place of business.

"The most curious of effects was observable at Bartholomew's Close, in the City, a quadrangular shaped lot about 200 yards around, surrounded by buildings whose fronts face the quadrangle. Two or three bombs were dropped in this neighborhood, and an odd thing is that one that dropped through the roof of one structure did less general damage than another that fell almost into the middle of the Close.

"On the very spot where the bomb struck stood a fireman's station, of the type that abounds in London, a tiny shelter containing emergency apparatus, and where a fireman was always on duty. The fireman who was detailed there was reported missing, and they had not found a trace of him when I left London. There wasn't anything to be seen of the shelter itself. Instead, there was a hole in the ground eight feet deep, and big enough to put a horse and wagon in, with plenty of room to spare. The bomb had gone through about nine inches of concrete paving.

"Not a single window was left in the buildings about the Close, yet otherwise the buildings did not appear from the outside to be damaged at all. A policeman who was on duty in the quadrangle about forty feet from the spot where the bomb

ROCKEFELLER SEES HOW MINERS LIVE

Begins His Inspection of the Colorado Field and Questions the Workers.

UNION MEN MAKE THREATS

Talk of Getting Warrants for Rockefeller and Other Officials fa Strike Killings.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Col., Sept. 20.—John D. Rockefeller, Jr., today began an inspection of the properties of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company. It is said that Mr. Rockefeller will spend at least two weeks in the State, and that he will make a thorough investigation of working conditions. The plan for the visit of inspection had its inception at the New York hearings before the Federal Commission on Industrial Relations.

On Jan. 27 Mr. Rockefeller was a witness before the commission. After leaving the stand he stopped to speak to "Mother" Mary Jones, and she invited him to visit Colorado and see for himself conditions described before the commission. Mr. Rockefeller at that time promised that he would make a visit of inspection.

Plan Attempt to Get Warrants.

The visit of Mr. Rockefeller to this State caused the wide circulation of a report tonight that while Mr. Rockefeller was here the miners would attempt to have a warrant served on him, accusing him of murder because of the Ludlow killings. The report also was spread that the miners would attempt similar action in the case of President J. F. Welborn of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company, David W. Brown, head of the Rocky Mountain Fuel Company, and John C. Osgood, President of the Victor-American Fuel Company.

President John McLennan of the miners said tonight that A. M. Belcher, counsel in chief for the national organization of the United Mine Workers, would arrive here tomorrow, and that the main object of his trip to Colorado was to attempt to have such a course followed.

William Drummond, international representative of the miners in Colorado, said today that he expected Belcher and his aids to arrive tomorrow. Conferences were to be held, he said, and not later than Wednesday the evidence was to be laid before Attorney General Farrar.

Diamond said that if the Attorney General refused to act the evidence would be given to the public on which the attorneys for the miners wished to have the prosecutions brought, so that it could judge whether or not the information warranted the State's legal head in taking action.

Inspects Miner's Houses.

TRINIDAD, Col., Sept. 20.—John D. Rockefeller, Jr., today visited the scene of the Ludlow battle and the mining camps of Berwind and Tabasco. After talking with the miners, he went into their homes, questioning their wives about working and living conditions and making suggestions for improvements.

For luncheon Mr. Rockefeller visited the miners' boarding house at Berwind. Tom Davis, superintendent of the mine, who sat at his right hand, clad in blue overalls and with coal dust ground into the wrinkles of his face, was engaged in a running conversation with Mr. Rockefeller. Beefsteak, beans, and mashed potatoes made up the meal.

After the luncheon the party went to Tabasco, halting on the way to visit the school, where Mr. Rockefeller inspected some improvement work, done in part by the expenditure of money contributed by the Rockefeller Foundation last Winter to furnish work for unemployed miners, following the calling off of the strike. A sheer hillside had been graded to make a playground. Mr. Rockefeller was apparently greatly interested in the work being done in the school.

"They do not sing very well," apologized the pretty school ma'm. "You see, they have just started and haven't had time to learn much. And then, they are so little."

"They're doing fine—fine," replied Mr. Rockefeller, smiling broadly. And sixty sons and daughters of Berwind and Tabasco miners, of an average age of 6 year, and perhaps a dozen nationalities, sang lustily the song in which they had been carefully drilled by Miss Edna Campbell, teacher of the First Grade.

Addresses School Chaildren.

Then Mr. Rockefeller made a speech to the school children in which he told them to study hard and obey their teacher. "And when next I come to Colorado, perhaps some of you will be teachers yourselves," he added. "I have six children myself. Sometimes they are not as mannerly as you seem to be. Maybe I'll bring a few of them along the next time I come to Colorado."

Mr. Rockefeller asked the miners and their wives how they liked the houses which they rented from the company, how much rent they paid, and whether they thought tht houses were worth the money.

"Why don't you have a garden?" he asked one miner. "You could fix this place up so it would look much better."

Early in the round of inspection Mr. Rockefeller hunted up Dan Morelli, a coal digger, who had been elected by the men of the Berwind camp to represent them in conferences with the officers of the company. Morelli had just come from the mine and his face was grimed with black dust. The two sat down side by side on the mine office and talked earnestly for perhaps twenty minutes.

Mr. Rockefeller questioned the miner closely on the practical working of the plan for conferences between officers of the company and representatives of the miners.

Leaving the canon late in the afternoon, the party returned to Trinidad, where Mr. Rockefeller was entertained at a picture show. Mr. Rockefeller was accompanied by President J. F. Welborn and other officers of the company.

TRACE HESPERIAN'S FATE TO A TORPEDO

British Authorities in Possession of a Fragment of the Missile That Sank the Liner.

SUBMARINES WERE NEAR BY

Admiralty Issues an Official Reply to German Report That Mine Caused the Disaster.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—With respect to the German denial of responsibility for the sinking of the Allan Line steamer Hesperian, the British official Press Bureau has issued the following statement:

"According to information in the press, a semi-official statement has been issued at Berlin that it was practically impossible that a German submarine could have sunk the Hesperian, since, according to the war plans, no German submarine was on Sept. 4 in the locality where the Hesperian was sunk; also, because, according to a description from English sources, the explosion was of such a kind that it must be inferred that it was caused by a mine rather than a torpedo.

"Undoubted proof exists that a German submarine was actually in the locality where the Hesperian was attacked, and ships were sunk both to the north and south of this spot on Sept. 4 and 5. The explosion was of the type caused by a torpedo. This is conclusively proved by a fair-sized fragment of a torpedo now in the possession of the Admiralty, which was picked up on board the ship before she sank."

BERLIN, Sept. 20, (via London.)—The German Admiralty is now absolutely certain that the Allan Line steamer Hesperian was not destroyed by a German submarine. All the under-water boats which were out at the time of the disaster have now returned to their bases, The Associated Press is authoritatively informed, and it is stated that none of them torpedoed the steamer.

On the contrary, it is said that the Admiralty is convinced the disaster was due to a floating non-German mine. As confirmation of the Admiralty belief, it is pointed out that a mine painted green and white, and which it is declared was not a German mine, was driven ashore a few days ago on the coast of Ireland in the same vicinity where the Hesperian was blown up.

SEES A GERMAN TRAP.

Pall Mall Gazette Opposes Abandoning Attacks on U-Boats.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The Pall Mall Gazette, commenting on the recent statement of Gottlieb von Jagow, the German Foreign Minister, regarding Germany's submarine policy, in which he suggested that it might be well for Great Britain to revoke orders instructing shipmasters to attack submarines, has this to say:

"The British answer to such diplomacy is quite plain. We have beaten the submarine campaign and would be indeed simple-minded to give it fresh facilities by laying down the weapons by which it has been rendered impotent."

The Gazette contends that the provision which the Foreign Minister suggested for preventing the sinking of belligerent shipping without warning is merely a German trap intended, if Great Britain refuses to accept it, to persuade Americans that Germany has been driven against her will to continue "the infamous courses with which her naval flag is identified."

HURT IN HESPERIAN ESCAPE.

Mrs. Ronald Whiteway Arrives Here with a Dislocated Shoulder.

The first survivors of the Allan liner Hesperian to reach this country are Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Whiteway of Toronto, who arrived yesterday on the Philadelphia from Liverpool. Mrs. Whiteway said that she was sitting on deck about 8:30 o'clock on the night of the explosion which wrecked the Hesperian, and the noise was so terrific it seemed as if the decks had been riven asunder. She criticised the conduct of the crew of the steamer, and said that they were looking out more for their own safety than that of the passengers.

Mrs. Whiteway got into a lifeboat with her husband, and as it was being lowered a sailor stepped on her left shoulder and dislocated it. After pulling around for two hours the lifeboat was picked up by one of the British torpedo boat destroyers which had been sent to the rescue.

DUMBA PREPARES TO SAIL SEPT. 28

Reserves Passage on the Rotterdam, Contingent Upon Receipt of Safe Conduct.

The agents of the Holland-America Line admitted last night that provisional reservation had been made for Dr. Dumba, the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador, and his wife on the Rotterdam, sailing from New York Tuesday, Sept. 28, for Rotterdam, via Falmouth. Everything depends on whether the British Ambassador issues a safe conduct via the Channel route, they said; otherwise the Ambassador could not go on the Rotterdam.

It was from the Rotterdam that J. F. J. Archibald was taken on his arrival at Falmouth, the Dumba letter and other documents he carried being confiscated. It was on the Rotterdam also that Archibald returned to America, arriving yesterday.

The Dumba reservation was made yesterday. From Rotterdam, in Holland, the Ambassador could travel through neutral territory into Germany and thence to Vienna.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Sept. 20.—At the Austro-Hungarian Summer Embassy in Lenox it was admitted today that Dr. Dumba had asked for reservations on the Rotterdam for Sept. 28, but it is not certain that he will sail then. As to safe conduct, it was asserted that the fact of asking for the reservation on that ship was tantamount to the statement that a safe conduct had been granted, as Dr. Dumba would not take such a step otherwise.

ARCHIBALD LANDS; TELLS HIS STORY

Supposed Dumba's and Other Letters He Carried Abroad Were Innocent, He Asserts.

PUT THEM IN SAFETY BOX

Surrendered Key When British Authorities Demanded It—Locked Up, but Well Treated.

QUESTIONED BY DETECTIVE

Denies He Had Hollow Gold-Headed Cane—Will Report at State Department.

James F. J. Archibald, the American war correspondent, in whose possession was found, with others, the letter from Dr. Constantin Theodor Dumba, the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador, to Count Burian, the Minister for Foreign Affairs in Vienna, submitting a plan to tie up American munition works by strikes, which lettter resulted in the request by Secretary of State Lansing for the recall of the Ambassador, arrived in New York on the Holland-America liner Rotterdam yesterday morning. Later in a formal statement he declared that he had had no idea of the nature of the Dumba document and that until it was made public after it was seized by the British authorities at Falmouth, he thought it was merely a personal letter intended by Dr. Dumba to facilitate Archibald's work as a correspondent with the Austro-Hungarian armies.

In addition to the letter from Dr. Dumba to Count Burian, and one from Captain von Papen, the Military Attaché of the German Embassy, to Mme. von Papen, Mr. Archibald said he also carried a note from Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, addressed to Mme. von Bernstorff, and another from Prince von Hatzfeldt of the German Embassy, addressed to Princess von Hatzfeldt. He said he was confident these two letters were entirely harmless, although he admitted they were sealed and eh was ignorant of their contents. With each letter went a present, that from Count von Bernstorff to his wife being a clock, while Prince von Hatzfeldt's gift to the Princess was a cut glass bon-bon dish. The British authorities returned the clock and dish, but kept the letters.

Mystery of a Gold-Headed Cane.

In addition to the letters to Mme. von Bernstorff and Princess von Hatzfeldt, the existence of which had not before been publicly known, there was also a gold-headed cane that came mysteriously into the Archibald story yesterday. Mr. Archibald says he does not know anything about the gold-headed cane, and he so informed Chief Flynn of the United States Secret Service, who met him off Quarantine and questioned him regarding the cane.

"Chief Flynn asked me," said Archibald, "if before I left I had been given for my own personal use or to present to some person a gold-headed cane. As I had not, I told that I knew nothing about any such cane. He wanted to know if I knew anything about a cane that might have been hollow and therefore useful, I imagine, for the concealment of papers. He asked me if I would say on my honor that I knew nothing of such a cane, and I assured him that I did make the statement on my honor, for I certainly do not know anything about any such cane."

When seen on the Rotterdam, Mr. Archibald who was met at Quarantine by his lawyer, Frank J. Hogan of Washington, refused to make any statement for publication. He was questioned officially only by Chief Flynn, and it was not until late in the afternoon that he told of Chief Flynn's quest of the gold-headed cane.

At his office in the Marbridge Building, Sixth Avenue and Thirty-fifth Street, Mr. Archibald, late in the afternoon issued the folowing statement:

Not a "Dispatch Bearer."

When I arrived in America this morning I had practically no information regarding the unfortunate affair involvxed in the sending by the Austrian Ambassador to the Minister for Foreign Affairs of his country of a letter by me, and hence I refrained from making any statement until I could become at least slightly acquainted with what has been said in this country. I now make this simple statement of the true facts of the case.

One thing I wish to state emphatically, and that is that I was in no sense a "dispatch bearer" for any one, but what I did was done merely as an accommodation to friends. Naturally, before leaving for belligerent territory to do field work with armies engaged in the war, I sought proper letters of introduction and recommendation, and the day before I sailed several such letters were sent to my hotel. These letters were mostly in German, and as I am not proficient in reading that language I did not seek to translate them. With the exception of a couple of notes accompanying trifling gifts of a personal nature, I supposed that all these letters were in relation to my work, and in fact I did not know, nor do I now know, anything of their contents. That some of them were sealed did not occasion any surprise, as official letters of introduction are frequently delivered sealed.

I read only one letter in particular, which I had asked Prince Hatzfeldt to have written for me, and in fact I myself suggested, almost word for word, its contents. Feeling that there might be a strong anti-American sentiment in Germany, and not knowing to what extent that might inconvenience those traveling with me, I asked Prince Hatzfeldt to prepare me an open letter stating that I was friendly to their cause; this was a letter of only a couple of lines that could be read in a moment in case of necessity and intended to be used only in the event we were subjectd to any local hostil demonstration. There were a few letters to officials, but these I of course had not examined.

Dr. Dumba's letter was given to me most openly at the last moment on the dock at the foot of the steamer's gang-plank just before sailing. Hundreds of persons were about, and there was not the slightest suggestion

GERMAN GUNS NOW SHELL SERBIANS

Drive Them From Positions on South Bank of Danube Near Semdria.

BERLIN, Sept. 20, (via London.)—Announcement was made by the War Office today in the following bulletin of an attack by German forces on the Serbians:

> On the northern bank of the Danube German artillery engaged in battle Serbian positions south of the river near Semendria, (24 miles southeast of Belgrade.) The enemy was driven off. His artillery fire was silenced.

The above is the first official announcement of the presence of Germans on the Serbian front. It has been reported for several weeks that the Germans and Austrians were planning a new campaign in the Balkans, with the object of going to the assistance of the Turks.

Such a move would doubtless be directed first at Serbia, in an attempt to force a passage through that country to the Bulgarian border. Turkey having made promises of territorial concessions to Bulgaria it has been reported that the latter nation would not oppose the passage of German and Austrian forces to the Turkish frontier. The prediction has been made that this move would bring Rumania and Greece into the war. These nations, as well as Bulgaria, have called out additional troops recently.

Official announcement was made in England in July that British forces, the strength of which was not given, had been sent to Serbia. A large British force under command of Rear Admiral Ernest Troubridge, according to unofficial advices from Belgrade in June, has been in Serbia since March. It is also known that the Serbians are being assisted in the field by a French aeroplane corps.

POPE INTERCEDES FOR INVADED POLAND

Obtains Promises from Germany and Austria to Respect Language, Religion, and Customs.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Sept. 20.—As the occupation of Russian Poland by the Austro-Germans becomes firmer, the action of the Pope to obtain from the invaders recognition of the rights of the Poles becomes more insistent. It is asserted that much already has been granted, especially concerning the Catholic clergy and episcopacy, while much has been promised regarding respect for the language, religion and usages of the Poles.

Persons near to the Pope say one of his greatest ambitions is to help in the resurrection of Poland, which he believes will be one of the greatest guarantees for the future peace of Europe, since it will act as a buffer element between the German and Slav peoples.

CANADIANS BETTER SUPPLIED WITH SHELLS

But Artillerymen Are Still Regretting Earlier Lost Opportunities to Kill Germans.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CANADIAN HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Sept. 15, (Delayed by the Censor.)—Today the Canadian newspaper men visited the Canadian batteries. I talked with the officers and saw the batteries executing a small bombardment.

While the ammunition supply has been greatly augmented, one hears the echo of what the shortage has meant in the past. For example, on a certain afternoon last May, the Second Brigade planned to lure the enemy into his front line trenches. The usual preliminary bombardment and fake activity on our front, with the showing of the tops of ladders, bayonet points and caps above the parapets, brought the Germans swarming to their line, whereupon our artillery concentrated a heavy fire there. The havoc was such that the Canadians were able to make a small gain. With more ammunition this gain might have covered a much larger area.

GEN. BISSING'S BROTHER INTERNED IN ENGLAND

Wealthy Baron, Naturalized Subject, Spirited Away—Much Agitation Against Him.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Baron von Bissing, half-brother of General von Bissing, German Military Governor of Belgium, and a naturalized British subject, after fighting for months for his liberty, has been interned. He was mysteriously spirited away today from his luxurious home in Kensington by detectives, who left a battalion of newspaper men on guard over an empty shell.

It is reported that the Islington Workhouse will be the Baron's domicile during the remainder of the war.

The internment of Baron von Bissing follows a long agitation that he be deprived of his freedom in common with numerous other wealthy British subjects of German birth against whom popular feeling has run high. An effect of this feeling manifested itself in the resignation of Prince Louis of Battenberg as First Sea Lord of the Admiralty last October, and more recently in the case of Sir Edgar Speyer, who resigned in May as a Privy Councilor and came to the United States.

The status of Baron von Bissing has been the subject of debate on more than one occasion in Parliament. It was suggested in one of these discussions last February that the Baron had a residence at Hove, Sussex, from which "signaling operations might easily be carried out." It was denied at the time by Harold J. Tennant, Under Secretary of State for War, that the Baron had done anything which would justify his removal from the prohibited area, or that he had ever done any secret service for Germany.

Later it was suggested in the House of Commons that the Baron be deprived of his liberty in retaliation for the expulsion from Belgium by the Germans in April of Gifford Pinchot, former chief of the United States Bureau of Forestry, whose sister is the wife of a British diplomat, but nothing came of it. The agitation for his internment was kept up, but the Government continued to resist the demands.

VILNA FORCES ARE NOT CUT OFF; MAY YET ESCAPE

Fighting Their Way Back from Captured Fortress, Petrograd Says.

DRIVE FOE FROM RAILWAY

Two Lines of Retreat by Rail Open if Lida Junction Can Be Reached.

GERMAN EFFORT DESPERATE

Archduke Leopold, to the South, Striving to Head the Elusive Russians Off.

MACKENSEN'S GUNS MIRED

Austro-German Forces in Volhynia and Galicia Suffer in Attacks All Along the Line.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 20, (Dispatch to the London Daily Chronicle.)—Vilna is lost, but not without hope of return. The Russian Army which defended the city until the last possible moment is not surrounded and is stubbornly fighting its way back over the country between Vilna and the Vilna-Lida Railway. This railway is still open, though the Germans are struggling hard ten miles to the west of it, and the greater part of the Russian troops must retire on foot until the withdrawal of the whole front to Lida Junction somewhat relieves the fierce strain.

From Lida there are two outlets by rail. One is to Minsk by way of Molodetschno, from which the Germans fortunately have been repulsed, though they have taken Vileika, higher up the Siedlce-Polozk railway. The other is southeast of Baranovich, where the Vilna-Rovno line crosses the Brest-Moscow trunk railway.

But even with the Vilna danger past the situation is still one that demands great skill and energy if German plans are to be thwarted. Both railway outlets from Lida lead to Minsk. Vileika is sixty miles northwest of Minsk.

Th eGrmans are striking again near Slonim and Baranovich, and again at Logishin, north of Pinsk and thirty miles northwest of Luninetz Junction. They are clearly aiming at the possession of this important north and south cross-country railway in order to facilitate the movement of their troops up and down the front. But apparently they have bigger object than that in view, and here is an illustration of the fact that their plans are continuously modified or developed according to their success or failure at a given point.

Their cavalry raids have been paritly successful in giving them a vantage point as far north and east as Vileika. If they cannot now cut off the troops retiring from Vilna they will probaoly attempt the much bigger enterprise of cutting off at Minsk the communications of all the armies operating on the Russian western front. This would certainly not involve the destruction of these armies, but would mean their having to resort to much more roundabout communications southwards and eastwards.

Such a plan is not without grave risks for the Germans. Its execution would land their troops in an awkward salient which would expose them to the danger of a possible Russian offensive from the north and south.

The struggle is now entering a new phase in swampy land and under the Autumn rains. There has been no period of such moment since the battles on the Narew.

British Anxious About Vilna Army.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 21.—Of the many big battles fought on the eastern front during the past five months few, if any, have been fraught with such importance for the opposing armies as that now in progress to the east and south of Vilna, where the German Field Marshal von Hindenburg is attempting to cut off the retreat of and destroy the Russian Army which defended that city.

The German official report issued yesterday throws little light on the progress of the operation, simply stating that "the attack against the enemy retreating from Vilna is proceeding."

Petrograd continues to express confidence in the ability of the Russians to extricate themselves from the net thrown about them. In the opinion of military writers here, they are in a dangerous position. It is quite likely, however, that they got their artillery away before the Germans moved across the railways, as the evacuation of Vilna was decided upon weeks ago.

Prince Leopold of Bavaria is also approaching the railway to the southeast of Lida, having reached the district of Dworzec, which is immediately west of the road skirting the Pripet marshes and running to Rovno.

South of the Pripet the Russians still control the situation and keep on harassing the Austro-German armies in Volhynia and Galicia. On the Volhynia front some demoralization among the Austro-German forces has been observed by the Russians, according to Petrograd official advices, and the Russians, taking prompt advantage of this condition, have attacked and recaptured parties of their own forces that had been taken prisoner.

It is increasingly evident that Mackensen's armies have been weakened, presumably to reinforce Hindenburg's great drive at Vilna and Dvinsk, and that this and his advance into the vast region of marshes has landed him in difficulties, it having been impossible in some instances to extricate his artillery.

OFFICIAL WAR BULLETINS.

Hindenburg Drives Back Russian Forces Defending Dvinsk.

BERLIN, Sept. 20, (vit London.)—The following bulletin concerning the operations on the Russian front was issued today by the War Office:

Eastern theatre of war:

Army group of Field Marshal von Hindenburg: In the vicinity of the bridgehead at Dvinsk the enemy was forced to retreat from Novo Alexandrovsk (about twenty miles southwest of Dvinsk) to a position further to the rear. We took 550 prisoners. The enemy attempted to break through our lines at Orgon. The attempt was repulsed.

The attack on the opposing forces which are retreating from the district of Vilna is proceeding further to the south. Our troops are following the retreating enemy. We reached a line on the Niemen. The enemy offered temporary resistance at a few points only.

The army group of Prince Leopold has reached the Golozadz district at Dworzeo and the region southeast thereof, while its left wing is approaching the Myschiaka district.

Army group of Field Marshal von Mackensen: The enemy has been forced further back everywhere.

Southeastern theatre of war:

During engagements of minor importance German troops took 100 prisoners.

RUSSIANS NOT DRIVEN.

Making Germans Pay High Price for Successes Called Doubtful.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The Times today publishes the following dispatch from a correspondent with the Russian forces, sent on Saturday from Dvinsk:

"I spent three days on this front, where a terrific battle is raging almost unceasingly. When attacks die away at one place they begin instantly at another. The nearest front is only twelve miles from Dvinsk, whose deserted streets resound with the detonations of heavy gun fire.

"The Russians are holding the Dvinsk front in an excellent line of trenches three deep, and, despite constant fierce attacks, supported by concentrations of heavy artillery, they have held the enemy off thus far. Many times the first line has been taken by the enemy, then retaken by our counterattacks. The Germans are twice or thrice our strength, and have enormous superiority in guns, as always, but hitherto they have gained no decisive advantage, each of their attempts being paid for with heavy loss of life.

"I find the morale of the Russians unimpaired. They are fighting in the same stubborn, determined manner, while the situation as regards the supply of ammunition and rifles is materially improved and the fate of Dvinsk and the whole line along the Dwina River is undecided.

"The capture of the city will be effected only by heavy sacrifices. In the meantime the town has been evacuated in the same orderly manner seen at Warsaw, and if the Russians ultimately leave, the Germans will occupy the same empty shell as in their former victories.

"The nature of the country here is ideal for defense, and undoubtedly the Germans are paying two to one in losses. It is not apparent why the Germans attach so much importance to this sector; but if they are willing to pay the price they possibly can take it.

"A large proportion of the population of Dvinsk has fled. The evacuation was started by the German habit of dropping bombs, which killed many civilians.

"The character of the Russian defense is improving every week, and if the outside world thinks the Germans are driving this army before them, it makes a gross mistake. If the Riga and Dvinsk sectors are typical of Russian rearguard operations, their nature is such as should cause more depression among the Germans than among the Russians; and with Winter approaching and no important objective attainable before the season changes, I believe the German commanders must now recognize a growing anxiety."

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Representatives of the Chicago packers will confer here tomorrow with State Department officials over the judgment of the British prize court confiscating $15,000,000 worth of their products. Acting Secretary Polk will see legal representatives of the packers, who are expected to ask the Government to intercede with the British authorities by diplomatic negotiations.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—Henry Veeder, attorney for Swift & Co.; M. W. Borders, representing Morris & Co., and C. J. Faulkner of counsel for Armour & Co., left here today for Washington to confer with Acting Secretary of State Polk over the British seizure of American meat cargoes.

SWISS GOODS RELEASED.

France Agrees to Allow Clothing Shipments to Come Through.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—The trade advisers of the State Department were notified today of the release by the French Government of shipments of clothing and embroidery from Switzerland for United States. These goods were held up pending guarantees that they were of bona fide Swiss origin, and would not find their way to countries at war with France.

A small quantity of dyestuffs consigned to American importers from Switzerland still is held up in France, but negotiations for release are expected to be concluded soon.

SHELLING GERMAN PROVISION ROUTES

French Guns Trained on Roads Leading to Metz—Wreck a Railway Bridge.

ARTILLERY DUELS CONTINUE

Arras Suburbs Again Bombarded—London Experts Look for a Winter of Trench Fighting.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The bombardment with heavy guns has become mutual in the west, both sides maintaining an almost continuus fire, while the British fleet is making matters lively for the Germans on the Belgian coast. There are no signs as yet of a general offensive, however, and another Winter in the trenches may be looked for as assured.

The French report that they have damaged German trenches in the region east of St. Mihiel and have brought their guns up to positions from which they can shell certain routes in the neighborhood by which the enemy has been transporting supplies.

The night communiqué from Paris says:

In Artois our batteries have carried out a sustained fire against the German organizations. The artillery of the enemy has displayed anew very great activity, and, in particular, has bombarded with shells of heavy calibre the suburbs of Arras.

Before Faye and Dompierre, to the southwest of Peronne, mine warfare continues. There has been fighting with bombs in the region of Roye.

In Champagne the efficacious fire of our batteries was responded to by the enemy at the end of the day by a bombardment of our cantonments, which did only small damage.

Between the Aisne and the Argonne the cannonading has abated. In Eastern Argonne, at Hill 285, the enemy exploded a mine in proximity to our trenches.

In the Woevre we have at several points been able to examine the results of our fire. A column of infantry and its train have been dispersed on the road from St. Maurice to Thillot, at the foot of the Meuse Hills.

In the region of the Calonne Trench, in the Forest of Apremont, to the north of Flirey and to the north of Regniéville the enemy works have sustained grave damage.

Our long-range artillery has hit station at Thiau Court. A train quickly left the station, while another train was stopped by the projectiles.

Between Puzieux and Delme we have cut a small bridge on the railway between Metz and Château Salins.

In the Vosges artillery actions have occurred in the valley of the Fave and in the Valley of the Fecht, in the region of Schratzmannele, Altmatt and Brauenkopf.

The text of the French afternoon communication follows:

In the Artois district our artillery last night delivered a violent bombardment against the works of the enemy and interfered with their provision trains. The German batteries showed particular activity in the environs of Arras and on the front along the Crinchon River, where the cannonading was accompanied by a spirited rifle fire and outbursts from the machine guns.

The firing of the enemy was also fairly well sustained in the regions of Foucaucourt, Herleville and Tracy-le-Val, and brought out an energetic response from our side.

In front of Fontenoy the Germans on several different occasions opened with infantry fire, but they did not come out of their trenches. The vicinity of Berry-au-Bac last night saw fighting with bombs, artillery, and rifle firing. On the canal between the Aisne and the Marne we took possession at a point to the east of Sapigneul of a German listening post.

In the Champagne district our artillery replied to a bombardment of our positions to the north of Camp de Châlons and checked the fire of the Germans' heavy artillery. To the north of Perthes a depot of munitions within the enemy's lines was blown up.

Between the Aisne and the Argonne district the artillery of the enemy maintained its activity during all last night; this fire was answered with energy.

In Lorraine our batteries continued their destructive fire upon the works of the enemy, and brought into their field certain routes by which the enemy has been securing provisions.

In the vicinity of Ban de Sapt. French field artillery dispersed a detachment of German pioneers.

The official statement issued from Belgian General Headquarters tonight says:

The night of Sept. 19-20 was calm. Today was marked by artillery actions, few in number, and generally of slight importance.

Following is the German official statement issued from Berlin:

Enemy ships which bombarded Westende and Middelkerke, on the Belgian coast, without result, withdrew before our fire. Some of these ships were struck.

Along the front there were no special incidents.

ALSATIANS FORCED TO FIGHT

Germans Say French Impress Them and Forge Citizenship Papers.

Under the caption, "Forgery of Alsace-Lorraine Civil Certificates by the French Government," the semi-official Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung of Aug. 24 publishes what purports to be an order signed by the French Minister of War, M. Millerand, dealing with the forced enlistment of men of Alsace and Lorraine in the French armies and the providing of them with false certificates of French civil citizenship as a protection against punishment for treason in case they are captured by the Germans.

The German official paper says:

"The order published in facsimile herewith and issued by the French War Minister Millerand to the authorities subordinate to himself in connection with the treatment of men of Alsace and Lorraine who are found in the service of the French Army, has been found upon French prisoners. From this it appears that the residents of Alsace and Lorraine, who, as is generally known in Germany, are pressed with all means into the service of the French Army, are divided into two categories.

"The first category consists of those men of Alsace-Lorraine who do not wish to fight against Germany. They are thrust into the French regiments in Africa. In the second category belong those Alsatian-Lorrainers who have declared themselves ready to fight against Germany. The French Government is not in doubt of the fact that the enlistment of such persons, who are German subjects and whose naturalization in France cannot be recognized according to German laws, is a violation of international law. It knows that these residents of the imperial crown lands, in case they are captured, will be regarded as traitors to their country and will be treated accordingly by Germany.

"The order of the French War Minister says, among other things:

On the other hand, it has seemed necessary to me to take steps to safeguard the Alsatian-Lorraine volunteers and their families against German measures of reprisal. I have therefore decided that those Alsatian-Lorrainers who have been enlisted for the duration of the war and sent to the army shall receive a pretended certificate of civil status which shall make it appear that the interested parties are Frenchmen. The recruiting office which has enlisted them shall have possession of the genuine certificates of civil status. As a result of this the competent recruiting commandants will take care that there shall be handed out to them another book and another mark of identification. The genuine book will be sent to the recruiting commandants and preserved by these.

"From this order it appears clearly what low methods the French Government resorts to in the use, contrary to law, of the German captives from Alsace-Lorraine."

French Navy Honors Romazzotti.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—Victor Augagneur, French Minister of Marine, will name the newest French submarine model Romazzotti, after Naval Constructor Romazzotti, who died on Saturday last. He carried on and developed the work begun by Gustave Zede, inventor of the first French submarine, Dymnaote, who died in 1890.

LIFTS RUSSIAN EMBARGO.

Agreement Releasing Exports Goes to Lansing to be Signed.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—A special messenger was dispatched today by the State Department to Secretary Lansing at his Summer place on Lake Ontario with the agreement for lifting the Russian embargo against exports to the United States. After Secretary Lansing has signed the agreement, it will be carried to Newport, R. I., to be signed for the Russian Government by Ambassador Bakhmeteff. The agreement will become operative immediately.

Under the agreement Russian exports to the United States will be released if consigned to the American Secretary of Commerce, and if Russia receives satisfactory guarantees that the goods will not reach her enemies.

STEAMER HORDEN SUNK.

Crew of the British Vessel Reaches Land Safely.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The British steamer Horden has been sunk. The crew was landed.

The Horden was a vessel of 1,434 tons. She was built in 1906, and was owned by the Burnett Steamship Company of Newcastle.

NAVY BALLOON SOON READY.

First of Dirigible Fleet Will Undergo Official Tests at Pensacola.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—The first of the navy's fleet of dirigible balloons is now practically completed, and will be ready for delivery within a few weeks. The Connecticut Aircraft Company, which has the contract for building these dirigibles, today notified the Office of Aeronautics of the Navy Department that the balloon will be ready for the official trials within the time specified.

The various parts will be assembled in Boston, after which the machine will be disassembled, packed and shipped to the navy aeronatutic station at Pensacola, Fla., where the trials are to take place. The navy is building a floating hangar and a hydrogen plant at Pensacola for the accommodation of its dirigibles.

This first of the navy's war balloons, while it is a comparatively small one, being about 180 feet long, will embody the improvements which American naval officers have noted during their observations with the armies of Europe. It will be equipped with a 140 horse power engine and twin propellers of the swivelling type. For military reasons, some of the improved features of the machine are kept scret. The Administration's program for the national defense, to be submitted to Congress this Winter, will call for a large number of dirigibles and aeroplanes.

GALLIPOLI FIGHTING FIERCE AND DEADLY

Gen. Hamilton Describes How the Allied Forces Wrested Ridges from Turks.

FRENCH AND BRITISH MIXED

Little Ground Gained Covered So Thickly with Dead That Armistice Had to be Arranged.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—How the British and French hrough the Summer kept at grips with the Turks in Gallipoli, with terrible losses on both sides in the arid, congested area, where the gain or loss of a few yards of trenches measured the tide of battle and the dead lay so thick that a temporary armistice was imperative, is related by General Sir Ian Hamilton, Commander of the British forces, in a dispatch to Lord Kitchener, made public in London this evening.

Covering the fighting in the Dardanelles from May 5 to July 1, the account sheds little light on the general military situation, being mainly noteworthy as a soldier's description of what the contenders endured. Indirectly it pays a tribute to the gallantry and fighting qualities of the Turks. General Hamilton gives no support to the numerous newspaper reports that the morale of the Turks had been shaken.

Going back to May 5, soon after the Allies obtained their first footing on the peninsula, General Hamilton relates how the commanders, hard-pressed for reinforcements, found it necessary "to mix the French and British troops "to an extent even of the French on our right having a British battalion holding their own most extreme right."

Three Days of Terrible Fighting.

Followed then three days of terrible fighting, with Krithia as the objective.

"The steady advance of the British," says the General, "could be followed by the sparkle of bayonets until the long lines entered smoke clouds. The French at first made no move; then, their drums beating and bugles sounding the charge, they suddenly darted forward in a stream of skirmishes, which seemed for a moment to cover the whole southern face of the ridge of Kereves Dere.

"Against these the Turkish gunners turned their heaviest pieces, and, as the leading groups stormed the first Turkish redoubt, in black bursts high explosive shells blotted out both assailants and assailed.

"The trial was too severe for the Senegalese Tirailleurs. They recoiled; they rallied. Another rush forward; another repulse. Then a small supporting column of French soldiers were seen silhouetted against the sky as they charged upward along the crest of Kereves Dere.

"Not until next morning did any reliable detail come of what had happened. The net result of the three days' fighting had been a gain of 600 yards on the right of the British and 400 on the left and in the centre. The French captured all the ground in front of farm Jimmerman, as well as the redoubt."

The German leaders of the Turks were quick to realize the advantage the attackers had gained, General Hamilton continues, and by counter-attack after counter-attack tried to wrest away the trenches they had lost.

"Everywhere our assailants were repulsed," says the account, "and now for the first time I felt that we had planted a fairly firm foothold upon the point of Gallipoli Peninsula."

This was on Aug. 10, and General Hamilton was able to relieve some of the exhausted men on the firing line after eighteen days and nights of uninterrupted fighting.

"During this breathing space," says General Hamilton, "I realized that we had now nearly reached the limit of what could be attained, mingling initiativewith surprise. The enemy was as much in possession of my numbers and dispositions as I was of his first line of defense. The opposing forces stretched parallel from the sea to the strait, and there was litle scope left for tactics which would bring fresh battalions against the lines of unbroken barber wire. Siege warfare was soon bound to supersede manoeuvre battles in the open."

In preparation for this, the British commander tells of how he divided the front into four sections, then describes the fitful fighting up to May 18, when the Turks made a most violent assault on the British positions with forces estimated at 30,000 under command of the German Field Marshal, Liman von Sanders, himself. But the British held firm, leaving upward of 3,000 Turks dead within open view of the trenches.

Burying the Dead.

"The next four days," the account says, "were chiefly remarkable for carrying through negotiations for the suspension of arms, which actually took place on May 24.

"On the May 20 white flags with red crescents began to dot the Turkish lines. Presently a Turkish staff officer and two medical officers met a British officer between the lines. An informal armistice was reached and stretcher parties on both sides began collecting the wounded.

"Meanwhile it was observed that columns were on the march in the valley up which the Turks were accustomed to bring reinforcements. As evening drew on, the enemy's concentration continued, and a message was sent stating that no clearing of the dead and wounded could be allowed during the night. The stretcher parties fell back, and immediately firing broke out."

It did not profit the Turks, General Hamilton asserts, as the British guns drove them back. But as the Turks were anxious to bury their dead, and as human sentiment and medical scence were in favor of the removal of the dead, arrangements with a representative of Essad Pasha were finally effected.

"The negotiations resulted in a suspension of arms from 7:30 A. M. to 4:30 P. M.," continues the report. "The burial of the dead was finished at 3 P. M.. Some 3,000 Turkish dead were removed or buried in the area between the opposing lines. The whole of these were killed on or since May 18."

General Hamilton fails to state how many British were buried, but says that both sides observed the ethics of the situation to the letter.

Feverish intermitten fighting during the remainder of May is described, culminating in a general attack on the Turkish positions on June 4, which netted a considerable gain, but was a costly affair.

"From the date of this battle to the end of June," the British commander says, "incessant attacks and counter-attacks, which so grievously swelled our lists of casualties, had been caused by the determination of the Turks to regain the ground they had lost—this determination clashing against our firm resolve to continue to increase our holding.

"Several of these daily encounters would have been the subject of a separate dispatch in the campaigns of my youth and middle age, but with due regard to proportion, they cannot even so much as be mentioned here.

Difficult Land for Fighting.

"During the whole period under review the efforts and expedients whereby the great army had its wants supplied upon a wilderness have, I believe, been breaking world records. The country is broken, mountainous, and void of supplies. The water found in the areas occupied by our troops is quite inadequate to their needs. The only practicable beaches are small, sramped breaks in impracticable lines of cliffs. With the wind in certain uarters no sort of landing is possible.

"The wastage by the bombardment and wreckage of lighters and small craft led to cries after cries in our carrying capacity, while over every single beach plays fitfully throughout each day devastating shell fire at medium ranges.

"Upon such a situation appeared suddenly enemy submarines. On May 22 all transports had to be dispatched to Mudros for safety. Thenceforth men, stores, guns, and horses had to be brought from Mudros, a distance of forty miles, in the fleet sweepers and other small and shallow craft less vulnerable to submarine attack. Every danger and every difficulty was doubled."

CANNON FOR RESERVE ARMY.

Favors Force of 100,000 Men, to Cost $60,000,000 a Year.

DANVILLE, Ill., Sept. 20.—Addressing several hundred veterans of the Spanish-American war at a reunion yesterday, Congressman J. G. Cannon advocated a reserve army of 100,000 men, to cost the nation $60,000,000 a year. His plan is to send the first reserve two-year volunteers to camp for a month each year. These men then will go into the second reserve, and two years later into the third reserve.

The pay of the soldiers, Mr. Cannon proposed, should be $250 a year. The only drilling would be during the month at camp.

WOULD PAY NATIONAL GUARD

One Way to Facilitate Preparedness, Chairman Hay Points Out.

Suggestions that one way to improve the national defense would be to pay every National Guardsman at least $50 a year out of the Federal treasury, and that the field artillery force ought to be doubled, were made by Representative Hay, Chairman of the Couse Committee on Military Affairs, in an interview made public yesterday by the National Security League .T he interview was obtained by a representative of the league.

Mr. Hay does not believe that Congress will favorably consider any legislation looking to compulsory military service. He regards the development of the National Guard into an effective reserve force as the wisest step and would encourage enlistment by giving guardsmen 25 per cent. of the pay allowed for the regular army. He is particularly impressed with the importance of the work done by the field artillery, but does not mention coast artillery because that feature of defense is under the jurisdiction of the Fortifications Committee.

"I shall be guided in large measure by the President's views," he said. "Our present standing army is allowed by law a strength of 100,000 men. About 91,000 are actually enlisted. The army now costs us $120,000,000 a year. The full strength of the army at 120,000, in addition to pay given the National Guard, would cost us $140,000,000. If we had 140,000 men, we would have to spend $160,000,000. If we had an army of 500,000 men, which some people advocate, it would cost us $700,000,000. It do not believe that the people would want that burden or that they would expect Congress to impose it upon them. Neither do I believe that the American people want compulsory military service.

"I heartily agree with the President that our citizen soldiery should be given more attention. It might be proper, for instance, to encourage enlistment in the National Guard by paying its members 25 per cent. of the amount paid to regular soldiers, which would be $50 a year and which would probably cost us $8,000,000 additional to the present army cost for the first year. It may be wise, also, to increase the field artillery, now consisting of six regiments, to twice that number, as the war in Europe has demonstrted that this is a most potent arm of the service."

BRITAIN SEIZES COCOA TRADE

Her Exports of Tobacco, Oil, and Rubber Also Grow Enormously.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Strange things of perhaps international significance are happening in the cocoa trade, according to a special report received at the State Department from Consul General Robert P. Skinner at London. The United States has heretofore enjoyed a large trade in this staple in Northern Europe. New York City alone usually takes the raw cocoa crop of Santo Domingo and markets it in Europe.

This year it seems that Great Britain is doing this on its own account, and the American trade has disappeared. Mr. Skinner quotes the statistics of Great Britain's cocoa trade with the Baltic countries to show that where England, a year ago, had no trade at all in this line, that country now has practically a monopoly.

In March 1914, England shipped no raw cocoa to Denmark, but this year in March there were 1,642,000 pounds shipped there from England. In April, last year, England shipped to Denmark only 1,555 pounds, but this year, in the same months, she sent there 685,336 pounds. To Norway, in March last year, England shipped 21,687 pounds of cocoa, and in March, this year, she shipped 276,388 pounds, while in April she shipped 194,705 pounds to Norway, as compared with 12,586 pounds in April a year ago. To Sweden England shipped in March, this year, 492,647 pounds of cocoa, where she shipped in the same month, last year, but 10,562 pounds; and in April, this year, she shipped there 1,150,746 pounds, as compared with 16,500 pounds in the same month last year. To the Netherlands there was shipped in March, this year, 1,532,970 pounds of cocoa, while in March, last year, the British shipment was 496,616 pounds, and in April, this year, the shipment was 1,867,126 pounds, while in April, 1914, the shipment was but 290,884 pounds.

Mr. Skinner says, where exportation from this country to the smaller neutral countries of Northern Europe is attended with difficulty and hazard, all similar goods are going forward from England without trouble. In cocoa, for example, England shipped into these countries, he says, during July, 7,039,067 pounds without any difficulty, whereas in the same month of 1914 her entire export of cocoa was only 1,283,585 pounds.

In tobacco England is doing an enormous business, according to Mr. Skinner. The exports in July were 6,664,880 pounds, as compared with 351,809 pounds in the same month of 1914. England shipped, in July, to Russia 235,918 centals, as compared with 43,529 centals in the same month of 1914; to Sweden, 27,879 centals, as compared with 4,667 last year; to the Netherlands 54,509 centals, as compared with 4,636 centals. The same thing is being done to a large extent in petroleum, lubricating and lamp oils, and in rubber.

hit was swept thirty-five feet by the concussion of the air, and knocked unconscious.

"It was calculated that the bomb weighed between 600 and 700 pounds, and was about the size of one of those big milk cans that are used for shipping.

"I heard of one bomb that did not explode. On it was painted, in white, 'We are coming every night this week!'

Bombs Did Freakish Things.

"Being in company with an English chemist, I was allowed to get through the lines the morning after the raid, and I found the bomb that struck in the Close did some freakish things, or rather its explosion did. As I said, the front of the buildings did not seem to have been touched, the windows having been forced in by the concussion of the air. But some of the floors had fallen in, and a big oak door in the interior of the building had been burst from its hinges. An iron drinking fountain thta stood only eight or ten feet from the fire shelter had not been hit, but had cracked into pieces. I spent an hour and a half studying the effects of the explosion there. While the Germans have kept the nature of their explosives secret, I should guess that the bomb might have contained a mixture of nitro-glycerine and dynamite, though there are several other high explosives that would have had a similar effect.

"There must have been 3,000 or 4,000 shots fired at the aircraft by the guns, and the shrapnel from they may have caused loss of life in London itself. One of them, on the Embankment, was only 350 yards from where I stood part of the time.

"The whole thing was over in fifteen or twenty minutes. It was dark. I remember that as we reached the crowd that stood near the scene of one of the explosions I heard one Englishman remark, 'They're nahsty things, aren't they?'

"The day before I had seen some of the effects of the Zeppelin raid of Tuesday night over New Cross, in Woodpecker Street, where eight persons had been killed. One of the bombs missed the Woolwich Arsenal by not more than fifty yards.

"A week before the big raid I was at the aviation headqaurters at Aldershot and saw something of the air equipment of the British forces. The defensive arrangements of London seem to be pretty much like those of Paris, so far as aeroplanes are concerned. Within a few minutes after a Zeppelin leaves Antwerp or Zeebrugge word is received in England, and an air fleet gets ready. Of course, after the hostile craft have got above London the aeroplanes dare not pursue them, because of the danger from the British gnus."

Mr. Fowell added:

"It is evident to any one who studies the situation in England at short range that the labor element is running the country, and they are doing a lot of muddling. The Germans have got the cards stacked. Even now they don't realize in London that their country is really at war. Thoughtful Englishmen have admitted to me as much. The encouraging thing from the British standpoint is the numbe rof German submarines that have been 'accounted for.' The number captured or destroyed is bigger than is thought over here. I heard that the total was seventy."

Mme. Aino Malmberg's Story.

Mme. Aino Malmberg, the well-known Finnish patriot, Socialist, and feminist leader, was another passenger who reached New York on the Philadelphia yesterday. She has made her home in London for the past seven years. She loves London and its people, but she has come away to escape what she calls the "unworthily autocratic attitude" of the Government. Mme. Malmberg is opposed to all war, and says she will not return to England while the present conflict lasts, but she does not expect to remain in this country a year.

"I have it from one of the highest men in England—shall I say the highest?—that the war will be over at the beginning of the year," said Mme. Malmberg. "This was said at a private meeting of friends, and I had it directly from one of them, a very close friend of the speaker." Mme. Malmberg went on:

"And people are terrified by these Zeppelin raids. How can it be otherwise? The news is kept from them as much as possible, but they know how many friends they have lost. At first, of course, it is all excitement. I know how it is myself, and you have only a feeling of interest. The raid lasts only about twenty minutes, but then, when you see the damage that is done, you realize what a terrible thing it is. A bomb strikes a house, and it is gone. The bomb in Queen's Square struck in the middle. It could hardly have been more exact if it had been measured. That is a place about as large as Gramercy Park, surrounded by big hotels and hospitals, the Homeopathic and one other hospital. From the force of that bomb every least bit of glass was knocked out of every one of those big buildings, not a piece was left, and great holes were made in the walls.

"From the bomb that fell on an omnibus the driver literally disapeared. He was not there. Later they found one arm which had a uniform sleeve upon it, and they knew it must have been his, but that was all that was left of him. One bomb fell in the middle of the road and went through almost to the Underground, but the police closed up around it immediately, so as to prevent people from seeing the real damage that was done and becoming frightened.

"Why, my little flat in which I live in London, and which I rent when I leave there, had been engaged, but after the Zeppelin raid the people said: 'No, the top floor! We could not take that!'

"There is great indignation in London because the real news is suppressed. The actual numbers killed are not given, or the places. It is foolish, for the Germans know. They are informed by their agents to the smallest detail. The people are treated like children. I love England and the English people, and it hurts me from the bottom of my heart—this system that is being introduced. I am a Finnish woman, a subject of Russia, and all the leters sent me are first handed over to the Russian Embassy, to see if there is anything to which the Russian Government would object. I could not stand it. To think England, the freest of all the countries, should do this! In Rusia it is different, for there you expect it, but not in England. The English people are dignified and levelheaded. They could stand anything. There is no reason for keeping the truth from them.

"The sadness of England is terrible. Hyde Park, which is usually a scene of gayety and beautiful costumes, has now only black gowns and sad faces, and at a dinner it is the same. All are in black gowns. Every one has lost friends, and every one is sad.

German Protester in Jail.

"The people whom I condemn most in this war are the handful in each country who have said that war was murder and that murder was wrong, but who now make no protest. They should shriek aloud against this war. My friend, Clara Zetkin, a leader of the Social Democrats in Germany, has done that, and she is in prison. I have been terribly disappointed in the Socialists. I am a Socialist, and the foundation doctrine is that of brotherhood. I was naïve enough to believe that the Socialists would stand up against war. But here they are murdering their brothers, and we are losing the youngest and best and finest of our men.

"The churches preach against murder, and what do they do? They bless the cannon and urge the men to fight. Religious people say they believe in the commandment 'Thou Shalt not Kill.' But the Church has always betrayed her principles. And the woman? They should be the first to protect their children."

Mme. Malmberg thinks the United States should make an effort to arrange peace. She said:

"There are a number of people in England—not nobodies like me, but important people—who believe that something could be done if President Wilson would ask the different countries to define their terms of peace—ask them what they want and what they are fighting for. The Pope has tried to do this, but he presents a religious sect and would not be generally accepted. What are they fighting for, and who is responsible for the war? All the countries have been preparing for this for years. In all of them you would hear people speak of the time 'when the big war comes!'"

Mme. Malmberg is exiled from Russia for her fight for liberty for Finland, and the conditions prevented her from visiting her native country, but she has been in Christiania and Stockholm. "Norway is pro-ally," she said, "and Sweden is pro-German, or, rather, anti-Russian."

MBme. Malmberg will speak on Finland while she is here. She was one of the leaders among those who obtained autonomy for Finland. "Finland is in a terrible condition now," she said. "They have taken our autonomy away from us, and the laws which the Czar had promised that he would respect, and they may interfere with our use of our own language."

Isaac F. Marcosson, who was with Haddon Chambers at the St. James's Theatre in London on the night of the Zeppelin raid, as Mr. Chambers told in his wireless message to THE TIMES, arrived yesterday on the Rotterdam. He said that Mr. Chambers had well described the incidents of the night, and that he had no details to add.

"As far as frightening England goes," Mr. Marcosson said, "the raid was a failure. The people are not greatly concerned over any of the raids, realizing, as they do, that the geratest damage that is likely to result is the destruction of a few houses and the killing of a few unarmed people. England is Zeppelin proof in its financial soundness."

Mr. Marcosson brought with him a "Zeppelin mask," which, he said, is to be found on sale in any London drug store. It is a rubber cap, with an isinglass opening for the eyes, and contains a sponge saturated with chemicals. The chemicals are to neutralize poisonous gases, such as were contained in bombs dropped in some of the earlier raids. Many residents of London have the masks hanging over the head of their beds when they go to sleep, Mr. Marcosson said.

Frederic R. Coudert, the well-known international lawyer, who returned on the Rotterdam after a two months' trip abroad with his wife, said that on Sept. 8 they had been dining at Sir Philip Burne-Jones's house in Egerton Terrace, South Kensington, when, at 11 P. M., the explosion of Zeppelin bombs was heard overhead.

"We rushed to the street," Mr. Coudert continued, "and stood upon the pedestal of a double lamp post to get a better view. Austin Chamberlain, the Secretary of State for India, arrived three minutes later. Searchlights were playing on the Zeppelin, which remained stationary for fully six minutes. The anti-aircraft guns were blazing away, but failed to hit it. The fire was slow and the aim poor, and the guns were not nearly as good as the new French anti-aircraft guns which have recently been tried in Paris. Afterward the Zeppelin traveled past Charing Cross toward St. Paul's Cathedral, dropping bombs on Wood Street."

S. M. Kahn and S. M. Levy, New York business men who were passengers on the Rotterdam, said they were at the corner of Tottenham Court Road, near Oxford Street, on the night of Sept. 8 and saw two Zeppelins coming from the direction of Charing Cross, dropping bombs which could be seen as they passed through the light from a searchlight.

"Next morning we went to Wood Street, where the fire was still blazing," Mr. Levy said, "and every pane of glass had been shattered within a radius of half a mile. The streets were guarded by police, so that the people could not get too close. The biggest blaze on the preceding night was in Pathé's moving picture plant, where the fire in the rubber could not be kept under. As the flames spread from floor to floor the celluloid burst with loud explosions and flamed up, lighting the waters of the Thames like a Summer's day. With the searchlights playing across the red glow of the fires it was a magnificent spectacle, and all London turned out to see it.

"We were told that a motor 'bus had been destroyed in Blomfield Street, sixteen persons being killed in it. That street was from four to nine inches deep with shattered glass.

Thomas W. Pelham, a Boston merchant, who arrived on the Rotterdam, was at the London Hippodrome when the explosions started on Wednesday night, Sept. 8, and started immediately to walk two blocks to Trafalgar Square to get a view of what was going on.

"There I saw a big German aircraft," he said, "almost right overhead and motionless, as if daring the anti-aircraft guns on the Admiralty Arch to hit it. Another Zeppelin appeared, and the two started dropping bombs, which exploded with a terrific noise. One struck a motor omnibus, I was told, and killed twenty persons. Spectators were menaced by falling fragments from the anti-aircraft guns, and also the shrapnel from the bombs. It was like a weird firework display.

"The roof of a business building near by was pierced by a bomb which did not explode, and the owner had the fuse extracted next day and placed in his window as a souvenir. When the Zeppelins traveled eastward over the city some of the bombs narrowly missed hitting the Lord Mayor's residence and the Bank of England."

Mr. Pelham said that he had heard from an American official in London that one of the Zeppelins had been brought down by two British aeroplanes as it was starting seaward.

Frank C. Page, son of the Ambassador to the Court of St. James, was also on the Rotterdam. He said he had been told that between thirty and forty persons had been killed in London by the raid on Sept. 8.

Watched a Big Warehouse Burning.

W. O'Donnel Iselin was another arrival on the Rotterdam. He said he was walking in the streets near Charing Cross when he saw a Zeppelin coming and heard the explosion of two bombs which did much damage. He and his companion got into a taxicab and told the driver to follow the course of the Zeppelin, but the police had barred the road. Then they drove to Wood Street and watched a big linen warehouse blazing up.

Alfred Turner, a London theatrical manager, was at the Ambassador' Theatre at the time of the raid on Sept. 8. He said the bombs so alarmed the French chorus girls that they ran out into the street dressed as angels, carrying wands in their hands. Next day he went to the Liverpool Street Railway Station, which is a block wide and two deep, and found that every window had been shattered by the explosions of the previous night, including the great glass roof.

H. Gordon Selfridge, the American department store owner of Oxford Street, London, was a passenger on the Philadelphia. He was a witness of the Zeppelin raids. They produced a minimum of destructiveness and effectiveness for a minimum of cost, Mr. Selfridge said, adding:

"The night raid on London on Sept. 8 was a great spectacle—that's all. The big balloon was hovering over the city at something less than a mile high. Bombs were bursting, anti-aircraft guns were firing, flames were spouting up over various parts of the east side of the city, and there was some confusion among persons wishing to get cabs to ride to points of greater vantage from which to view the spectacle. There was no terror or panic that I saw, and the whole thing was over in ten minutes. People stood and watched the Zeppelin under the rays of the searchlights, and I heard that about 100 persons had been killed in various parts of the city. It is said that a shot hit the raider, which suddenly disappeared upward after a bombardment of less than a quarter of an hour."

Alexander McNab, a retired British naval officer and an investor, who makes his home in Bridgeport, Conn., who was on the Orduna with his wife, said he saw the Zeppelins over the West End of London on Sept. 8, and believed that one of the two was hit by a gun, because it tilted on end and went straight upward until it was lost to view. Next day he drove to Wood Street and found the fire still burning. Mr. McNab described the hole made by the bomb which destroyed the motor bus in Oxford Street as thirty feet in diameter and eight feet deep. He had heard that the killed numbered seventy and the injured 125.

Miss A. S. Tatham of Sydney, Australia, another Orduna passenger, said that she saw the nocturnal spectacle from her room in the Victoria Hotel, Charing Cross. The searchlights lit up the Zeppelin, and it was fascinating to watch the shells bursting all around it. Next day she saw a tenement house that had been split in two by a bomb, while the windows of the Ophthalmic Hospital had all been shattered by the explosions.

Miss Ethel B. Davis, head nurse at Bryn Mawr College, was in a crowd outside the Lyric Theatre when the first explosion was heard. She said it created a panickyy feeling among the people for a few minutes until they could spread out, because they thought the bombs would fall upon them. Many of them rushed to get taxicabs, but there were not enough to go round.

Saw the Fire from the Ritz.

Miss Johanna Glortigen, who made the round voyage on the Rotterdam, landing at Falmouth and going to London, said she was at the Ritz Hotel in Piccadilly at the time of the Zeppelin visit, and ran out of the restaurant with other guests to see what was happening. The searchlights lit up the sky like day, she said, and the firing of the guns in all directions added to the excitement She added:

"From where we saw the big Zeppelin it appeared to be coming from near the British Museum over St. Giles's Church to Piccadilly Circus, then down the Haymarket, past the theatres, to Charing Cross. From there the Zeppelin steered almost a straight course along the Strand and Fleet Street to St. Paul's, and was lost behind the big dome. We could still hear the bombs dropping in the distance, and from the roof of the hotel the blaze of the fire in Wood Street could be seen leaping above the old-fashioned houses."

F. J. Caramanna of New York was at supper in the Carlton Hotel on Sept. 8 when he heard a crash and went out and looked up. "There," he said, "was the Zeppelin floating above, and the mark for every anti-aircraft gun for a mile around. The shots all fell short of the Zeppelin. The marksmanship of the gunners seemed very poor."

Mr. Caramanna went on to say that one interesting feature of the raid on Sept. 8 was that it commenced apparently at Highgate, then attacked the most aristocratic neighborhood in London near Piccadilly, then moved to the middle of the ancient City of London, where a warehouse was burned, and finished in Shoreditch, in the East End of London, destroying tenement houses and killing the inmates, who were about the poorest class of people in London.

H. Granville Barker, the English playwright, who arrived on the Rotterdam, said:

"The Zeppelin raids are the most perfect stupidity of the war. They cannot frighten even the children. A Zeppelin does as much damage as a runaway. They have to fly so high that they cannot pick out any definite object at which to aim their bombs."

Mrs. Marton Hedinger, wife of an English automobile manufacturer, who arrived on the Philadelphia with her son, Talbot, said she had seen the three latest eZppelin raids, and had then decided to come over and join her husband, who is here on business. She was at the theatre on the night of Sept. 8 ,and took a taxicab to her home in the north of London. When she arrived she found a bomb had exploded in her front garden, scattering over the surrounding ground fragments of tulips, roses, geraniums, carnations, and holly, in addition to making a very large hole. Every window had been shattered.

BULGARIA ANGERS ALLIES AND BALKANS

Is Mobilizing Macedonians Before That Territory Actually Has Been Ceded to Her.

MAY GET ANOTHER NOTE

Reply to Earlier Note of Quadruple Alliance Demanded "at Earliest Possible Date," Paris Hears.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—Dispatches from Sofia, Bulgaria, announcing the mobilization there of troops made up of residents of Macedonia, have caused another complication to be introduced in the Balkan situation, which already was tense, through the presentation by the Entente Allies of the joint note requiring Bulgaria to define her attitude.

The mobilization of Macedonians has caused surprise and indignation in official and diplomatic circles here, as it is declared that the whole purpose of the present negotiations between the Allies and Bulgaria and Serbia is to determine whether Macedonia belongs to Bulgaria or Serbia. That Bulgaria should mobilize Macedonians while the future of Macedonia was still at issue is declared in the highest Serbo-Greek quarters to be an affront to the Allies and the other Balkan States. One of the legations that is taking part in the negotiations outlined the situation today as follows:

Bulgaria demanded from Serbia the re-cession of Macedonia as an essential condition to Bulgaria's joining the other Balkan States and co-operating with the Entente Allies. The latter took up Bulgaria's claims and presented them to Serbia in joint notes. Serbia, after mature consideration, yielded to the desires of the Allies and conceded virtually nine-tenths of the territory in Macedonia demanded by Bulgaria. The only portion of Macedonia not conceded was a small section which was considered essential to Serbia's military defenses, but these concessions of Macedonian territory were made in order that Bulgaria give something in return, namely, her co-operation with the Balkan States and the Allies. The Allies therefore handed Bulgaria a joint note last week reciting Serbia's concessions of nine-tenths of the disputed Macedonian territory, and in effect asking Bulgaria what she purposed doing as a result of the concessions.

Now, however, the diplomatic outline continued, before giving an answer, Bulgaria assumes that she is master of Macedonia, and begins the mobilization of Macedonian residents—that is, she assumes control of Macedonia before stating what she is willing to do for the Allies in return for such control. This, the diplomatic authority pointed out, gives the situation a new phase, which may call for another note from the Allies in addition to that of last week, asking an explanation of the Macedonian mobilization at the moment when the Allies are negotiating terms by which Bulgaria may secure the recession of Macedonia.

It is understood that the Allies' joint note of last week was accompanied by a verbal request to M. Radoslavoff, the Bulgarian Premier, for a reply "at the earliest possible date."

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Friday, Sept. 17, (via London, Sept. 20, Delayed in Transmission.)—Leaders of the Opposition have obtained from King Ferdinand assurances that Bulgaria is absolutely free from any obligations to either of the belligerent groups and that the fullest attention is being given by Bulgaria to the proposals of the Triple Entente and central powers alike. This, in addition to being the wish of the Opposition, also is the desire of the general public.

The Opposition leaders were assured that the Government had absolutely no intention to rupture the pourparlers which are still going on with both groups of belligerents and that the Government would not undertake anything without studying the situation carefully and without consulting Parliament. At a propitious moment, it was added, a national coalition Cabinet would be formed. These two measures—the consulting of Parliament and the formation of a coalition Ministry—are the main objectives of the Opposition leaders.

The result of the conference between the King and the leaders is considered in competent circles here as having been entirely satisfactory.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Sept. 19, via Berlin to London, Sept. 21, (Delayed in Transmission.)—The Narodni Prava, the Government organ, discussing the conference between leaders of the Opposition and King Ferdinand, says:

"The leaders of the Opposition did not behave properly in the presence of the King."

Concerning the conference the Opposition organ says:

"We are unable to give a comforting report on the audience. The Government is going its own way, instead of the national way."

ATHENS, Sept. 20.—Advices received here from diplomatic sources are to the effect that freight traffic has been suspended on the Bulgarian railroads since last Saturday.

Forty-five thousand Bulgarians in Macedonia and Thrace have been called to the colors.

The leader of the Agrarian Party in Bigaria is declared to have threatened King Ferdinand with a revolution if the alleged Germanophile policy of Bulgaria was continued. The King is reported to have replied that the Government was pursuing the policy which best served Bulgaria's interests.

CALLS LLOYD GEORGE MAN OF THE HOUR

Isaac F. Marcosson Describes the Gigantic Task Performed by the Munitions Minister.

HAS CENSUS OF RESOURCES

British Industry Mobilized as Never Before and All Classes Now United for Victory.

Great Britain's mobilization of her industrial forces for war purposes, her financial soundness, and a new spirit of democracy, born of the willingness of rich and poor alike to make sacrifices of both blood and money, are the most impressive phases of the war as seen by Isaac F. Marcosson, a magazine writer, who returned here yesterday after several months' study of British financial conditions.

Mr. Marcosson has talked with many of the English bankers and with Lloyd George, Minister of Munitions, on whose shoulders, he says, the whole hope of the war is resting. The most amazing thing about it all, according to Mr. Marcosson, is England's unconcern, which, he thinks, has been misinterpreted as apathy by many, when in fact "it is just the British way of bucking up."

"The making of munitions is the biggest thing of the war today," Mr. Marcosson said to a TIMES reporter. "Lloyd George has built up a powerful organization. He has brought to his aid the best engineers in the country. English industry has been mobilized as never before. The only shortage of men is in the cotton districts. The great Midlands are one great beehive of industry. The factories there are running twenty-four hours a day.

Census of Resources.

"One of the most important services of the new Minister of Munitions is the taking of a census of all resources, not only of materials and of the industrial output, but also a national registration, showing what every man, woman, and child can do. Lloyd George's department has a record of every scrap of iron, and it is all available for war purposes.

"The Government has built thirteen great factories and has bought another. Beside those there are hundreds of controlled factories. The method of dealing with the controlled factories is this: The Government goes to the owner of the factory and says: 'Your output is so many shells a day. The Government will take them all and give you a fair profit.' War has the first call on industry, whether it is making shells or making shoestrings.

"One mistake of the war is in sending many skilled workmen to the front. Conscription will prevent all that. It will not only give England munitions, but will provide fo [illegible] continuance of her industries after the war.

"As far as Great Britain is concerned, this is a money-is-no-object war. She is not only the richest of the nations at war, but she has made extraordinary financial preparations. The big thing that impresses me is her extraordinary soundness, her financial integrity. Money is plentiful, wages are higher, and labor is scarce.

"Up to several weeks ago England had never learned the use of wallets. Formerly she carried her money around in gold. Now she is using paper money currency and hoarding her gold. The ingenuity of the country is now being taxed to find wallets. The bankers are determined to see the war through at whatever cost, and the nation is adjusting itself readily to the enormous war cost.

The Collapse of Exchange.

"The collapse of exchange was a great surprise to England. The average man could not understand why sterling exchange had fallen so low in New York, while there was so much money on hand in England. There never would have been any exchange complications, except for the procrastination of the British Government.

"The sacrifices of the rich, not only in money but in blood, is making a new feeling of the masses toward the classes. Bankers, capitalists, and employers are sending away their sons to fight in the trenches. From some families whom I visited four or five sons had gone to war, in many cases the sole heir of some great banking or industrial leader had gone away. After the war a great problem will be to find new leaders to take the places of those who were the natural successors to leadership, but who have fallen in battle."

During his stay in England, Mr. Marcosson collected from Sir James Barrie, Sir Arthur W. Pinero, Sir James Alexander, and Haddon Chambers many facts relative to the earlier part of the life of Charles Frohman. Mr. Marcosson is collaborating with Daniel Frohman on a life of "C. F.," whose death, Mr. Marcosson said, was regarded in London as an irreparable loss ot the drama.

CANADIAN LABOR INTERESTED.

Conscription Likely to be Discussed at Trades Union Congress.

VANCOUVER, Sept. 20.—The possibility of conscription in Canada will probably receive attention from the Canadian Trades Union Congress, which convened here today. P. M. Draper, Secretary of the congress, said that while the question was not on the set program, it would probably be considered along with other questions in which labor might be affected by the European war.

Among topics to be taken up were the proposed eight-hour day, Workmen's Compensation acts in various provinces, fortnightly payment of wages on all railways, and proposed amendments to the Federal Elections act.

BRYCE ASKS US TO AID ARMENIA

Says That All the Christians in Trebizond, Numbering 10,000, Were Drowned.

WOMEN SEIZED FOR HAREMS

Only Power That Can Stop the Massacres Is Germany, and We Might Persuade Her to Act.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Viscount Bryce, formerly Ambassador to the United States, has sent to The Associated Press a plea that America try to stop the slaughter of Armenians. He says:

"The civilized world, especially America, ought to know what horrors have been passing in Asiatic Turkey during the last few months, for if anything can stop the destroying hand of the Turkish Government it will be an expression of the opinion of neutral nations, chiefly the judgment of humane America.

"Soon after war broke out between Turkey and the Allies, the Turkish Government formed, and since has been carrying out with relentless cruelty, a plan for extirpating Christianity by killing off Christians of the Armenian race. Accounts from different sources agree that over the whole of Eastern and Northern Asia Minor and Armenia the Christian population is being deliberately exterminated, the men of military age being killed and the younger women seized for Turkish harems, compelled to become Mohammedans, and kept, with the children, in virtual slavery. The rest of the inhabitants, old women, men, and children, have been driven under convoy of Turkish soldiers into unhealthful parts of Asia Minor, some to the deserts between Syria and the Euphates. Many die or are murdered en route, and all perish sooner or later.

"In Trebizond City, where the Armenians numbered over 10,000, orders came from Constantinople to seize all Armenians. Troops hunted them, drove them to the shore, took them to sea, threw them overboard, and drowned them all—men, women, and children. This was seen and described by the Italian Consul.

"Some in the country escaped by professing to accept Islam, and a quarter of a million escaped over the Russian frontier, but perhaps half a million were slaughtered or deported, and those deported are fast dying from ill-treatment, disease, or starvation. The roads and the hillsides are strewn with corpses of innocent peasants.

"We can all try to send aid to the miserable refugees now in Russian territory, but what man can stop the massacres? Not the allied powers at war with Turkey. Only one power can take action for that purpose. It is Germany. Would not the expression of American public opinion, voicing the conscience of neutral nations, lead Germany to check the Turkish Government?"

FORCE BELGIANS TO WORK.

German Authorities to Punish Those Who Refuse.

Compulsory labor in Belgium under German Administration is announced in the following dispatch of the semi-official Wolff Telegraph Bureau from Brussels, published in the Vorwärts of Aug. 26:

"The Governor General has issued an order by which every person is made liable to punishment who refuses without sufficient ground to undertake or to continue work consonant with his professional activity in the public interest, and demanded by the German authorities.

"Likewise persons will be punished who through coercion, threats, or persuasion, or other means, hinder other persons in work for the German authorities or give assistance to them so that they may refuse to work.

"In connection with the regulation measures are also ordered concerning aversion to labor, and it is ordered that whoever refuses to accept work, although he receives public or private support, or by reason of his refusal to work becomes destitute and in need of assistance, shall likewise be punished. A sufficient ground for refusal will be considered if based upon international law."

NEW WARSHIP SOON TO SAIL.

Britain About to Send Dreadnought to the Dardanelles.

Officers of the Cunarder Orduna reported yesterday that the superdreadnought Barham, a sister ship of the Queen Elizabeth and Warspite, whose keel was laid in 1913, soon would be commissioned and leave for the Dardanelles. The Barham is fitting out at Liverpool, and it is expected will be ready in six weeks.

In telling of the war-time activities of well-known ships the Orduna's officers said that the Cunarder Aquitania had been painted white, converted into a hospital ship, and had just left Liverpool for the Dardanelles to bring home the wounded soldiers, and the White Star liner Olympic, which had been laid up at Belfast since last October, also was being fitted out as a hospital ship in Southampton to operate with the Aquitania. The liners can carry about 7,000 soldiers each and make the voyage in five days. The Cunarder Mauretania is carrying troops to the Dardanelles.

SUGGESTS PEACE MOVE.

Ex-Mayor McClellan Would Have a Concert of Neutrals.

Ex-Mayor George B. McClellan, who returned with Mrs. McClellan yesterday on the Rotterdam from a six months' visit to the belligerent countries of Europe, praised the course taken by President Wilson in the negotiations between this country and Germany. He said:

"With every other patriotic American who has seen with his own eyes the horrors of war, I am most grateful to the President of the United States for his patriotism, wisdom, and firmness in preserving not only our neutrality but also our national honor. While yielding nothing of the interests of this country or of its dignity, he has steadfastly refused either to be forced or stampeded by England or France into a war which could not possibly yield either credit or profit.

"I believe even more firmly than when I went abroad that it is our duty, without regard to politics or sympathy for or against either side, to stand behind the President in his difficult task to preserve to the end of the war a neutrality which is one in fact as well as in name.

"It is deplorable that so many Americans have openly and violently taken sides as to have created the impression abroad that our position is one of non-belligerency rather than of neutrality. It is much to be feared that, acting alone, our infuence for peace is negligible. Nevertheless, as the greatest neutral nation, it is still possible for us to unite with our fellow-neutrals in behalf of peace. Were we to organize all the neutral nations, alrge and small, and include his Holiness the Pope, we could undoubtedly secure the hearing of the belligerents, and would have a fair chance of bringing the war to an end."

of secrecy. Qf its contents I had absolutely no knowledge. It was in a small, sealed envelope, without special seal, however, and, owing to the open manner in which it was publicly handed me, I supposed, of course, that it simply referred to my work. I feel that the very openness of the manner in which the letter was given me shows that Dr. Dumba had no inthention of using me or my passport as a shield for the transmission of any improper letters, but, knowing personally that I was sailing, simply aviled himself of the opportunity of having his note delivered direct.

Papers in a Safe-Deposit Box.

Last year, when I went abroad, I was compelled to land at Plymouth, England, when the copper on the ship was seized, and had to proceed through London to Holland. Anticipating that it would be embarrassing at this time to carry and German-written letters recommending me to German officials through England, I placed most of my papers in the ship's safe-deposit box, intending to leave them should it be again necessary to proceed overland through England. I saw no reason, nor do I know now, why, because the Rotterdam called at Falmouth, I had not the right to have my German-written papers in my possession or was subject to arrest when I was a through American passenger on a neutral vessel, with no intention of landing in England, or even going ashore.

I did not consciously break either the spirit or the letter of my passoptr or of any law, but merely did what every traveler crossing the ocean does, by carrying notes or small packages as an accommodation to friends, just as I did when I returned from Germany last year, when I carried several letters and official dispatches to our State Department for Ambassador Gerard and packages for Mrs. Gerard and others. Of course, in doing this for Ambassador Gerard, I did it simply as a matter of friendship, precisely as I carried the letters in this case.

I regret the affair, not so much on my own account as on account of the far-reaching consequences to friends, especially Dr. Dumba. The letter to Baron Burian, whom I have known several years, was, as already stated, given me so openly that I thought it related merely to my work in the field. I was in no sense a "courier" for any belligerent, and am positive that all concerned will bear out this statement.

My ounsel, Frank J. Hogan, Esq., of Washington, has called my attention to an interview telegraphed from Rotterdam via London. The major portion of the interview is quite correct, but the last paragraph has obviously been added and manufactured out of whole cloth. The sentence added to the end of the dispatch says:

"I am the victim of the cunning method of the Austrian and German Embassy officials in making me the bearer of an inciriminating document."

And it quoted me as saying that I had been tricked into carrying this letter by these officials. As I have never had any reason to suspect any such thing, I wish emphatically to deny the use of any expression of that kind. I do not think that I was the victim of any trickery, nor do I believe that any official of either embassy acted in any way except in the best of faith.

JAMES F. J. ARCHIBALD.

Mr. Archibald, after consulting Mr. Hogan, consented to tell the story of his dentention by the British authorities and the seizure of the Dumba letter and other documents.

Story of His Detention.

"When the Rotterdam arrived at Falmouth," he said, "several British officials came on board and asked me if I was carrying any dispatches to Germany. I replied that I was not. Then they asked if I had given any document or anything else to the purser of the liner, or to any other person on the ship to keep for me. As I had not I again replied in the negative. I was then asked if I had a safe deposit box on the ship, and when I replied that I had they demanded of me the key to the box, which I handed over.

"Four officials searched the cabinet, in which I had a large package of letters, for the most part introductions to persons in Europe, given me for the purpose of facilitating my work. Among these letters was the one from Dr. Dumba to Count Burian. They left the ship, taking all the letters as well as the packages, and the accompanying notes for the wives of Count von Bernstorff and Prince von Hartzfeldt.

"In about two hours the officials returned to the Rotterdam and told me I would have to accompany them ashore. They were very courteous and considerate, and said I might bring any part or all of my baggage, if I desired. Although I was subsequently locked up, I want to say that the British authorities treated me with every possible courtesy and consideration.

"I only took a hadbag with me when I went ashore. I was taken to the police station and detained for about thirty-six hours, and had to spend the night in a cell, a discomfort that the authorities later profusely apologized for subjecting me to. When I realized the position I was in I telephoned to Ambassador Page in London and also to Consul General Skinner at Plymouth, the latter an old personal friend of mine.

"After about thirty-six hours an order came from London ordering my immediate release. I remember the 'immediate' part of it because one of the officers commented upon that phase of the order. The order was that I should proceed to Ramsgate, where the Admiralty was holding the Rotterdam for me, and to facilitate in every way possible my journey to the place of re-embarkation. On my arrival at Ramsgate a naval launch, under command of an officer of the Naval Reserve, was waiting for me, and I was taken to the Rotterdam, which was anchored about an hour out from the Downs.

Halted at Rotterdam.

"At this time I thought everything had been straightened out and that there was to be no more trouble. At Rotterdam Minister Van Dyck setn for me and informed me of his instructions to take up mypas sport and to issue another, an emergency one, for my return direct to the United States. Minister Van Dyck said thath I could stay in Holland as long as I plesed, but that when I left I would have to return to America. As I wanted to come back and straighten out this matter I told him I woul dreturn on the first ship, and that ship was the Roterdam."

"Count von Bernstorff has been quoted as saying that you repeatedly offered to carry anything he wished to Europe, and that he declined the offer with thanks. Is that statement true?" Mr. Archibald was asked, the question being based on a recent statement attributed to the German Ambassador, who has repeatedly stated that Archibald bore no letters from him.

"One night at dinner," Mr. Archibald answered, "the occasion, I think, being the birthday of the Austrian Emperor, I asked Count von Bernstorff and Prince von Hatzfeldt if they had anything they wished me to take to Europe for them. The night before I sailed two packages were declivered at my hotel, one from the Ambassador and the other from Prince von Hatzfeldt. One was a clock for Mme. Bernstorff and the other a cut glass bonbon dish for Princess von Hatzfeldt. Two notes, one from each of the givers to his wife, accompanied the packages. I am sure both notes were harmless. However, they were seized by the British authorities, but I was permitted to deliver the gifts to the German Minister at The Hague."

"How do you think the British found out you were carrying a message from the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador?"

"I imagine they were tipped off by some agent who saw Dr. Dumba's messenger deliver the letters to me at the gangplank of the Rotterdam, the day I sailed. The messenger, who was Dr. Dumba's Secretary, handed me the letter and said Dr. Dumba desired it delivered to Count Burian. He handed me the letter, and he did not speak in a whisper when he handed it to me. As for the contents of that letter I had no more idea than have you of the contents of that letter you see on the desk there. Yes, the letter was sealed, and I thought, as I explained in my statement, that it was a courtesy to aid me in my work in Europe. I certainly would not carry a letter from Dr. Dumba o ranyone else if I knew it contained anything detrimental to the interests of my own country."

"Don't you think that Dr. Dumba played you a very mean trick, to say the least, in taking advantage of your friendship to burden you with such a communication."

Has Confidence in Dumba.

"I don't think Dr. Dumba intended in anyway to place me in an improper position," erplied Mr. Archibald. "I do not think he realized what the outcome might be."

"Dr. Dumba, in his letter to Secretary Lansing published in THE NEW YORK TIMES of Sunday, states that it is a habitual practice on the part of many Americans to act as messengers between this country and European belligerents. Da you know whether or not that is so?" Mr. Archibald was asked.

"Perhaps it is," he answered.

"Also, Dr. Dumba is said to have remarked that he did not understand why you did not destroy the letter before the British could get it."

"Why should I have done so? I did not know that there was anything unneutral in it."

"Have you been questioned by any other representative of the Government today besides Chief Flynn?"

"I have not."

"Do you anticipate any trouble as a result of all this?"

"No, I do not."

Mr. Archibald said that probably he would go to Washington today and that as soon as he arrived there he would communicate with the State Department. He said he was ready to tell all that he knew about the Dumba affair or any other affair, of which he might possess any knowledge. Throughout the interview Mr. Archibald was very calm and cool.

No Decision as to Archibald.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—At the Department of Justice it was said today that no definite decision had been reached regarding James F. J. Archibald. The United States District Attorney in New York, it was said, had not been instructed to interview Mr. Archibald. It has been understood that Mr. Archibald ultimately would have a talk with Secretary of State Lansing, but Mr. Lansing is now out of town on a vacation.

At the Department of Justice, where the evidence in the Archibald case has been studied, no explanation was forthcoming tonight of the questions asked by Secret Service Agent Flynn regarding a gold-headed cane supposed to have been given to Archibald before he started on the trip to Europe that cost Ambassador Dumba his post. It was said at the department that the cane never had been heard of by that department.

'HANDS OFF' PLEA MADE FOR MEXICO

Calero and Magon Address Latin American Members of Pan-American Conference.

ARRAIGN WILSON'S POLICY

As Based Upon False Assumption That Warring Factions Are the Mexican People.

JEALOUS OF SOVEREIGNTY

South Americans Asked to Persuade Washington to Abandon Its Program of Practical Intervention.

THE TIMES presents herewith excerpts from a memorandum presented to the Ambassadors of Brazil, Argentina, and Chile and the Ministers of Bolivia, Uruguay, and Guatemalt, by Manuel Calero, the last duly accredited Ambassador of Mexico to the United States; and Flores Magon, who was Secretary of the Interior in the Cabinet of the late President Francisco Y. Madero of Mexico.

In this document, which was not presented to Secretary Lansing, the American member of the Pan-American Conference, Señor Calero and Señor Magon, on behalf of the business and professional men, farmers, artisans, &c.," of Mexico, protest against a recognition on the part of the United States and the South and Central American countries of either the Carranza or Villa factions, or of any faction representative of the Huertistas. They appeal to the Latin American diplomats as men "in whose veins flows the same blood as in our own" and argue that the only wise course to pursue with regard to Mexico is one of "hands off."

The Mexican policy of President Wilson is arraigned, and Mexico is declared to be a country without government and one whose people are starving. The memorandum, which was transmitted to the envoys in Spanish, as translated by Señor Calero, is in part as follows:

Senor Calero's Translation.

Memorandum respectfully submitted by the undersigned Mexican citizens to their Excellencies the Ambassadors of Brazil, Argentine, and Chile, and their Excellencies the Ministers of Bolivia, Guatemala, and Uruguay.

1. Mexico is a country that loves its independence dearly. Any act which implies the slightest encroachment upon the national sovereignty is keenly resented by the Mexican people. General Huerta exploited this sentiment both skilfully and perfidiously in order to prolong his hateful dictatorship, which would have come to an early end had it not been for the openly hostile attitude assumed toward it by the American Government. * * *

It has bee a mistake to say that the movements at present convulsing Mexico are the efforts of a people fighting for freedom. It is not the people who are under arms, nor are they supporting the factions. No case is known of a whole nation committing suicide; nor of the man who lives by tilling the ground laying waste his crops, slaying his work animals and building a pyre of his farm implements; nor of the humble schoolmaster dynamiting his school house; nor yet of the artisan destroying his tools. What we are witnessing is not a revolution. There was a revolution when Carranza disavowed the Huerta usurpation; but the revolution ended over a year ago with the flight of the usurper and the disbanding of the army which kept him in power. * * *

Washington's "Twofold Error."

2. The United States Government has incurred the twofold error of confusing the factions with the people, and of believing that complete accord exists between the tendencies of the rebels and aspirations of the nation. Hence the aid rendered the former has not redounded to the benefit of the latter, but has brought about results wholly contrary to those sought. * * *

When a "Constitutionalist" General wilfully wrecks the electric cars of the Federal district and throws out of employment at one swoop 3,000 motormen and conductors, is there any one who would hold that these 3,000 families, thus forced to face starvation, belong to the oppressing classes?

When another "General" dynamited foundries and smelters, was the victim the foreign companies who own these establishments—who will later, through the aid of their Governments, collect heavy indemnities—or the thousands of workmen and their families who were thus left destitute?

When a Carranza Minister closed by a stroke of the pen all the schols of the Federal District, from the primary departments to the Faculties of the National University, throwing into want thousands of teachers, both male and female, did he try by this to punish the Cientificos?

Not a Popular Revolution.

And so we might multiply these examples. We could make a long and detailed list of acts of indescribable cruelty, of vandalic outrages which the "oppressors" as well as the submerged 80 per cent. have had to undergo, after the triumph of the revolution. This revolution, called "Constitutionalist," has not been made by the people, but by the enemies of the people. Its intellectual leaders are old and corrupt dregs of the Porfirian régime, whom President Wilson, ignorant of the past, on one occasion called leaders that "prefer the liberty of their people to their own ambitions." The militant elements of the revolution are the 15,000 or 20,000 criminals that have had the prisons thrown open to them and now form part of the ranks of the Constitutionalists; the Yaqui soldiers, savage and bloodthirsty Indians, who dance to the tune of their tambourines around their dying comrades; the improvised "Generals," several of whom are fugituves from justice, ferocious and uncultured men who, like the famous Francisco Villa, are personally guilty of thefts, the outraging of women, kidnapping, and murders. * * *

Washington's "Mexico of Fancy."

4. Without taking into consideration the ethnical elements of our population and the sociological factors that have determined the course of its history, a Mexico of fancy has been invented, that is very far from the real Mexico. In support of our statement and as an example of decisive importance, let us recall certain principles set forth by the Government of the United States at the time of the Niagara Falls conferences. It was then stated that in Mexico there were two parties—Huertistas and Constitutionalistas—and that it was "necessary to assume that every intelligent man of any prominence is at heart on one side or the other," and therefore "the country might well question the patriotism of any Mexican who has been colorless in such a contest." (Declarations made to the press by the delegates of the United States the 18th of June, 1914.)

We must rectify the foregoing statements, that have formed the foundation for the mistaken policy of the United States in regard to Mexico. The truth is that with the exception of some reactionaries and clericals the majority of the men of "intelligence and prominence" in Mexico abhorred the Huerta régime, founded on treason and murder, and supported by violence, as much as the anarchial and destructive methods of the revolution. Contrary to what the Government of the United States believes, Huerta was not the product of a party, nor did he represent any party, for, strictly speaking, there are no political parties in Mexico. * * *

Four Classes of Mexicans.

5. Mexicans at the present time could be classified as follows:

I. The reactionaries, who look for the restoration of a dictatorship, maintaining as its economic standard privilege and monopoly, and as its political standard the suppression of liberty.

II. The Carrancista, Villista, Zapatista, &c., revolutionaries, whose characteristics are well known.

III.—The so-called "middle-class," composed of the professional and business men, small farmers, clerks, artisans, &c., and tht workmen from the factories. All these elements represent an important group, which sincerely wish the establishment of a political system of order, justice and liberty, based upon the Constitution, which shall pledge itself to solve the great problems of national education and economic betterement, including the so-called agrarian reform, the solution of which would mean the redemption from illiteracy and misery of eight million human beings.

IV.—These latter, who compose an essentially passive group, whose happiness was the aim of the revolution, as asserted by several.

The third group is the most important, because it represents the best elements of the country. The American Government seems either to have forgotten its existence, or to have incorporated it in the first group, that of the hateful reactionaries.

We deduce the above statement from the fact that the second group seems to be the only one called upon to organize the future Government, under the auspices of seven countries of this continent.

We are not able to understand how, if the President of the United States charges, and rightly so, this second group with the responsibility of the frightful state of anarchy and misery prevailing in the Republic, he attempts now to convert it into a Government, unless it is accepted as true the mistaken understanding of the American Government in stating, through its delegates to the Niagara Conference, that the "Constitutionalists" compose a national party, representative of a large body of citizens, and that this party defeated another, to which the balance of the population of Mexico joined and was controlled by General Huerta and the irresponsible soldiers which carried out his crimes. Furthermore, if the fate of the country is solemnly delivered to the revolutionary factions, it would mean tht the seven intervening countries have lost sight of the fact that the revolutionists represent only 1 per cent. of the population, and that the remaining 99 per cent. abhor them.

Demands Unimpaired Sovereignty.

The foregoing exposition does not purport to request the conference of plenipotentiaries, called by the Secretary of State of the United States of America, to consider the interests of all Mexicans, and not only the interests of the factionists. What we wish, what we most respectfully request from the worthy representatives of the six countries, our brothers in blood, who take part in that conference, is a resolution which shall safeguard the sacred principles of the sovereignty of Mexico. None of those countries can consider herself exempt from future upheavals nor from more or less lengthy and intense periods of social disturbance; none of them can accept the fateful precedent that foreign countries should arrogate to themselves the right to decide upon the number of parties into which other countries should be divided, on what side are the interests of the people, and to which party should assistance be given and which antagonized. * * *

7. It is our understanding that the Pan-American plenipotentiaries initiated their work under the impression that all the factions would agree to accept the invitation tendered them; but the situation is different, since the most powerful of them—that headed by Venustiano Carranza—seems to be about to refuse to co-operate. It is wholly natural that the Villa faction, dishonored by the crimes of its chief, lacking financial backing, and beaten militarily, should be ready to accept anything. The same attitude was observed by the Mexican Conservative Party, when, after the triumph of the Liberal Party in 1860, it besought Napoleon III. to undertake the military occupation of the country and the suppression of the republican form of Government. Political passion, aroused to white heat by the sting of defeat, does not stop before the worst excesses.

In such a situation, this effort must be abandoned, unless the idea were to hold the conference with the co-operation of the least powerful factions; but this we conceive to be impossible. We are confident that the moral influence of seven self-respecting republics cannot be thrown into the scales in favor of the Villa faction, headed, as it is, by a criminal whose hands are soiled not only with Mexican blood, but with English, Spanish, American, and Argentinian as well. Furthermore, after accepting the invitation of the seven powers, Villa engages in a frightful massacre of political prisoners, banishing the widows and orphans of his victims from the country to live as charges on the public charity in the United States! * * *

8. We can see no possible solution of Mexico's difficulties in the scheme now advanced by the United States Government with the co-operation of six Latin-American republics. Some of these allowed the spirit guiding their international relations to be seen in their refusal to recognize a Government of such spurious origin as that of Huerta; but the United States Government has gone further, and has even manifested its purpose to recognize no political régime in Mexico which does not conform to the constitutional provisions of the country. * * *

In his special message addressed to Congress on Aug. 27, 1913, President Wilson said:

Leave Mexico to Her Own Misery!

The question will naturally be asked: What do we recommend to save our country, whose situation of terrible anguish we cannot deny? The answer is obvious: leave Mexico alone, abandon her to her own endeavors, to her own misery, to her own misfortune. Had this been done the present crisis would already have been passed. Have the words of the Indianapolis harangue forgotten? "The country is theirs, the Government is theirs." The laws of nature, by virtue of whose untrammeled function peoples ever find their true adjustment, have been powerless to do their work in Mexico, because their exercise has been hampered by a foreign and disturbing element. Is this, we ask, the first crisis of anarchy through which Mexico has passed in her ninety-four years of independent life? We do not deny that this crisis is the worst of all, but it is dut precisely to the disconcerting influence of American intervention. Having some knowledge of our history, of the medium in which it has developed, and of the ethnical and social elements of our population, we can affirm that it will suffice the sole effort of the Mexicans to restore a régime of order and law, and to take up the serious problems without whose solution Mexico will never succeed in redeeming herself, neither from the clutches of oppressing dictatorships nor from the anarchy which saps the life-blood out of the country. What is needed is that this effort should be allowed to take its course freely.

Not Charity, but Justice.

President Wilson, touched by the piteous spectacle of millions of men, women, and children suffering the pangs of starvation in Mexico, addressed a short while ago a pathetic appeal to the American people to bestow the blessings of their charity upon our unfortunat country. What is needed, however, the only thing its people demand, is that justice be done them, that they be allowed the opportunity to oust those who, thanks to the protection of the American Government, have been able to arm themselves and continue arming themselves to prey upon the helpless population. The factions would cease to be a scourge if the act of the United States Congress prohibiting the exportation of munitions of war were rigorously administered. It will thus be seen that we are not making any extracagant demand. * * *

Appeal to Latin-American Envoys.

Our purpose has been set forth. It is to solicit respectfully from those in whose veins flow the same blood as ours, whose history is also the same, and who can hence appreciate the depth of our tribulation, to be good enough to exert their influence with the Government of the United States, so that it may desist from its present policy toward Mexico and abandon its purpose of setting up a Government which, by reason of the elements with which it is proposed to organize it and on account of its being a product of foreign intervention, is doomed to failure. The worthy plenipotentiaries whom we have the high honor of addressing, will earn the gratitude of all Mexicans if, inspired in a noble sentiment of justice and Latin-American solidarity, they should succeed in having the United States adopt toward Mexico a policy of absolute nonintervention and complete impartiality.

Each Candidate for District Attorney Says He Can Win.

District Attorney Perkins spoke at Republican clubs in the Fourth, Sixth, Eighth, and Tenth Districts on the east side last night and said in part:

"Tammany has been kept out of the office of the District Attorney for the past fifteen years and again would be beaten decisively for that office if the fight were only between two candidates. But with the three-cornered fight that is on in this election, I think the election will be very close, and that if I am elected, as I believe I will be, it will be because the majority of the citizens will not consent to Tammany rule and will express that opinion on primary day.

"I have nothing personal against Mr. Moss, but he has done nothing that he has not been paid for, and he could have got out any time he cared to and there were plenty of other men who would have filled his place."

Frank Moss addressed two meetings uptown in the Twenty-third District, at the Republican Club, 2,005 Amsterdam Avenue, of which Colin Woodward is President. Mr. Moss said:

"I worked for the Republican Party when Mr. Perkins was in knickerbockers. I have taken my politics as I have my church, expecting nothing from it but satisfaction to my conscience. I have not run for offices, but I have pushed other men into them. I have always stood by the organization through thick and thin. To nominate Mr. Perkins would be to throw the game to Tammany Hall deliberately. I know that I can beat Tammany if any one can."

HOPE OF RECOGNITION INSPIRES MEXICANS

Carranza and Villa Factions Redouble Efforts to Prove Supremacy.

ZAPATISTAS AGAIN ACTIVE

Said to be Threatening Mexico City While Villa Tries to Crush Obregon in the North.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—With the prospect of foreign recognition dangled before them as a possible reward, the rival revolutionary factions in Mexico, according to information reaching Washington today, are either planning to capture the prize or to prevent a rival from obtaining it. The announcement of the Pan-American Conference on Mexico in New York City last Saturday to the effect that the time has come for the "recognition of any provisional Government with the material and moral capacity necessary to protect the lives and property of nationals and foreigners" has spurred both the Carranzista and the Villista factions to activity.

The Pan-American conferees studiously refrained from stating which faction would be recognized under the rule adopted on Saturday. The prevalent impression in Washington is that the Carranzista Government will be recognized some time in October, if that faction can preserve or improve its present status. That the Carranzistas interpret the announcement of the Pan-American conferees as "looking toward the early recognition of General Carranza's Government" was made plain in bulletins issued from the Carranzista Agency here today, saying that Carranzista money had advanced in value at Vera Cruz on the strength of the announcement made by the Pan-American diplomats.

There is no concealment of the fact that the Villistas are chagrined over the sudden shift in the attitude of the United States and of the Latin-American Governments toward the Mexican situation during the past week. They will now endeavor to demonstrate that they are as much entitled to recognition as is the Carranzista faction, and, that the latter is able to present no better showing of "material and moral capacity," than they themselves. They will endeavor to convince the Washington Government that the Carranzista military successes in the north are more apparent than real, that General Carranza has stripped other portions of Mexico of troops in order to make an artificial display of strength for the purpose of creating the impression that the Carranzaista faction is rapidly gaining control over all of Mexico.

At the same time it is understood to be the plan of the Villa forces to endeavor to strike body blows at the Carranzaistas at two points—in Chihuahua and Mexico City. General Zapata is being counted upon to endeavor to render Mexico City untenable for the Carranzaistas commanded by General Pablo Gonzales, while General Villa, who asserts that he has sufficient men and ample ammunition, will try, during the next three weeks, to outgeneral and crush General Obregon's army in the north.

The report was current in Washington today that Villa's followers here and on the border, in a desperate effort to block the recognition of Carranza, had started a boom in behalf of General Alvaro Obregon, General Carranza's Chief of Staff, for Provisional President. At the Carranza Agency, in the State Department, and Villista circles the talk of Obregon assenting to such a compromise agreement at this time is ridiculed. Nevertheless, there are, and for some time there have been, Mexicans and others interested in Mexican affairs here who have regarded the name of Obregon as one with which to conjure in seeking the solution of the Mexican problem.

The State Department received information today which shows unusual activity by the Zapatistas, on the basis of which this announcement was issued:

"For about two weeks there has been considerable fighting around Mexico City. The Carranzista garrison at Chalco, a suburb of Mexico City, is reported to have been almost wiped out. Passenger service between Mexico City and Vera Cruz has been cut down to one train each way every third day. There are conflicting reports as to the reasons for curtailing the service. There are reports that there is serious depletion of rolling stock. However, the authorities in Mexico City state that it is due to plans to bring in food supplies from Vera Cruz."

The Carranza Agency issued a statement tonight asserting that the food situation in Mexico City had been greatly relieved and claiming many adherents to their cause. The statement also said:

"A group of fity professors, members of the Corps of Education of the Mexican Government, will be sent to the United States on a tour of investigation and instruction as to the American methods of public school organization next month. The group of professors followed the Constitutionalist Government of Mexico when it evacuated the national capital many months ago. Their tour through the United States will be extensive, and they will sail from Vera Cruz on board the Ward Line steamer Mexico on Sept. 30. The party will arrive at Boston on Oct. 13."

commission at a reception in the club rooms this afternoon.

Buyers of foreign exchange took heart yesterday from statements that the credit arrangements would probably be completed soon. Purchases on a fairly heavy scale in the morning carried sight bills forward from $4.67¾, Saturday's closing figure, to $4.71¼, after which business grew lighter, and the quotation gradually sagged back to $4.70⅞. London sable remittances sold as low as $4.69¾ and as high as $4.71¾, closing at $4.71½. In the absence of new developments on the credit during the day, exchange dealers were inclined in the late trading to limit their dealings to as small a volume as possible.

Credit Urged as a Necessity.

Dr. E. E. Pratt, Chief of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, gave some interesting figures on this country's foreign trade in a speech delivered at the annual convention of the American Investment Bankers' Association in Denver yesterday. He said:

"It is only through the investment of capital that foreign trade can be secured and held. If the United States is serious in her desire to develop foreign trade, she must lend, she must invest, she must buy foreign securities. If the facts which I have already stated are even approximately true, the United States has no immediate choice other than to invest abroad. Her only choice lies in the exact location of those investments in foreign countries. The total excess of exports over imports as estimated on the basis of the last few months, indicate a total for the fiscal year 1915-16 of $1,400,000,000. These figures indicate that we have created assets abroad amounting to at least $900,000,000, and we must invest that amount abroad if we are to keep the exchange dates anywhere near normal. Only the slightest tax on our domestic profits will be necessary in order to considerably enlarge othe amount of our exports of capital.

"It is also worth while for us to stop and consider whether or not in making our loans to the European nations, and in making loans which are to be used almost wholly for destructive purposes, is an economically sound principle for us to follow. Please do not misunderstand me. I am not criticising or objecting to loans which are being made to the European countries.

Threats Against Banks.

"I am merely raising the query as to whether or not it is a sound economic principle for us, as a nation, to loan our money to our best customers to enable them to destroy one another, when we might at least be using a portion of that capital to develop those countries which, although now not our best customers, are likely to become very good customers. I realize perfectly that under the present circumstances it is not a question of whether we want to loan money to Europe or not. At present we have no alternative. We must loan money to Europe in order to keep our foreign trade moving and in order to permit us to realize the largest possibilities of the present situation."

Jeremiah O'Leary, President of the American Truth Society, addressed a telegram yesterday to "Sir Rufus Isaacs, care of J. P. Morgan & Co.," in which he asked what assurance it was proposed to give American investors that when the Anglo-French joint notes fall due Great Britain will not tender Confederate bonds in part payment. He said his society would organize bank depositors against the loan.

Charles A. Oberwager, attorney for the National Labor Peace Council, also announced that he was starting a campaign against the bankers' syndicate formed to handle the big credit.

J. J. HILL URGES CREDIT.

Insists It Is Necessary to Save Americans from Disaster.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 20.—In a statement issued tonight James J. Hill said that the proposed credit of $500,000,000 to $1,000,000,000 to England and France would be made and that it would in no way incroach upon our neutraltiy.

"There is no doubt that the loan will be made to a total not less than $500,000,000," he said. "The whole amount of this credit will be used to pay for purchases of grain, cotton, and provisions in this country. No part of it whatever will be used for munitions of war, and it is probable that such arrangements will be made as will largely insure the spending in each district of the money contributed in that district. In this way there cannot be the slightest disturbance in our domestic finances.

"I find that men of differing sympathies in this war and differing financial ideas approve heartily of this loan, as they appreciate the reasons why we should make it. On its face, it is a grant of credit to Europe. In reality it is a new use, compelled by circumstances, of the cash and the credit of this country to avert disaster from our most important industries and to promote our own prosperity. Its greatest benefits are to come to the people of the United States.

"Take the case of our wheat as an example. Reliable estimates of the wheat crop of the world and of the probable demand show that England will require about 240,000,000 bushels for next year, France 85,000,000, and Italy 75,000,000, a total of 400,000,000 bushels. The common assumption that they must come to us for this on our own terms betrays ignorance of the situation. The same estimates show that Canada will have a surplus for sale this season of 175,000,000 bushels, Argentina 180,000,000, Australia 60,000,000, and India 50,000,000, or a total of 414,000,000 bushels. The Allies' demands could be satisfied without taking a bushel from us.

American Farmers Menaced.

"Exports are paid for on the basis of the pound sterling. With Canada, Australia, and India London exchange is at par. A pound will buy its face value of wheat. But when exchange in New York went recently to $4.50 for the pound that meant a difference of over nine cents a bushel. If it should go to $4, as it might if nothing is done to stabilize exchange, it would mean about twenty cents a bushel on wheat. Either the European buyer would have to pay that much more in our market by the depreciation of exchange or our farmers would have to take that much less. Since Europe has opened the other sources of supply mentioned, it is not difficult to see that we should be left with our crop on our hands.

"We require about 550,000,000 bushels for home consumption and seed. That would leave us a surplus of nearly 450,000,000 bushels. The total world's demand outside of England, France, and Germany is not to exceed 150,00,000 bushels. If it was all brought here, we should still have to carry over 300,000,000 bushels. Add that amount to next year's surplus, and even if we cut our wheat production in two it would require two or three years' to work off the surplus. Meantime such a condition would mean ruin to this country. The price of this unsalable surplus would fix the price of the whole crop. Wheat would be sold below the cost of production and our farm interest be involved in a disaster from which it could not recover for many years. And precisely the same is true, in different degrees, of our cotton, meat products, and provisions generally.

"One who looks only at the plain facts will see that the grant of this credit for the purpose stated is far less an accommodation to the countries that ask it than an act of necessity for the United States. It is part of the most familiar business policy.

Money to Remain in America.

"When a merchant who has been buying for years for cash finds it necessary to ask for a line of credit, it is granted gladly. This is done not as a personal favor, but as a matter of sound business policy. If it were not, mercantile business would pass through a perpetual crisis.

"It is hard to understand the people who talk about 'taking money out of the country.' It is of the essence of the plan that the money shall stay in this country. The goods will go out, the money will stay here and be used to pay for the goods in the localities where they were bought and where the money already is, and the only money that moves at all will come this way in the payment of interest and the eventual repayment of principal.

"The loan cannot encroach upon our neutrality in either fact or feeling. Indeed, some of the great German financial houses in this country are in favor of it since they understand its terms and purpose. There are millions of persons of German stock on the farms of this country, and every one will share in the benefit of preserving and upholdnig the market for farm products that cannot be secured in any other way.

"It is necessary only for any man to get the right point of view, and the purpose of stating the facts just mentioned is to give it to him. Only superficially is this credit for the advantage of other nations. Primarily and with much more force it applies to the maintenance of our own commerce, to the support of our own industry, to the prevention of disaster to our agriculture, to the assurance of prosperity in the United States. It is far less a favor to others than a necessity for ourselves. It means more to us just now than armies and navies or anything else. It is a measure of financial and industrial self preservation. So understood, it should appeal even more powerfully to the generol public, which isc the real party in interest, than it has to the men who have given it their sanction already."

ROCKEFELLER TO AID ALLIES.

Standard Oil Interests to Support Anglo-French Credit.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 20.—Standard Oil interests are to participate in the big credit to the Allies. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., may or may not have been one of the three representatives from 26 Broadway, New York, who conferred Saturday and Sunday at Forrest Hill, but John D. Rockefeller, Sr., knows fully the details of the credit plan and the part his associates will have in it. These are statements made following the recent visit of Standard Oil representatives at Forrest Hill.

The credit will be divided between Canadian and American purchasing agents of the Allies. Through the Canadian Car and Foundry Company, the Canadian agent, 60 per cent. of the credit will be disbursed; through J. P. Morgan & Co., United States agents, 40 per cent. will be distributed. But the fact that the Canadian agents are subletting large contracts in the United States will result in the greater part being spent in the United States.

The fact that Standard Oil interests have large holdings in, if not control of, the Canadian Car and Foundry Company establishes the connection of the Rockefeller group with the proposed credit.

This is the substance of the information which comes from those who claim to know what has been done in connection with the visit of men from Standard Oil headquarters to the head of the organization.

It was pointed out that whatever the personal views of Mr. Rockefeller might be as to the war, their expression in public print would be the result of a private conversation deploring the world conflict and not as a public and authorized statement.

There has been no direct denial that Mr. Rockefeller has talked against the war on the golf links and in the presence of others than those who were participants in his favorite game.

Starr Murphy, Trustee of the Rockefeller foundation and personal representative of Mr. Rockefeller in his multitudinous charities, with another associate from New York, arrived in Cleveland Saturday morning and remained until Sunday night. It was said the thihrd representative arrived either late Saturday or early Sunday and remained only a short time.

After a golf game Saturday morning the remainder of the day was devoted by Mr. Rockefeller to conferences supposed to be on the credit for the Allies.

CHICAGO COOL TO ALLIES.

George M. Reynolds Predicts Small Contribution to Credit.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—According to Chicago bankers the proposed credit to the British and French Allies will not exceed $500,000,000, and is still in the conference stage. That Chicago banks will participate is regarded as improbable because of German influence and threats to withdraw accounts.

George M. Reynolds, President of the Continental and Commercial National Bank, was back at his desk today after a trip to New York in relation to the credit. He said:

"Nothing definite had been agreed upon when I left New York. The British and French financiers would like to get as large a loan as possible, but they do not want to give collateral."

Mr. Reynolds declared the break between the packers and Great Britain would have an influence in keeping Chicago bankers from participating in the credit.

"The British prize court decision in the packers' case came most inopportunely," he said. "In view of conditions so far as known, I should say that Chicago banks will not be likely to respond with enthusiasm to any call for participation in such a loan."

CLEVELAND GERMANS PROTEST

Alliance Would Boycott Banks Joining in Credit.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 20.—The Cleveland branch of the German-American Alliance today sent a protest to President Wilson against the proposed British-French credit.

"A year ago," the protest says, "the President considered a loan by American money institutions to France a violation of neutrality."

A boycott on banks joining the credit is urged.

TAKE UP ENTENTE FINANCES.

Russian, French, and British Ministers Begin Conferences.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—Pierre L. Bark, Russian Minister of Finance, arrived in Paris today and conferred with Alexandre Ribot, French Minister of Finance. He is to meet Reginald McKenna, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, either here or in London.

At these conferences the financial problems of the Entente powers are the subjects of consideration.

SWEDISH LOAN FOR GERMANY.

Credit of $10,000,000 in Return for Certain Export Concessions.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—In return for Germany's consent to permit the exportation of coal and some other specified items to Sweden, five banks, according to the Copenhagen correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company, have agreed to make Germany a loan of 40,000,000 kronor (about $10,000,000) to be used in payment for goods bought in Sweden by Germany.

Toledo Banks Threatened.

Special to The New York Times.

TOLEDO, Ohio, eSpt. 20.—The German Alliance here has passed a resolution notifying bankers that deposits will be withdrawn by its members from any bank that directly or indirectly contributes to the credit of the Allies.

RAILROAD UNDER HAMMER.

Line in New Jersey Expected to Bring About $30,000 Today.

Special to The New York Times.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Sept. 20.—Any one with $30,000 or thereabouts can buy a railroad if he appears tomorrow in the Sheriff's office of the Morris County Court House. The New Jersey & Pennsylvania Railroad, which runs from Watnong, just outside of Morristown, to White House station, in Hunterdon County, is to be sold under foreclosure at 2 o'clock by Frederic V. Pitney, receiver.

To meet State taxes and receiver's certificates $24,000 is needed and other incidental expenses are expected to increase the amount to $30,000. The road has been in the hands of a receiver since Dec. 31, 1912.

The railroad has been idle since October, 1913, having shut down as a result of a demand for improvements imposed by the State Board of Public Utility Commissioners. The road consists of twenty-five miles of track, but there is no rolling stock left.

BRYAN ON WAR AND LOAN.

American Credit to Either Side Called a Gamble on Outcome.

W. J. Bryan passed through New York yesterday on his way from Boston, where he spoke Sunday before 10,000 people in the National League Baseball Park. When asked what he thought of the loan to the Allies, he characterized it as "a gamble on the war."

Colonel Bryan, who was interviewed at the Pennsylvania Station just before he boarded the 1:08 P. M. train for Washington, was looking bronzed and fit. He said he expected to remain in the capital about two days before going to Florida.

"What do I think of the situation now with regard to this country and the war in Europe?" he said, repeating a question that had been put to him. "I don't know that there has been any special change, except that it looks as if our differences with Germany were approaching a satisfactory settlement. It is gratifying that this is so. No; I will not discuss the means by which this has been brought about."

"Do you think Count von Bernstorff's assistance has been of value?" he was asked.

"I prefer to say nothing about means," he emphasized.

"Do you think the danger of our becoming involved in war is past?"

"The danger of this country becoming involved in the war will never be entirely past while this war lasts," he replied. "That is one reason why, in addition to humanitarian reasons, we should be anxious for the war to close."

Colonel Bryan was asked what he thought about the placing of the big loan for the Allies in this country.

"I think it is getting the people of this country to gamble on the war," he replied. "The Bible says, in effect, 'Where your treasure is, there your heart is also,' and if our people invest in a war loan on either side, in bonds that depend for their value on the success of that side, the effect will be to create in this country an influential group which will be interested in helping that side in whose bonds it has invested. This makes it still more difficult to maintain neutrality.

"What I say, mind you, applies to the bonds of one side as well as those of the other. I think it is unwise for our people to assume war risks on either side. There are American securities held in Europe that can be sold. If Europeans prefer to hold these American securities rather than loan money to their own Governments, Americans should not be foolish enough to rush in where Europeans dare not tread."

Mr. Bryan disclaimed all knowledge of Henry Ford's offer to devote $10,000,000 to stopping the war, except what he had read in the newspapers.

"But," he added, "I may say that I am very glad that a man of Mr. Ford's means and business prestige should speak out for peace and against preparing for war. I am glad that some capital is not 'timid.'"

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—W. J. Bryan returned to Washington tonight from his over-Sunday trip to Boston. When asked if he had reached a decision with reference to the suggestion that he go to Europe on a peace mission, he said the matter was still in tentative form. His lecture engagements in any event, he said, would prevent him from going abroad before November.

Mr. and Mrs. Bryan, with their little grandson, will go to Florida, starting from Washington Wednesday evening. Mr. Bryan will speak in Atlanta Thursday night and in Jacksonville Friday night. Then the party will go to Miami, where Mr. Bryan will take a few days' rest before staring out on a tour of Texas, Tennessee, Arkansas, and other Southern and Western States.

'HANDS OFF' PLEA MADE FOR MEXICO

Calero and Magon Address Latin American Members of Pan-American Conference.

ARRAIGN WILSON'S POLICY

As Based Upon False Assumption That Warring Factions Are the Mexican People.

South Americans Asked to Persuade Washington to Abandon Its Program of Practical Intervention.

THE TIMES presents herewith excerpts from a memorandum presented to the Ambassadors of Brazil, Argentina, and Chile and the Ministers of Bolivia, Uruguay, and Guatemala, by Manuel Calero, the last duly accredited Ambassador of Mexico to the United States; and Flores Magon, who was Secretary of the Interior in the Cabinet of the late President Francisco Y. Madero of Mexico.

In this document, which was not presented to Secretary Lansing, the American member of the Pan-American Conference, Señor Calero and Señor Magon, on behalf of the business and professional men, farmers, artisans, &c.," of Mexico, protest against a recognition on the part of the United States and the South and Central American countries of either the Carranza or Villa factions, or of any faction representative of the Huertistas. They appeal to the Latin American diplomats as men "in whose veins flows the same blood as in our own" and argue that the only wise course to pursue with regard to Mexico is one of "hands off."

The Mexican policy of President Wilson is arraigned, and Mexico is declared to be a country without government and one whose people are starving. The memorandum, which was transmitted to the envoys in Spanish, as translated by Señor Calero is in part as follows:

Senor Calero's Translation.

Memorandum respectfully submitted by the undersigned Mexican citizens to their Excellencies the Ambassadors of Brazil, Argentina, and Chile, and their Excellencies the Ministers of Bolivia, Guatemala, and Uruguay.

1. Mexico is a country that loves its independence dearly. Any act which implies the slightest encroachment upon the national sovereignty is keenly resented by the Mexican people. General Huerta exploited this sentiment both skillfully and perfidiously in order to prolong his hateful dictatorship, which would have come to an early end had it not been for the openly hostile attitude assumed toward it by the American Government. * * *

It has been a mistake to say that the movements at present convulsing Mexico are the efforts of a people fighting for freedom. It is not the people who are under arms, nor are they supporting the factions. No case is known of a whole nation committing suicide; nor of the man who lives by tilling the ground laying waste his crops, slaying his work animals and building a pyre of his farm implements; nor of the humble schoolmaster dynamiting his school house; nor yet of the artisan destroying his tools. What we are witnessing is not a revolution. There was a revolution when Carranza disavowed the Huerta usurpation; but the revolution ended over a year ago with the flight of the usurper and the disbanding of the army which kept him in power. * * *

Washington's "Twofold Error."

3. The United States Government has incurred the twofold error of confusing the factions with the people, and of believing that complete accord exists between the tendencies of the rebels and the aspirations of the nation. Hence the aid rendered the former has not redounded to the benefit of the latter, but it has brought about results wholly contrary to those sought. * * *

When a "Constitutionalist" General wilfully wrecks the electric cars of the Federal district and throws out of employment at one swoop 3,000 motormen and conductors, is there any one who would hold that these 3,000 families, thus forced to face starvation, belong to the oppressing classes?

When another "General" dynamited foundries and smelters, was the victim the foreign companies who own these establishments—who will later, through the aid of their Governments, collect heavy indemnities—or the thousands of workmen and their families who were thus left destitute?

When a Carranza Minister closed by a stroke of the pen all the schools of the Federal District, from the primary departments to the Faculties of the National University, throwing into want thousands of teachers, both male and female, did he try by this to punish the Cientificos?

Not a Popular Revolution.

And so we might multiply these examples. We could make a long and detailed list of acts of indescribable cruelty, of vandalic outrages which the "oppressors" as well as the submerged 80 per cent. have had to undergo, after the triumph of the revolution. This revolution, called "Constitutionalist," has not been made by the people, but by the enemies of the people. Its intellectual leaders are old and corrupt dregs of the Porfirian régime, whom President Wilson, ignorant of the past, on one occasion called leaders that "prefer the liberty of their people to their own ambitions." The militant elements of the revolution are the 15,000 or 20,000 criminals that have had the prisons thrown open to them and now form part of the ranks of the Constitutionalists: the Yaqui soldiers, savage and bloodthirsty Indians, who dance to the tune of their tambourines around their dying comrades; the improvised "Generals," several of whom are fugituves from justice, ferocious and uncultured men who, like the famous Francisco Villa, are personally guilty of thefts, the outraging of women, kidnapping, and murders. * * *

Washington's "Mexico of Fancy."

4. Without taking into consideration the ethnical elements of our population and the sociological factors that have determined the course of its history, a Mexico of fancy has been invented, that is very far from the real Mexico. In support of our statement and as an example of decisive importance, let us recall certain principles set forth by the Government of the United States at the time of the Niagara Falls conferences. It was then stated that in Mexico there were two parties—Huertistas and Constitutionalistas—and that it was "necessary to assume that every intelligent man of any prominence is at heart on one side or the other," and therefore "the country might well question the patriotism of any Mexican who has been colorless in such a contest." (Declarations made to the press by the delegates of the United States the 18th of June, 1914.)

We must rectify the foregoing statements that have formed the foundation for the mistaken policy of the United States in regard to Mexico. The truth is that with the exception of some reactionaries and clericals the majority of the men of "intelligence and prominence" in Mexico abhorred the Huerta régime, founded on treason and murder, and supported by violence, as much as the anarchical and destructive methods of the revolution. Contrary to what the Government of the United States believes, Huerta was not the product of a party, nor did he represent any party, for, strictly speaking, there are no political parties in Mexico. * * *

Four Classes of Mexicans.

5. Mexicans at the present time could be classified as follows:

I. The reactionaries, who look for the restoration of a dictatorship, maintaining as its economic standard privilege and monopoly, and as its political standard the suppression of liberty.

II. The Carranzista, Villista, Zapatista, &c., revolutionaries, whose characteristics are well known.

III. The so-called "middle-class," composed of the professional and business men, small farmers, clerks, artisans, &c., and the workmen from the factories. All these elements represent an important group, which sincerely wish the establishment of a political system of order, justice and liberty, based upon the Constitution, which shall pledge itself to solve the great problems of national education and economic betterment, including the so-called agrarian reform, the solution of which would mean the redemption from illiteracy and misery of eight million human beings.

IV. These latter, who compose an essentially passive group, whose happiness was the aim of the revolution, as asserted by several.

The third group is the most important, because it represents the best elements of the country. The American Government seems either to have forgotten its existence, or to have incorporated it in the first group, that of the hateful reactionaries.

We deduce the above statement from the fact that the second group seems to be the only one called upon to organize the future Government, under the auspices of seven countries of this continent.

We are not able to understand how, if the President of the United States charges, and rightly so, this second group with the responsibility of the frightful state of anarchy and misery prevailing in the Republic, he attempts now to convert it into a Government, unless it is accepted as true the mistaken understanding of the American Government in stating, through its delegates to the Niagara Conference, that the "Constitutionalists" compose a national party, representative of a large body of citizens, and that this party defeated another, to which the balance of the population of Mexico joined and was controlled by General Huerta and the irresponsible soldiers which carried out his crimes. Furthermore, if the fate of the country is solemnly delivered to the revolutionary factions, it would mean tht the seven intervening countries have lost sight of the fact that the revolutionists represent only 1 per cent. of the population, and that the remaining 99 per cent. abhor them.

Demands Unimpaired Sovereignty.

6. The foregoing exposition does not purport to request the conference of plenipotentiaries, called by the Secretary of State of the United States of America, to consider the interests of all Mexicans, and not only the interests of the factionists. What we wish, what we most respectfully request from the worthy representatives of the six countries, our brothers in blood, who take part in that conference, is a resolution which shall safeguard the sacred principles of the sovereignty of Mexico. None of those countries can consider herself exempt from future upheavals nor from more or less lengthy and intense periods of social disturbance; none of them can accept the fateful precedent that foreign countries should arrogate to themselves the right to decide upon the number of parties into which other countries should be divided, on what side are the interests of the people, and to which party should assistance be given and which antagonized. * * *

7. It is our understanding that the Pan-American plenipotentiaries initiated their work under the impression that all the factions would agree to accept the invitation tendered them; but the situation is different, since the most powerful of them—that headed by Venustiano Carranza—seems to be about to refuse to co-operate. It is wholly natural that the Villa faction, dishonored by the crimes of its chief, lacking financial backing, and beaten militarily, should be ready to accept anything. The same attitude was observed by the Mexican Conservative Party, when, after the triumph of the Liberal Party in 1860, it besought Napoleon III. to undertake the military occupation of the country and the suppression of the republican form of Government. Political passion, aroused to white heat by the sting of defeat, does not stop before the worst excesses.

In such a situation, this effort must be abandoned, unless the idea were to hold the conference with the co-operation of the least powerful factions; but this we conceive to be impossible. We are confident that the moral influence of seven self-respecting republics cannot be thrown into the scales in favor of the Villa faction, headed, as it is, by a criminal whose hands are soiled not only with Mexican blood but with English, Spanish, American, and Argentinian as well. Furthermore, after accepting the invitation of the seven powers, Villa engages in a frightful massacre of political prisoners, banishing the widows and orphans of his victims from the country to live as charges on public charity in the United States! States! * * *

8. We can see no possible solution of Mexico's difficulties in the scheme now advanced by the United States Government with the co-operation of six Latin-American republics. Some of these allowed the spirit guiding their international relations to be seen in their refusal to recognize a Government of such spurious origin as that of Huerta; but the United States Government has gone further, and has even manifested its purpose to recognize no political régime in Mexico which does not conform to the constitutional provisions of the country. * * *

Leave Mexico to Her Own Misery!

9. The question will naturally be asked: What do we recommend to save our country, whose situation of terrible anguish we cannot deny? The answer is obvious: leave Mexico alone, abandon her to her own endeavors, to her own misery, to her own misfortune. Had this been done the present crisis would already have been passed. Have the words of the Indianapolis harangue been forgotten? 'The country is theirs, the Government is theirs." The laws of nature, by virtue of whose untrammeled function peoples ever find their true adjustment, have been powerless to do their work in Mexico, because their exercise has been hampered by a foreign and disturbing element. Is this, we ask, the first crisis of anarchy through which Mexico has passed in her ninety-four years of independent life? We do not deny that this crisis is the worst of all, but it is due precisely to the disconcerting influence of American intervention. Having some knowledge of our history, of the medium in which it has developed, and of the ethnical and social elements of our population, we can affirm that it will suffice the sole effort of the Mexicans to restore a régime of order and law, and to take up the serious problems without whose solution Mexico will never succeed in redeeming herself, neither from the clutches of oppressing dictatorships nor from the anarchy which saps the life-blood of the country. What is needed is that this effort should be allowed to take its course freely.

Not Charity, but Justice.

President Wilson, touched by the piteous spectacle of millions of men, women, and children suffering the pangs of starvation in Mexico, addressed a short while ago a pathetic appeal to the American people to bestow the blessings of their charity upon our unfortunate country. What is needed, however, the only thing its people demand, is that justice be done them, that they be allowed the opportunity to oust those who, thanks to the protection of the American Government, have been able to arm themselves and continue arming themselves to prey upon the helpless population. The factions would cease to be a scourge if the act of the United States Congress prohibiting the exportation of munitions of war were rigorously administered. It will thus be seen that we are not making any extravagant demand. * * *

Appeal to Latin-American Envoys.

Our purpose has been set forth. It is to solicit respectfully from those in whose veins flow the same blood as ours, whose history is also the same, and who can hence appreciate the depth of our tribulation, to be good enough to exert their influence with the Government of the United States, so that it may desist from its present policy toward Mexico and abandon its purpose of setting up a Government which, by reason of the elements with which it is proposed to organize it and on account of its being a product of foreign intervention, is doomed to failure. The worthy plenipotentiaries whom we have the high honor of addressing, will earn the gratitude of all Mexicans if, inspired in a noble sentiment of justice and Latin-American solidarity, they should succeed in having the United States adopt toward Mexico a policy of absolute nonintervention and complete impartiality.

HOPE OF RECOGNITION INSPIRES MEXICANS

Said to be Threatening Mexico City While Villa Tries to Crush Obregon in the North.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—With the prospect of foreign recognition dangled before them as a possible reward, the rival revolutionary factions in Mexico, according to information reaching Washington today, are either planning to capture the prize or to prevent a rival from obtaining it. The announcement of the Pan-American Conference on Mexico in New York City last Saturday to the effect that the time has come for the "recognition of any provisional Government with the material and moral capacity necessary to protect the lives and property of nationals and foreigners" has spurred both the Carranzista and the Villista factions to activity.

The Pan-American conferees studiously refrained from stating which faction would be recognized under the rule adopted on Saturday. The prevalent impression in Washington is that the Carranzista Government will be recognized some time in October, if that faction can preserve or improve its present status. That the Carranzistas interpret the announcement of the Pan-American conferees as "looking toward the early recognition of General Carranza's Government" was made plain in bulletins issued from the Carranzista Agency here today, saying that Carranzista money had advanced in value at Vera Cruz on the strength of the announcement made by the Pan-American diplomats.

There is no concealment of the fact that the Villistas are chagrined over the sudden shift in the attitude of the United States and of the Latin-American Governments toward the Mexican situation during the past week. They will now endeavor to demonstrate that they are as much entitled to recognition as is the Carranzista faction, and, that the latter is able to present no better showing of "material and moral capacity" than they themselves. They will endeavor to convince the Washington Government that the Carranzista military successes in the north are more apparent than real, that General Carranza has stripped other portions of Mexico of troops in order to make an artificial display of strength for the purpose of creating the impression that the Carranzista faction is rapidly gaining control over all of Mexico.

At the same time it is understood to be the plan of the Villa forces to endeavor to strike body blows at the Carranzistas at two points—in Chihuahua and Mexico City. General Zapata is being counted upon to endeavor to render Mexico City untenable for the Carranzistas commanded by General Pablo Gonzales, while General Villa, who asserts that he has sufficient men and ample ammunition, will try, during the next three weeks, to outgeneral and crush General Obregon's army in the north.

The report was current in Washington today that Villa's followers here and on the border, in a desperate effort to block the recognition of Carranza, had started a boom in behalf of General Alvaro Obregon, General Carranza's Chief of Staff, for Provisional President. At the Carranza Agency, in the State Department, and Villista circles the talk of Obregon assenting to such a compromise agreement at this time is ridiculed. Nevertheless, there are, and for some time there have been, Mexicans and others interested in Mexican affairs here who have regarded the name of Obregon as one with which to conjure in seeking the solution of the Mexican problem.

The State Department received information today which shows unusual activity by the Zapatistas, on the basis of which this announcement was issued:

"For about two weeks there has been considerable fighting around Mexico City. The Carranzista garrison at Chalco, a suburb of Mexico City, is reported to have been almost wiped out. Passenger service between Mexico City and Vera Cruz has been cut down to one train each way every third day. There are conflicting reports as to the reasons for curtailing the service. There are reports that there is serious depletion of rolling stock. However, the authorities in Mexico City state that it is due to plans to bring in food supplies from Vera Cruz."

The Carranza Agency issued a statement tonight asserting that the food situation in Mexico City had been greatly relieved and claiming many adherents to their cause. The statement also said:

"A group of fity professors, members of the Corps of Education of the Mexican Government, will be sent to the United States on a tour of investigation and instruction as to the American methods of public school organization next month. The group of professors followed the Constitutionalist Government of Mexico when it evacuated the national capital many months ago. Their tour through the United States will be extensive, and they will sail from Vera Cruz on board the Ward Line steamer Mexico on Sept. 30. The party will arrive at Boston on Oct. 13."

The statement by the Villa Agency read:

"The confidential agency is authorized by General Villa to say that rumors circulated in the United States of possible danger to Americans and other foreigners in the territory he controls in the name of the Convention Government as a result of the reports of the last Pan-American conference are entirely groundless, and are intended only to injure the public confidence in his administration.

"General Villa wishes to emphatically state that, while he regrets measures taken by the United States and Great Britain in ordering their Consuls and nationals out of territory controlled by the convention in the northern part of the republic, he will take special pains to care for the lives and property of all Americans and other foreigners who by special circumstances have not yet been able to comply with the advice of their Governments."

BLANCO REPORTED CAPTURED.

Obregon Said to Have Jailed Villa's General—Gutierrez Surrenders.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Sept. 20.—General Lucio Blanco has been captured and is now held a prisoner in jail by General Obregon, according to an official Carranza dispatch from Vera Cruz received here today.

The same dispatch said that Eulalio Gutierrez, once Provisional President of Mexico by election of the Aguas Callentes Convention, had surrendered to General Obregon at Saltillo.

Seek Nichols Slayers in Chicago.

It became known yesterday that the police in Chicago had been asked to look for Arthur Woltonen, Eddie Lehto, and "a young man fond of dancing," who are wanted here for the murder of Mrs. Elizabeth Nichols, who was robbed of $17,000 worth of gems. Since the confession of Onni Talas, second man in Mrs. Nichols's home, the police have been searching for the three, and it was declared that none of them could have left the city. Last night all information concerning the clue that had occasioned the message to the Chicago police was refused, and it was said at Police Headquarters that no information would be made public until an arrest could be announced.

BRYAN POOLS WOES WITH DR. N. D. HILLIS

"I Myself Have Been Centre of Storm," He Telephones to Brooklyn Pastor.

'GOOD-BYE, GOD BLESS YOU!'

Congregation and Others Rally to Support of Clergyman Who "Begins Life Anew."

The Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, who made a statement from the pulpit of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, on Sunday, in which he expressed regret that he had strayed into the paths of business speculation instead of trying to be a "true prophet of God" to his people, received many expressions of confidence and assurances of support from members of his flock and others yesterday. The messages indicated that Old Plymouth was rallying around its pastor to help him carry out his expressed determination to forsake fickle finance and "begin life again anew."

Among the many messages Dr. Hillis received was one from William Jennings Bryan, who telephoned from the Holland House, Manhattan, where he was stopping, and, according to Dr. Hillis, said:

"I have just read the morning newspapers and have been deeply impressed by your statement. You have done right, and no matter how harsh critics may be, remember there is a sense of justice in the world that is all but wider than religion itself.

"You have made a host of friends in this country. They have confidence in you and love you. But you have more friends today than you ever had before. I myself have been the subject of criticism and the centre of storm, but I have lived to see the right increasingly recognized and grow.

"If criticism could kill a man I would have been slain a million times. But the more you stamp on the truth the deeper you plant the seed of justice. I have but a little time in the city, but I want to use that little time in telephoning you this message of sympathy and confidence. Every man makes mistakes, and when they have made mistakes, all honorable men ought to do what you have done—say so.

Bryan's "God Bless You!"

"But one last word—do not for one moment allow this to interfere with your work in Plymouth Church or in the country.

"Good-by, and God bless you!"

Friends of Dr. Hillis said they thought it likely that the libel suit for $50,000 brought against the minister by his nephew, Percy D. Hillis of Victoria, B. C., never would be tried. They expressed the belief that the matter would be settled "in some way" out of court, but would not say what the manner of settlement would be. The suit is supposed to be based on an alleged interview with Dr. Hillis in The Portland Oregonian, in which it was made to appear that the minister had shouldered the debts of his nephew growing out of speculations in timber lands.

William A. Moore of Brooklyn, attorney for Percy D. Hillis, says that his client is not seeking money, but simply wants a retraction of the statements credited to the minister. Dr. Hillis himself would make no statement yesterday about the libel suit. Inquirers were referred to his attorney, Frederic W. Hinrichs, who was at his Summer home at Woodstock, Conn.

Frank L. Ferguson, formerly Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Plymouth, and for some years business representative of Dr. Hillis, gave out a copy of a letter which he seemed to think showed that the pastor had knowledge that his nephew intended to bring the suit, and therefore could not have been "amazed" when served with the summons last Saturday.

Nephew's Letter Quoted.

The letter, which, Mr. Ferguson said, was sent to Dr. Hillis by Percy D. Hillis on July 23 last, was in part as follows:

"In view of your wires, saying 'Pay no attention to alleged interview,' &c., I gathered that you had not given out the information, but your letter last night assumed full responsibility for it, and, judging from the article which appeared in The Brooklyn Eagle, you must have been fully aware that it was going to be published in that paper, and from that source spread over the country, to make of you a hero and a martyr, and continue to make me chief scapegoat, the rôle of which I am very tired.

"Now, as to that interview, it must be denied in toto, with the same publicity with which it was given out, or I shall be forced to take action to compel you to prove your statements to protect my name."

Friends of Dr. Hillis said that if such a letter was written to him by his nephew they were certain he never received it, and was really surprised when served with the summons in the suit.

SYMPATHY FOR DR. HILLIS.

Chicago Ministers Laud His Act and Pray for Him.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—Clergymen of Chicago today manifested a lively interest in the confession of the Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, in his Plymouth Church pulpit in Brooklyn on Sunday, that his desire to amass wealth had made him depart from his ideals. Presbyterian ministers attending the Presbytery today bowed their heads and prayed that Dr. Hillis, personally known to many of them by reason of his former pastorate at Evanston, might be led safely out of the deep waters of failure.

Congregationalists, Baptists, and Methodists likewise, assembled for their weekly meeting, declared their sympathy for Dr. Hillis in the financial difficulties that had led him to the unusual act of apologizing to his congregation on a Sunday morning.

"We assert our continued faith in the integrity of Dr. Hillis," declared the Rev. Dr. George K. Newell, Moderator of the Chicago Presbytery, as he prayed at the meeting today. "We ask Thee, O God," the prayer continued, "to give him strength to pass with fortitude this test, to lead him safely out of the deep waters."

At the meeting of the Baptist ministers the Rev. Melbourne P. Boynton of Woodlawn Baptist Church declared that "the fault is not so much Dr. Hillis's as it is that of his church. Every church should see that its pastor does not need to go out into the money marts."

The Rev. Joseph Croft Dent, pastor of the Pilgrim Baptist Church, lauded the action of Dr. Hillis in rising in his pulpit and proclaiming his financial ruin and his regrets.

"I think it was Christlike," said Mr. Dent. "It was noble. It raises Dr. Hillis in the minds of every one and atones for his act."

The Chicago Presbytery, on the motion of Dr. Norman B. Barr of Olivet Memorial Church, resolved to send a letter of sympathy to the Brooklyn pastor.

"I know some of the men who have suffered through Dr. Hillis's business ventures," said the Rev. G. C. Knothel, Presbyterian Field Secretary. "He has worked so nobly to make restitution that I honor him. It is said he has already paid back $100,000 of his indebtedness."

Holy Jumpers Sentenced.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Sept. 20.—Eight members of the "Pillar of Fire," a religious sect of Bound Brook, known commonly as the "Holy Jumpers," were adjudged guilty of blocking the public highway on Saturday night by City Judge W. G. Demeza today and sentenced to pay a fine of $20 each and to serve forty days in jail. The sentence was suspended later.

WAS NOT BANK OFFICIAL.

Receiver Denies McGraw's Connection with Grafton Institution.

By Telegraph to the Editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GRAFTON, W. Va., Sept. 20.—My attention has been called to an article in THE NEW YORK TIMES of today with respect to the indictments in the Grafton Bank cases here, and I feel it my duty to voluntarily make correction. Your correspondent says the bank failed for $1,000,000, and that Mr. McGraw was President and a borrower to the extent of $400,000.

These statements are absolutely untrue, and the best evidence of the same is that the whole deposits of the bank were about $360,000. Mr. McGraw was not the President, and not even a Director.

BLANCHARD E. HIATT,
Receiver Grafton Bank.

THE NEW YORK TIMES of yesterday reported the indictment of Colonel McGraw in the Grafton Bank case, but while it said that he was President of the institution, it did not say that he had borrowed any money of the bank.

FORT SHERIDAN CAMP OPEN.

Congressman Madden Addresses Four Hundred Western Rookies.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—Congressman Madden addressed the 400 citizens who reported at Fort Sheridan today for a month's course in military training, urging them to preach the new American gospel of preparedness after their stay in camp in the hope of arousing public sentiment that will influence Congress to give heed to the question of the nation's defense.

"Patriotism is more necessary to the life of this free nation than to the autocratic countries of Europe," said Congressman Madden. "I am proud to see this encouraging response to the Government's invitation to its citizens on this first day of military training camp."

Congressman Madden addressed the student soldiers at noon in the big mess hall, to which they marched behind the band of Battery A, Third Artillery, United States Army. He was introduced by Colonel W. J. Nicholson, the commandant.

The students are men from all ranks of life. The business world was the largest contributor, but there were many doctors, lawyers, engineers, school teachers, and dentists among the "rookies." Mayor William H. Thompson said he had planned to join the camp on Friday.

After first lessons are learned, officers in charge of the instruction plan to rush the men through a routine that will keep them busy from 5:55 A. M. to 6 o'clock in the evening. The program includes four hours of drilling in the afternoon, another two hours of drilling in the afternoon, after which instruction will be given in first aid, range practice, tent pitching, cavalry drills, signal practice, field fortification, and artillery service.

Colonel J. Nicholson, Colonel of cavalry, commanding Fort Sheridan, is in charge of the camp. The instructors are officers from all arms of the service.

Riley Killed Himself After Wedding.

The body of Hugh A. Riley, a retired livery stable keeper, of 187 Kingsbridge Road, the Bronx, who disappeared last Thursday after having attended the evening before the wedding of his son, Frank B. Riley, to Miss Blanche Wilsey, daughter of Frank D. Wilsey, a Commissioner of the Board of Education, was found yesterday in a lot a short distance from the Riley home, at Bailey and West Kingsbridge Avenues. Mr. Riley's throat was cut, and his right hand still clutched a razor. His family denied knowing any reason for the suicide.

WILL SAVE CROTON FROM SEWAGE TAINT

Whitman Says Definitely That Mohansic Shall Drain Into the Hudson.

MAKES PROMISE TO MAYOR

Is Assured That Water Would Not Be Imperilled, but Sympathizes with City's Feeling.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Sept. 20.—Governor Whitman today heard the views of officials of the Health Department and others on the plans for the disposal of the sewage of the Mohansic State Hospital and the Training School for Boys at Yorktown Heights.

Protests have reached the State authorities from New York City because of the fear that the Croton water supply would be contaminated. The plans call for the construction of sewage disposal plants, with ultimate drainage of the purified effluent into Mohansic Lake, which contributes to the Croton water supply.

The conference followed a letter from Mayor Mitchel to the Governor, asking him to grant a public hearing in the matter before he passed upon the sewage plans.

"The Mayor is in error in supposing the plans are before me," said the Governor. "This, however, is a matter of vital interest to the City of New York, and, inasmuch as the Mayor has written as he has, I think we should go into it."

Governor Whitman asked Dr. H. M. Biggs, the State Health Commissioner, to explain the situation. Dr. Biggs told in detail of the plans to build sewage disposal plants, and said that he was convinced of their scientific soundness.

Will Protect the City.

Tonight Gov. Whitman made public his reply to Mayor Mitchel. He discusses the problem from all angles, and in conclusion, after asserting that, although all the authorities agree that the plans do not menace New York's water supply, says:

"At the same time I sympathize, as do all who have had to do with this matter, with the objection to this procedure existing in New York City, and feel that it is desirable that the additional safeguard be provided of carrying the effluent from these plants to the Hudson River, and I shall take such action as is necessary to bring about this result without interfering with the immediate construction of the institutions in question.

"I can assure you that the mains carrying the effluent from the disposal plants to the Hudson River will be constructed by the State before the sewage plants are put in operation."

Earlier in his letter Governor Whitman explains the situation, saying:

"The Mohansic State Hospital plans ultimately come to me for approval only as is required in the letting of contracts and the expenditure of public money."

The Governor then quotes a letter of Dr. S. S. Goldwater, Commissioner of Health of New York City, in which he said:

"I understand that if a hospital is built at Yorktown Heights there will be constructed in connection with it a sewage disposal system, which will have the sanction of the State Department of Health. I am quite sure that the State Department would not sanction the construction of any disposal system which did not insure an absolutely sterile effluent. If anything else were contemplated a protest on the part of the Department of Health of this city in a matter of this sort would unquestionably prove effective."

"I am advised," the Governor then continues in his letter to the Mayor, "that you also strongly urged Governor Glynn to take this action because of the great need for the erection of these institutions to relieve the overcrowding of the public institutions in New York City."

Governor Glynn last year vetoed a bill abandoning the Yorktown Heights site for a State hospital. A commission of experts, the Governor then says, indorsed the sewage disposal plans. Then he continues:

"As you have indicated, the Commissioner of Health has had correspondence with the present Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas, and Electricity of New York City, and has also had conferences with him in reference to this matter, before his approval of the plans for the Yorktown institution; and at his suggestion requested the engineer of the State Architect's office and the chief engineer of the Department of Health to consider the feasibility of carrying the effluent from the sewage disposal plant of this institution and also that of the Mohansic State Hospital to the Hudson River. He was advised that this plan was feasible, but that the expense would be about $125,000, and the yearly additional cost for interest, depreciation, maintenance, and operation would be about $25,000.

Why the Commissioner Approved.

"In view of the urgent need for the immediate erection of these institutions, and in view of the positive views of the commission appointed by the Commissioner of Health, he approved of the proposed plans for the Yorktown Training School; and has indicated his intention of approving of similar plans for the Mohansic State Hospital.

"You are entirely in error in stating that Commissioner Williams has pointed out 'the fallacy of spending the State's moneys on a temporary system of sewage disposal which temporary system would be a menace to the health of your city from the moment it was in operation,' for, as a matter of fact, I am advised that this system would be an absolutely necessary preliminary to and a permanent part of any subsequently erected mains to carry the effluent from this plant to the Hudson River, if this course should be decided upon.

"To conduct raw sewage under high pressure for eight miles in pipes which would run for a long distance over the Croton watershed, very much nearer Croton Lake than these disposal plants are, would be dangerous and would not for one moment be considered by the State Department of Health. The only question at issue is as to whether the purified effluent shall be disposed of in this manner, and Commissioner Biggs has already indicated his belief that such action must be taken eventually because these institutions when fully developed will require the waters of Mohansic Lake and Crom Pond for their own water supply."

Taxi Driver Hits Boy and Flees.

Vincent Dillow, 15 years old, of 175 West Seventy-eighth Street, crossing Amsterdam Avenue at Seventy-eighth Street late last night, was knocked unconscious by a northbound taxicab, which did not stop after it struck him. Patrolman Keller of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station carried the boy to the office of Dr. Staitford of 157 West Seventy-ninth Street, who attended him for a fracture of the right arm and a possible fracture of the skull. The license number of the taxicab was reported by a witness, Carl Schaeffer of 601 West 181st Street.

AUSTRIAN BRINGS JOY TO ITALIAN CHILDREN

Anonymously He Sends Them Two Cases of Toys to be Distributed in Washington Sq.

SAW GUIDO BRUNO'S WORK

Says Gift Is from a Friend Who Doesn't Believe in Carrying the War Into America.

Stored away in a garret in Greenwich Village are two big packing cases full of toys, which are going to be given away in Washington Square next Saturday afternoon. The toys are at present in charge of Guido Bruno, and were given to him by a man connected with a large importing house, to be distributed to the children of Little Italy; and back of the gift is the story of a hyphenated American whose hyphen isn't big enough to get in the way.

The man who sent them is an Austro-American, and he never saw Guido Bruno or Charles Edison, who have been conducting the Children's Hours in Washington Square and furnishing music and dancing teachers to the children of Greenwich Village. But he read about their activities in the village, and he had read, also, that the thing that started their partnership was the fact that Bruno was trying to spread art among the poorer classes and that Edison had given him what he had to give, which happened to be music.

This started the importer to thinking. He strolled through the swarming streets of Little Italy one Sunday afternoon, and when he finished his walk he was in the frame of mind where he wanted to do something himself. The thing that he had to give was toys, so after a little correspondence with Mr. Bruno he shipped over two big packing cases full of assorted toys, which are going to be distributed at the Children's Hour next Saturday.

Most of the children who have been coming to the music and dancing in the square are Italians, and the importer knew this. So when Bruno asked him if he could tell the children from whom the gifts came the donor said: "No, I don't want my name used, nor my firm's name. Just tell them that these are a few gifts from an Austrian friend of theirs who doesn't believe in carrying the war into America."

The Italian kiddies don't know yet what is coming to them, but Bruno doesn't think it at all likely that they will be afraid of an Austrian bearing gifts, even when the gifts are made in Germany. The toys are of all sorts, and there is nothing unneutral about them except perhaps a dual set of pewter soldiers in which the Germans seem to be getting the better of the French.

WHITMAN WILL SEE BIG MILITARY SHOW

10,000 Men to Exhibit Army Work in War Time at Van Cortlandt Park.

SEATS FOR SPECTATORS

All-Day Exhibition of New York National Guard Next Saturday Will Comprise Many Movements.

Details for the elaborate field manoeuvres to be held at Van Cortlandt Park next Saturday, in which 10,000 troops of the New York National Guard will participate were perfected yesterday by Major Gen. John F. O'Ryan. The exercises, which will be attended by Governor Whitman, will begin promptly at 10 A. M. and will last until late in the afternoon.

A troop from the First Cavalry will act as escort to the Governor, who with his party will be provided with a special stand about the centre of the westerly edge of the parade ground, which runs parallel to Broadway. A space to the south of the Governor's stand will be reserved for the official automobiles, and for a stand for the official guests. Autos of spectators can form in single column against the curb on the east side of Broadway. Seats for spectators will be provided by park benches arranged along the bank east of Broadway.

Major William Weigel, U. S. A., will have charge of the various exhibitions which will take place from 10 to 12 o'clock on the parade, and will be given simultaneously by several organizations at a time in allotted squares. The complete program of these exhibitions is as follows:

Establishment of a field hospital by the First Field Hospital.

Battery drill by Battery D, First Field Artillery.

Combat exhibition by Company C, Twenty-third Infantry.

Bayonet exhibition and combat by detachment of Seventy-first Infantry.

Construction and demolition of trestle bridge by the Twenty-second Corps of Engineers.

Pitching shelter tents by Company K, Forty-seventh Infantry.

Troop drill by First Cavalry.

Flag drill by Company A, First Signal Battalion.

Rough riding by First Cavalry Troop.

Evolution of armored car.

Battery drill by Second Field Artillery.

Combat exercise by company of Seventy-first Infantry.

Physical drill by Seventh Infantry, as used by the West Point Cadets.

Rough riding by troop of Squadron A.

Pitching shelter tents by a company of the Twelfth Infantry.

Machine gun drill by Machine Gun Troop.

Combat exercises by Company L, Sixty-ninth Infantry.

Establishment of dressing station by Third Ambulance Company.

Combat exhibition by Company E, Fourteenth Infantry.

Installation and explosion of land mines by detail from Pioneer Battalion, Twenty-second Corps of Engineers.

Laying and recovery of signal wires by Company B of Signal Battalion.

Pontoon bridge laying by Pontoon Battalion, Twenty-second Corps of Engineers.

After the exhibitions the troops will rest from 12 to 1 o'clock, retaining the same ground they occupy on the parade during the exhibitions. At 1 P. M. the march movement will commence. In this all arms of the service will participate, including radio sections. Squadron A and the machine gun troop will represent the enemy. Signal troops will establish and maintain radio connection with the advanced cavalry, advance guard brigades, and rear guard. Motor trucks will accompany the main body. The advance will be under command of Colonel C. I. Debevoise of the First Cavalry. General O'Ryan will command the main body and Major H. C. Wilson will command the rear guard.

A provo guard, composed of United States Boy Scouts and boys' brigades will be in command of Major A. Reagan for duty at the stands. In addition to his usual staff, headed by Lieut. Col. E. Olmstead as Adjutant General, General O'Ryan will be assisted by the following officers of the army: Lieut. Col. A. P. Buffington, Major W. Weigel, Captains Harry Watson, J. L. Gilbreth, D. H. Biddle, D. W. Hand, and R. S. Thomas, Lieutenants J. A. Brockman, R. James, and Major S. H. Waddams.

MRS. BELLINA'S TRIAL BEGUN

Get Jury in Case of Mother Who Slew James Montiglia, Artist.

Mrs. Rosa Traina Bellina, who killed James Montiglia, an artist, at the door of his studio, 284 First Street, Brooklyn, on Aug. 25, was placed on trial for her life yesterday before Justice Kelby in the Supreme Court. She is charged with murder in the first degree.

On account of the sympathy which many talesmen manifested for the woman, who has two children, her counsel, Edward J. Reilly, and Assistant District Attorney Warbasse, who is prosecuting the defendant, met with considerable difficulty in selecting the jury, which took all day.

Mr. Reilly has not intimated what defense will be offered for the woman. From his examination of talesmen it developed that much stress would probably be laid on the wrongs that Mrs. Bellina said she suffered at the hands of Montiglia.

During the work of selecting a jury Mrs. Bellina fondled her youngest child, Frances, 6 months old, in her arms. Behind her sat Mrs. W. M. Stonehill of the Brooklyn City Mission, who is looking after the other child, Rosa, 18 months old. Mrs. Bellina smiled and nodded an approval when the first juryman was selected. He is Michael L. Fallon, a bank clerk, of 873 Greene Avenue. He is married and has one child.

Mrs. Bellina is 20 years old. Her beauty started the friendship between her and her artist victim. He asked her to pose with her baby for a new painting of the "Madonna and Child." Their friendship became stronger, and the woman's husband left her. After she lost her home she pleaded with Montiglia to protect and provide for her. He laughed at her when she asked him to marry her, and early on the morning of Aug. 25 she went to his studio to repeat her request. He turned her away. She came back again carrying her youngest child in her arms and a concealed revolver. When Montiglia came to the door she killed him.

CONTRABAND HIDDEN IN SING SING CELLS

Knives, Hammers, and Files Discovered in Two-Day Hunt for Revolvers.

CONVICTS WRITE GOVERNOR

His Secretary Makes Search in the Prison After Two Inmates Give an Alarm.

Special to The New York Times.

OSSINING, N. Y., Sept. 20.—Knives, hammers, and "rat-tail" files, capable of inflicting murderous wounds, were found in the cells at Sing Sing today when the entire prison was searched for concealed weapons.

The search was the result of the investigation begun yesterday, when, under the direction of William A. Orr, Governor Whitman's secretary, thirteen cells in the main cell block were searched for six revolvers and three boxes of cartridges.

Governor Whitman received a letter on Saturday night signed by two inmates of Sing Sing, in which they said they knew the revolvers and cartridges to be concealed in a certain cell. Mr. Orr arrived at the prison yesterday and interviewed the two prisoners and a third man ,and they repeated their story.

With officers, Mr. Orr went to the cell and made a thorough search, ripping the bedding apart and investigating every nook and cranny hwere the weapons might be concealed. hTere was no sign of either revolvers or cartridges, and the six cells on either side of the designated cell were searched without result.

The second search was made today. At 9 o'clock in the morning all the convicts were taken from the workshops and their other tasks and sent to the cells. Then the officials carefully went through all the cells and looked for revolvers and cartridges. None was found, but the searchers gathered in several knives, some "rat-tail" files, two hammers, and a set of dice. In addition they found that some of the inmates had money, which was contraband and was confiscated.

In the afternoon all the shops, dormitories, and every place frequented by the inmates were searched but no revolvers or cartridges were found.

This week starts with sixteen men in solitary confinement as against forty-one last week. Five of these are in the new condemned cells, which the inmates have nicknamed "The Walves' Den," and among them are Marcus Curtis and "Frenchie" Menet, both of whom are serving sentences to which were added ten years for their taking part in a shooting at Clinton Prison, when the Sergeant of Arms was assaulted and nearly killed.

SHERIFF ARRESTS BALY.

Agitator Held to Have Violated Terms of His Release.

Jeremiah Baly, one of the leaders of the Standard Oil strike at Bayonne, who was arrested by Sheriff Kinkead and later released on his own recognizance on condition that he would agitate no more, was arrested at his home in Elizabeth last night by Deputy Sheriffs Johnson and Mattigan and locked up in the Hudson County Jail in Jersey City.

It is asserted that Baly broke the conditions of his freedom by going about the county making speeches attacking Sheriff Kinkead for his work in bringing the strike at Bayonne to an abrupt end.

MAYOR IN CHARGE OF ROFRANO HUNT

Orders Trial of Detectives Who Let Indicted Man Slip Past Them.

TO OFFER $5,000 REWARD

Woman Admits She Lied at Montimagno Trial—Carnivale Haggles Over Confession.

Mayor Mitchel yesterday ordered that Detectives Henry Jessup and Clinton Wood of the Central Office Squad be tried on charges of failing to arrest Michael A. Rofrano, former Deputy Street Cleaning Commissioner, who has been indicted for planning the murder of Mike Gaimari. The Mayor said he would appear before the Board of Aldermen today with a request that a reward of $5,000 be offered for the capture of Rofrano.

The Mayor had a long consultation with Police Commissioner Woods yesterday, and the escape of Rofrano last week Monday was discussed in detail. Woods and Jessup were told to trail Rofrano from the moment that Frank Fennimore announced his intention to confess. They were told to call up the District Attorney's office every half hour to receive instructions. They called up at 10:30 o'clock, but at that time Fennimore had not yet told his story, and the detectives were directed to call up again at noon.

They then followed Rofrano to the Municipal Building, where they said he lurked about the corridors until he suddenly turned and discovered the two detectives. From that moment he slipped out of sight, and at 12 o'clock when Fennimore had already confessed the detectives reported to the District Attorney's office that Rofrano had disappeared.

In reference to his own attitude toward Rofrano Mayor Mitchel said yesterday that he and Street Cleaning Commissioner Fetherston had discussed the transfer of Rofrano from the department many months before his name was in any way connected with the Gaimari murder. They decided to let the matter rest until the Mayor's return from his trip to the West. In the meantime the Gaimari murder scandal broke, and when the Mayor came back he decided it would be advisable to retain Rofrano in his position in order that he might be within reach if wanted. It was on the Mayor's advice that Rofrano took the stand at the trial of Gaimari's slayer, Gaetano Montimagno.

Yesterday's investigation of the Gaimari murder led to the arrest of Betty Fallot of 235 East Thirty-third Street, a witness at the Montimagno trial. The woman was arrested by Detective Cuniffe, who found her apartment full of newspapers containing accounts of the Rofrano scandal. When taken before District Attorney Perkins Miss Fallot admitted that she had lied on the stand when she said she had seen the shooting.

She told Mr. Perkins that she was persuaded to commit perjury by two Italians who came to her rooms at 1,332 Second Avenue, after the shooting and promised her that a prominent politician in the Second District would get her a good job, if she would appear as a witness. They instructed her in a version of the shooting, which she repeatedly faithfully on the witness stand.

"And after the trial was over," she told Mr. Perkins yesterday, "I went around to take a look at the spot where I said the shooting had taken place. I had not seen it before."

The District Attorney's office failed to obtain any confession from "Rocks" Carnivale yesterday further than that he had lied at his trial when he said he did not know Montimagno. He admitted yesterday that he knew Montimagno for two years before the shooting.

Pauline Samuels, sweetheart of Carnivale, visited him again and tried to induce him to tell all he knew of Rofrano's part in the Gaimari murder. Carnivale maintained a stubborn silence however, manifesting no desire to speak unless he was compensated by a reduction of his sentence.

Acting on a report that Rofrano was hiding in Westchester, Detective De Gilio of the Homicide Bureau and Deputy Sheriffs Cherico and Moore of White Plains visited Valhalla yesterday, where the new aqueduct work is going on. Several commissary camps were searched because Frank Rocco, who runs the largest one at Valhalla, is a personal friend of the fugitive. Rocco told the officers that he had not seen Rofrano for some time.

MASSACHUSETTS PRIMARIES

Great Interest in the Contests for the Gubernatorial Nominations.

BOSTON, Sept. 20.—Interest in the joint primaries in Massachusetts tomorrow will be divided between the contests for the nominations for Governor in the Republican and Democratic Parties, and the operation of the new law covering the election.

The three candidates who are seeking the Republican nomination are Grafton D. Cushing, former Speaker of the House; Eugene N. Foss, who after having been elected Congressman and Governor on the Democratic ticket, has returned to the Republican fold, and ex-Congressman Samuel W. McCall, the party's candidate last year. Calvin Coolidge of Northampton and Councillor Guy A. Ham of Milton are contending for the nomination for Lieutenant Governor.

On the Democratic side, Governor Walsh is opposed for a third-term nomination by Congressman F. S. Deitrick, Nelson B. Clark of Beverly, for Governor, will be the only candidate nominated by the Progressives for a State office.

The primary will be the first test of a new law under which the voter is not obliged to announce his party affiliation, but his ballot must be a straight party vote or it will be invalidated.

WOULD PAY NATIONAL GUARD

One Way to Facilitate Preparedness, Chairman Hay Points Out.

Suggestions that one way to improve the national defense would be to pay every National Guardsman at least $50 a year out of the Federal treasury and that the field artillery force ought to be doubled, were made by Representative Hay, Chairman of the House Committee on Military Affairs, in an interview made public yesterday by the National Security League. The interview was obtained by a representative of the league.

Mr. Hay does not believe that Congress will favorably consider any legislation looking to compulsory military service. He regards the development of the National Guard into an effective reserve force as the wisest step and would encourage enlistment by giving guardsmen 25 per cent. of the pay allowed for the regular army. He is particularly impressed with the importance of the work done by the field artillery, but does not mention coast artillery because that feature of defense is under the jurisdiction of the Fortifications Committee.

"I shall be guided in large measure by the President's views," he said. "Our present standing army is allowed by law a strength of 100,000 men. About 91,000 are actually enlisted. The army now costs us $120,000,000 a year. The full strength of the army at 120,000, in addition to pay given the National Guard, would cost us $140,000,000. If we had 140,000 men, we would have to spend $160,000,000. If we had an army of 500,000 men, which some people advocate, it would cost us $700,000,000. I do not believe that the people would want that burden or that they would expect Congress to impose it upon them. Neither do I believe that the American people want compulsory military service.

"I heartily agree with the President that our citizen soldiery should be given more attention. It might be proper, for instance, to encourage enlistment in the National Guard by paying its members 25 per cent. of the amount paid to regular soldiers, which would be $50 a year and which would probably cost us $8,000,000 additional to the present army cost for the first year. It may be wise, also, to increase the field artillery, now consisting of six regiments, to twice that number, as the war in Europe has demonstrated that this is a most potent arm of the service."

ALL-DAY "HIGHLAND FLING."

Entertainment for Village Library to Have Unique Features.

The residents of Highland Falls, on the Hudson, are planning an all-day entertainment for next Saturday for the benefit of the endowment fund of the village library. The suggestion of one of the prominent patronesses that they call their affair a "Highland Fling" has been adopted. The entertainment will be held on property belonging to Mrs. J. Pierpont Morgan, adjoining the Herbert Satterlee property in Highland Falls, and it is expected that a large number of persons prominent socially will motor there for the occasion.

One of the features will be an exhibition of the police dogs owned by Miss Anne Tracy. Jacques Suzanne, the artist and explorer, will show the Eskimo dogs and sledge that are to accompany him to the North next Spring on his next expedition. A fine animal named North Star was the leader of Suzanne's dogs, but it died last year, and the skin was presented to the American Museum of Natural History.

There will be dancing all day between the other events. These will include a gymkhana in the forenoon, a better babies contest, a Montessori exhibit, and a horticultural exhibit. In the evening there will be a dancing contest, and child welfare lantern slides will be shown. To add atmosphere befitting the name of the entertainment, arrangements have been made to have Scotch Highlanders play their bagpipes when the gates are opened and at the commencement of each event during the day, and in addition music will be furnished by the West Point Band. The affair will be held under the auspices of the Social Welfare League, and 25 cents admission will be charged.

The Highland Falls Library, for the endowment fund of which the "Highland Fling" is to be held, has been supported entirely by Mrs. J. Pierpont Morgan for thirty years.

KATZ GOES IN BANKRUPTCY.

Ex-Brewer Who Served Term in Sing Sing Owes $115,692.

Charles Katz of 1,229 Park Avenue, formerly President of the Eastern Brewing Company, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy yesterday giving liabilities of $115,692 and no assets. Katz was convicted in 1913 of grand larceny, and after serving more than a year in Sing Sing was pardoned last January by Governor Whitman. With associates Katz used $110,000 worth of Davis-Daly mining stocks belonging to the late F. Augustus Heinze as collateral for a loan of $50,000 from the Windsor Trust Company. Subsequently they sold the collateral on the curb market at a profit of $48,000. Katz alone was convicted.

In the petition filed yesterday it was stated that Katz also has unknown liabilities for a large amount as maker and indorser of notes of the Eastern Brewing Company. The company was put into bankruptcy in Brooklyn on Aug. 26, 1914, with liabilities of $900,000. Katz was not President of the concern then. Among his creditors are the following stockholders: Trustee of A. O. Brown & Co., $6,000; Feuchtwanger, Cahn & Co., $8,000; Sternberger, Sinn & Co., $1,643; James J. Soloman and others, $1,236; Werner & Brown, $500, and Wasserman Brothers, $100. Among the other creditors are the Superintendent of Banks, $2,000, possible liability as stockholder for thirteen shares in the Union Bank of Brooklyn; Thomas R. English, as Trustee in bankruptcy of the Eastern Brewing Company, $20,000, money advanced by the company from 1902 to 1914; estate of Charles Lesinsky, $24,000, and estate of Bertha Lesinsky, $3,000.

Katz was to have been examined in supplementary proceedings yesterday on a judgment of $4,058, obtained by Bloomingdale Brothers, but Judge Hough restrained the examination for a year. The judgment was on a note he made for the accommodation of Adolph Prince.

FIND WOMAN SLAIN, HUSBAND IS SOUGHT

12-Year-Old Boy Hears Shots and Reaches His Mother's Side as She Dies of Wounds.

NO ONE SAW THE MURDER

Edward Doran, Who Had Quarreled with His Wife Over Money, Wanted by Brooklyn Police.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Forster were in the dining room in the basement of their home, 219 Dean Street, Brooklyn, shortly before 9 o'clock last night, when the door from the kitchen was flung open and Edward Doran, from whose wife, Mrs. Hannah Doran, the Forsters leased their home, rushed into the room. He wore no hat or coat and appeared greatly excited. He rushed past the Forsters, who would have stayed him, and dashed into the street, exclaiming:

"She's shot! She's shot!"

The Doran home, 422 Pacific Street, backs upon the Forster home, and Mr. and Mrs. Forster hurried around there whence Doran had apparently come by climbing the back fence and crossing the Forsters' rear yard to their kitchen door which, they found later, he had forced open.

On the steps of the Doran home they found Mrs. Doran and her 12-year-old son, Edward, who was holding her head and sobbing. There was a crowd around them, and through this Dr. Wronker of the Long Island College Hospital pushed his way. He said that Mrs. Doran was dead, five bullets having struck her; one in the chest and two in each arm, as though she had flung her arms about her to protect herself.

No one had seen Mrs. Doran shot, though there were several persons to tell how husband and wife had been together on the steps just before the shooting, so several detectives started out to look for Doran. They traced him to Bergen Street, where they learned he had boarded a car. They lost his trail there.

Edward had heard the reports of the shots that killed his mother, for he had been playing only half a block away, and had run to her at once, but had not seen his father. But Joseph Alger of 147 Bond Street told the police he had run up on hearing the reports of the shots, and had seen a man without hat or coat spring from the side of the woman, over whom he had been bending, and run into the house. The police suppose this was Doran.

A youth who said he was Mrs. Doran's brother, but who would not tell his name, said Doran had threatened several times in the last six months to kill his wife, but no one, even Mrs. Doran, had taken the threats seriously.

The couple had three children, Thomas, 18 years old, and Margaret, 16, as well as Edward, and had lived for a long time in the Pacific Street house. Mrs. Doran owned this property, as well as the house occupied by the Forsters and another at 427 Pacific Street, which she operated as a lodging house. She had one lodger, J. M. Filmore, in her own home.

Filmore has the parlor floor, and he told the police he was preparing to shave last evening when Doran passed his door, called "Good evening" to him and went on into the basement. Presently he heard husband and wife talking on the front steps, which are visible from Filmore's windows. He did not realize they were quarreling, he said, and, busy with his razor, did not even look out of the window when he heard the reports of the shots, mistaking them for firecrackers which, he said, he supposed some boys had set off in the street. He heard Doran race through the basement and slam the door as he emerged into the yard and climbed the fence to the Forster property, and then he looked from the window when he heard young Edward cry out his mother was shot.

Filmore told the police Mrs. Doran was accustomed to carry her purse in the bosom of her dress, and from another source which they wouldn't reveal, the detectives said they had learned that Doran had taken this when he bent over his wife.

Doran has been a motorman on the Brooklyn Rapid Transit, and has always been plentifully supplied with money since, the police say, Mrs. Doran ran the household on her earnings and Doran kept his for himself. Recently, however, he is said to have been drinking heavily, and it is the police theory that he ran out of money and killed his wife when she refused to give him more.

SENDS REPORT TO CANADA.

Stefansson Informs Government of His Land Discovery.

OTTAWA, Sept. 20.—The official report from Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the explorer, that he had discovered new land in the arctic reached the Minister of Naval Affairs today in a message from Nome.

Stefansson's report to the Government briefly describes his journey in the North, and announces the discovery of the new land. He says that on Aug. 23 he sailed from Herschel Island in the Polar Bear, which he chartered to convey supplies to a base on Prince Patrick Island. He announces that he will continue his work of exploration. Regarding the discovery and his plans, Stefansson wires the Canadian Government:

"Landed south end Prince Patrick Island June, 1915. Proceeded north, finished mapping west coast Patrick Island.

"June 18 discovered new land of considerable but unknown size near 78 degrees north, 117 degrees west. Followed coast south, southeast by east three days. Total demonstrable extent coast over 100 miles, nearly straight line. Land in parts rugged. Game abundant.

"Started south June 22; reached the Bay of Mercy; July 14 to 20 crossed Banks Island diagonally with dog packs. Reached home (schooner Mary Sachs ten miles southeast of Cape Kellett) Aug. 8. No accident or hardship on trip."

Stefansson reports the arrival of the Polar Bear at Cape Kellett, Aug. 11. He chartered the boat "as the only chance of attaining needed northerly base to get supplies from Herschel Island and land them at furthest attainable north."

Stefansson's report concludes as follows:

"Sail from Herschel tomorrow, (Aug. 23) with first adequate outfit."

Stefansson in the announcement last week of his discovery to THE NEW YORK TIMES said that he was able to take one sextant observation which fixed the situation of the new land as 77 degrees 48 minutes north latitude and 115 degrees 43 minutes west longitude.

2,014 ARRIVE ON FOUR LINERS

Greatest Rush Since War Began—Orduna Halted in War Zone.

Four transatlantic liners came up the bay yesterday morning bringing a total of 2,014 passengers of all classes, which is the record on one day since the rush of refugees last Fall, just after the war commenced.

Of this number 886 came on the Holland-America liner Rotterdam from Rotterdam via Falmouth, 766 were on the American liner Philadelphia from Liverpool, the Orduna of the Cunard Line had 316, and the Italian steamer San Guglielmo from Naples carried only 47 passengers.

Captain T. McComb Taylor of the Orduna said when the ship was right in the danger zone off the south coast of Ireland a patrol boat fired a shot, its Captain ordering him to stop immediately because he could not make out the Orduna's signal.

"I cannot understand why he did not make out our signal as the weather was very clear. After he had steamed up very close to our stern and was satisfied as to who we were the commander ordered me to proceed."

Captain Taylor said that it was very dangerous to have halted the Orduna like that right in the submarine zone, and he said he intended to report the matter on his return to Liverpool.

During the stay of the Orduna in her home port Captain Taylor was presented with a purse of $500 by the War Risks Association for his skill in saving his ship from German submarine attack two voyages ago in the Irish Channel.

The Rotterdam left Rotterdam on Sept. 8 and was held up by the British authorities for ten days in the Downs for inspection, but no one was taken off. At Falmouth she had to wait thirty-six hours for passengers and mails for New York.

The Philadelphia was delayed twenty-four hours because of an inferior quality of coal taken on at Liverpool.

TO FINISH MOFFAT ROAD.

Denver Syndicate Takes Over the Line—Voting Trust Dissolved.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Col., Sept. 20.—A syndicate of Denver men, headed by Lawrence C. Phipps, will complete the Moffat Road to Salt Lake City. Newman Erb, who was the principal figure in the reorganization of the road two years ago, relinquished control last November. Other members of the local syndicate are Henry M. Porter, Gerald Hughes, and Charles Boettcher. The interest of these men in the property became known today, when the voting trust under which the stock had been held was dissolved.

The line is now controlled exclusively by Denver capital and work on the completion of the road will be vigorously pressed.

When the Erb interests reorganized the property and changed the name from eht Denver, Northwestern & Pacific to the Denver & Salt Lake, the property was incumbered by a first mortgage of $35,000,000. This mortgage, which bears interest at 5 per cent., secures a bond issue for the same amount, which is due on May 1, 1943.

TO SAVE SHILLITANO, GIRL SAYS SHE LIED

Nellie Di Carlo Asserts Police Compelled Her to Perjure Herself at Trial.

TRIPPED UP IN RECANTATION

Four Witnesses to be Examined in Appeal of "Paper Box Kid," Now in Death House.

Describing a trick chair which she said was used to intimidate her at Police Headquarters, Nellie Di Carlo, 18 years old, of 243 Mulberry Street, swore before Judge Malone in General Sessions yesterday that two detectives had coerced her into committing perjury at a murder trial more than two years ago. As the result of her story at that time Oreste Shillitano, 26 years old, of 241 Mulberry Street, known as the "Paper Box Kid," was sentenced to die in the electric chair for killing John Rizzo and two policemen—William B. Heaney and Charles A. Teare—in Mulberry Street.

But now the girl asserts that she lied at the trial, and that she was instructed in her testimony by Detectives Di Gilio and Gambardella, who threatened to "beat and kill" her if she did not tell a story that would bring about Shillitano's conviction. She says she was taken to Police Headquarters and compelled to sign an affidavit containing a false version of the shooting in the presence of Inspector Faurot and Commissioner Dougherty.

"Then the detectives took me to another room," said the girl yesterday, "and when I got in there I sat down on a chair because I was afraid and tired. All of a sudden, something happened. I don't know how to explain it, but the chair shot clear up to the ceiling and then it fell down with me in it. Then I became unconscious and did not recover for more than an hour."

Three other witnesses for the State in the Shillitano cases, besides Nellie Di Carlo, have retracted their testimony as given at the trial of the "Paper Box Kids," whose death was postponed pending the decision of the Court of Appeals on a motion for a new trial. On the bases of the retractions, the Court of Appeals directed Judge Malone to examine these witnesses in order to ascertain whether they testified falsely at the trial or had been tampered with by the friends of the defendant since conviction. The hearing began yesterday and will be continued today.

Assistant District Attorney Wasservogel cross-examined Nellie Di Carlo and proved to the court that the girl was very hazy as to dates and incidents. She insisted she signed her affidavit at Police Headquarters on May 6, three days after the shooting, whereas the records show that this was done on May 13. After contradicting herself in many important details, the girl broke into tears, and flashing angry eyes at Mr. Wasservogel, remarked:

"You got me all excited, Mr. Wasservogel, and now I'm all twisted."

The witness insisted that she did not see the shooting of which Shillitano was convicted. She said she was asleep at the time. She never would have told lies at the trial if she had not been afraid of Detectives Di Gilio and Gambardella. But when her confessor refused her communion because she admitted to him that she had perjured herself at Shillitano's trial, she decided to brave the wrath of the police and tell the truth. She asserted the priest urged her to go at once to the District Attorney and purge herself of her falsehoods.

RACED TO HUSBAND, DYING.

Wife a Patient in the Same Hospital Where Clayton Expired.

Special to The New York Times.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Sept. 20.—Mrs. Mary Clayton of 664 Monroe Avenue is critically ill tonight in the General Hospital unaware that her husband, George Clayton, a prominent shipbuilder, died in the same hospital last night.

Mrs. Clayton arrived here after a race against death from Pueblo, Col., where she was visiting her son. She was ill before she left the West, and the excitement and worry that accompanied the trip after she was told of her husband's dangerous illness led to a collapse.

As soon as she arrived here physicians ordered her removal to the hospital, where four hours later her husband died. There is little hope of her recovery, but doctors attending her announced tonight that as there was an improvement in her condition they had advised withholding the news that her husband had died.

Mr. Clayton was connected with the New Jersey Dry Dock Company.

Jersey City Police Doubt Truth of Tale Told by Boys.

After an all-day and unsuccessful search of the pond at Montgomery and Florence Streets, Jersey City, the police were convinced last night that the small boys who told of having seen three men in an automobile dump a white bundle "that might have contained a body" into the pond on Sunday, were telling a tale originating in their imagination. The search, however, has not been abandoned, and it is possible that the pond may be drained today.

There are many who believe the little sheet of water may hide a mystery, for the police found the track of the automobile at the spot where the boys say it stopped, and there are tire marks to show that it turned about at that point. The search was conducted by Captain James Larkin of the West Montgomery Street Police Station. Last night the police still guarded the pond, and today it will be decided whether the search will be continued.

NAVY BALLOON SOON READY.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—The first of the navy's fleet of dirigible balloons is now practically completed, and will be ready for delivery within a few weeks. The Connecticut Aircraft Company, which has the contract for building these dirigibles, today notified the Office of Aeronautics of the Navy Department that the balloon will be ready for the official trials within the time specified.

The various parts will be assembled in Boston, after which the machine will be disassembled, packed and shipped to the navy aeronautic station at Pensacola, Fla., where the trials are to take place. The navy is building a floating hangar and a hydrogen plant at Pensacola for the accommodation of its dirigibles.

This first of the navy's war balloons, while it is a comparatively small one, being about 180 feet long, will embody the improvements which American naval officers have noted during their observations with the armies of Europe. It will be equipped with a 140 horse power engine and twin propellers of the swivelling type. For military reasons, some of the improved features of the machine are kept secret. The Administration's program for the national defense, to be submitted to Congress this Winter, will call for a large number of dirigibles and aeroplanes.

DEATH RATE IS LOWER.

In Spite of Heat Week's Record is Better Than Last Year.

Although the week which ended on Sunday was one of the warmest here in September in many years, the death rate was .83 per 1,000 population lower than during the corresponding week last year. The report of the Department of Health, made public yesterday, records that four persons died as a result of sunstroke, as against one death from the same cause last year.

There were 1,201 deaths during the last week, making a rate of 11.60, as compared with 1,330 deaths and a rate of 12.43 during the week that ended Sept. 19, 1914. The Health Department points out that this decrease in rate means a saving of 92 lives this year. The death rate for the first thirty-eight weeks of 1915 is 13.40, as compared with 13.94 during the same period in 1914.

The following causes of death showed a decrease: Scarlet fever, diphtheria and croup, pulmonary tuberculosis, Bright's disease, and nephritis.

MURDOCK CAN SEE ROOSEVELT IN 1916

Hard to Imagine a Progressive National Convention Not Naming Him.

MOOSE PLAN BIG FIGHT

Perkins Urges County Chairmen to Get Out a Big Enrollment for Next Spring's Primaries.

Leaders of the Progressive Party at a meeting in the Hotel Manhattan yesterday laid plans for keeping the organization alive and making a hard fight in the Presidential campaign next year. Victor Murdock, National Chairman, intimated that he expected Colonel Roosevelt to become the party's Presidential candidate again, as he said it was pretty hard to imagine that the Progressive National Convention would not nominate him.

Mr. Murdock prophesied a big split in the Democratic Party within the next six months. He said he saw no chance of the Progressives and Republicans getting together.

"Do you think Col. Roosevelt will be the Progressive candidate for President next year?" Mr. Murdock was asked.

"It is hard to imagine the Progressives holding a National Convention and not nominating him," he replied, "but he is not inclined to make another sacrifice next year."

"You mean that if the Colonel was sure of being elected he would be a candidate?"

"That's about right," said Mr. Murdock.

Mr. Murdock said that if the party did not take the Colonel they would find good Presidential timber in Governor Hiram Johnson of California, or a man of great force and national reputation like Major Gen. George W. Goethals.

Moose to Stay Out.

"It is impossible for the Progressives and the Republicans to get together," went on Mr. Murdock. "The Republican Party has not changed, either in men or methods. Root, Penrose, and the others are still in charge. The 1912 campaign proved that there are 4,000,000 people who do not believe in the fetich of a party label. Once broken away from the old party they will always be independent."

The meeting was of the County Chairmen of the party in the State, and was presided over by State Chairman Walter A. Johnson of Westchester County. He said there was need to discuss matters of organization, the coming election, party enrollment, and the attitude of Progressives toward the proposed new State Constitution. Besides some fifty-five County Chairmen and Mr. Murdock there were present George W. Perkins, William H. Childs of Brooklyn, William Halpin, William H. Hotchkiss, Samuel McK. Lindsay of Columbia University, Judge William L. Ransom, and Michael A. Schaap.

Mr. Perkins urged the members of the party to get out a full enrollment for next Spring's primaries when delegates to the National Convention will be elected. The biggest enrollment of the party, he said, was in 1913, when the figures reached 113,000, and he urged the Chairmen to reach if not pass that figure this year.

Murdock Talks Tariff.

Mr. Murdock, after predicting that the Democratic Party would go to pieces, criticised the new tariff and declared that it had not reduced the burden to the ultimate consumer. He said that if the people turned from the Democratic Party and put the Republican Party into power in 1916 they would get another Payne-Aldrich tariff bill. He said he did not see why the people would want, under these conditions, to jump from the frying pan into the fire, and added that the Progressive Party had the right angle on the tariff proposition.

Mr. Murdock brought reports of the party in the Western States. California, Kansas, and Colorado, he said, were in excellent condition.

"It is the duty of every Progressive," said Mr. Murdock, "to redeem himself, and if he does that others will believe in us. It is the duty of every Progressive to read the national platform of the party about every three months. Give the people the idea that we can win and we will have to enlarge our band wagon.

"You men who live in this State have it largely in your hands to say how quickly victory shall come to the Progressive Party in the country, because all the States in the Union look to New York, and what you do here is of importance to every other State. If you show apathy in this State, so will the country at large. But if you show an earnestness to win, you will electrify the country and the other States will follow your example."

In speaking of the Democratic Party Mr. Murdock said:

"I believe that the Democratic Party is on the verge of an internal explosion, and before March, 1916, there will be an eruption in Congress. The young men of the party have tired of the game and the way it is played by the older men, and these young men are bound to cause a blow-up that will lay the Democratic Party flat within the next six months.

Sees Chance for Taft.

"Believing that, and with the chance that the Republican Party will nominate William Howard Taft as its candidate for President, we have got a splendid fighting chance. If we mean business and put personal effort back of us, things are bound to happen, and a call will come for a vigorous candidate and a vigorous platform."

Speaking of the Constitution, Mr. Murdock said he was not familiar with the amendments, but he did know considerable about the men who had put them through.

"Mr. Root has recanted, but he has not joined the church," said Mr. Murdock.

William H. Hotchkiss and Judge William L. Ransom of the City Court favored the passage of the Constitution.

"In 1912," said Judge Ransom, "our platform was thought to be very radical, but now in 1915 it is conservative, and we see many planks in that platform recommended by the Constitutional Convention. It would be unfortunate if the Constitution wasn't carried."

Chairman Johnson appointed Michael Schaap of New York, Robert H. Elder of Kings, and Dr. L. B. Dorr of Erie as a committee to feel out the sentiment in the various counties as to the Constitution. They are to report their findings at a meeting to be held in this city within two weeks.

Suggestions as to the best way to get out a large enrollment were then made. It was decided to send through the State several hundred banners inscribed "Enroll in the Progressive Party under the Bull Moose emblem." Cards will be distributed to voters asking them to go to the polls and enroll in the Bull Moose column.

The conference will meet again at State Headquarters in the Forty-second Street Building on Thursday, Sept. 30.

Progressive leaders from several States are to be the guests of Mr. Perkins and other New York Progressives at a dinner at the Hotel Manhattan tonight in honor of Mr. Murdock. Among the leaders who have been invited are William Flinn and E. A. Van Valkenburg of Pennsylvania; Everett Colby, Irving Taylor, and J. A. Hopkins of New Jersey; Herbert Knox Smith of Connecticut; Matthew Hale and Francis W. Bird of Massachusetts; H. P. Gardner of Maine, and William Savacool of New Hampshire.

Murdock on Preparedness.

Mr. Murdock is an advocate of preparedness and on his way here from his home, in Wichita, Kans., he spoke on the subject in St. Louis. To a NEW YORK TIMES reporter yesterday he said:

"The general feeling throughout the West, as I observed it, is that we should load our six-shooters and be ready for eventualities. I think the country beyond the Mississippi is more nearly neutral than the East, at least New York. There is not the pro-Ally or pro-German feeling there that predominates here. Rather, they seem to feel that the royal houses of England and the Continent are having a bad row, that whichever comes out ahead will be pretty disagreeable, and that, in order to be able even to outline our rights, let alone enforce them, we should prepare. The West does not believe, as does the East, that England is fighting primarily for the advancement of civilization.

"I do not think the remoteness of those in the West from the Atlantic Coast increases their sense of security or diminishes their sense of danger, for they know that if a blow were struck at any part of the country every part would be equally affected. Everywhere I found the war the dominant subject of thought.

"I am for preparedness as the only sensible policy in an era when militarism is rampant. The West is for peace, but to maintain peace we must be in a position to demand the respect of other nations. I am for a fleet of twenty dreadnoughts, a fleet of fast cruisers and a large standing army with an efficient reserve army. We invented the aeroplane; our army has twelve and Germany has 1,500. We invented the submarine, and half our fleet of submarines is put out of commission in manoeuvres."

RED HAT FOR IRELAND?

Renewed Suggestion That He May Soon Be Created a Cardinal.

ROME, Sept. 19, via Paris Sept. 20.—Because of jealousies that inevitably would be aroused by selecting new Carinals among the belligerent nations, and also on account of the difficulties that foreign Cardinals would encounter in coming to Rome, the Pope has hitherto let it be understood that he would not call another Consistory until the war is over. But owing to vacancies in the Sacred College—the last new Cardinals having been created May 19, 1914—the idea of a Consistory is again rumored in Vatican circles.

It is being suggested that the Pope will not create Cardinals belonging to the belligerent countries, but appoint only those living in Rome or neutral countries. In this case, it is said, Archbishop Ireland of the United States may be included.

INTERSTATE FIGHT OVER ODOR PLAGUE

Jersey Residents Join Those of Riverside Drive in Calling a Hearing to Abate Nuisance.

SEEK IMMEDIATE ACTION

Obnoxious Fumes, They Charge, Come from Chemical and Sugar Plants at Edgewater.

Residents of New Jersey living on the Palisades opposite that part of Riverside Drive between Eighty-sixth and 125th Streets, where residents of Manhattan long have suffered from acrid fumes and gases coming from the west bank of the Hudson River, will start a determined movement to have that nuisance abated when a public hearing, to which Riverside Drive property owners have been invited, is held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the Borough Hall at Edgewater. The purpose of the hearing will be primarily to ascertain just how extensive is the suffering caused by the obnoxious fumes, and to take immediate steps to hasten action by the proper authorities.

When the wind is from the west the residents along the Manhattan side of the Hudson are distressed by the fumes, and when the wind is from the east Jersey citizens in Cliffside, Grantwood, Hudson Heights, and other adjacent communities suffer. Hundreds of Riverside Drive persons have made written statements showing that the fumes and odors not only caused exceeding discomfiture, but in cases of weak lungs and throat affections more serious consequences.

They first appealed to the Attorney General of New York, who assured them that a public nuisance in New Jersey was out of his jurisdiction. They then made an appeal to Governor Fielder of New Jersey to bring relief. In a letter of Dec. 3, 1914, he promised the Acid Fumes Committee of the West End Association, of which Franklin P. Duryea was Chairman, that he would "take all steps possible to secure relief" if the offenders were pointed out. Complaints were then referred to Mayor Mitchel, and Dr. Joseph Shears, General Sanitary Expert, and Dr. A. K. Smith, Sanitary Inspector of the Board of Health, were directed to trace the fumes.

They subsequently reported that they had traced odors of sulphur dioxide or trioxide to the plant of the General Chemical Company at Edgewater, and an odor of burned sugar to the plant of the Corn Products Company. The origin of the gases as found by the Health Department expert and engineer immediately was made known to Governor Fielder, but the fumes still hover alternately over the Palisades and Riverside Drive.

The movement inaugurated by the Riverside Drive and west side residents was unanimously indorsed by persons on the Palisades.

At the time the report of the Health Department investigators was made public S. H. Steele, President of the General Chemical Company, said:

"We have spent and are still spending large sums of money constantly to consere these gases which some persons suppose we turn loose into the air. In reality, if all the gases of which the Riverside Drive residents complain escaped from our plant we would have to stop paying dividends. We will welcome an investigation by any committee of residents and experts authorized to inquire into the source of these gases. We will co-operate with them in every way, and if it should be found that we can help to abate this nuisance we shall be only too happy to do everything in that direction."

The Hudson Heights Protective Association which began the first organized fight against the gases nuisance on behalf of the Jersey citizens will be well represented at the public hearing this afternoon.

1,805 ENTER CITY COLLEGE.

Registration for Fall Term Shows Increase of 400.

The College of the City of New York opened yesterday with a registration of 1,805 students, an increase of 400 over last year. Students to the number of 1,780 registered in the Townsend Harris Hall Preparatory School, which is connected with the college, but owing to lack of facilities it is believed by the Faculty that a number of students will be forced to go to other high schools. In the opinion of Dean C. L. Brownson of the college department, the registration of the institution will be increased to 1,900 students before the Fall term is over.

The only change in the Faculty is the resignation of Dr. Morris A. Brisco as instructor in political science. Dr. Brisco was recently appointed to head the department of political science in the University of Iowa.

CAPT. N. A. GRAY SUED AS WAR CONTRACTOR

Reputed German Agent Named in Action Over Purchases for the Allies.

PARTNER DEMANDS PROFITS

Asserts Syndicate Has Arranged for $12,000,000 Deals—Injunction Is Issued.

The recent stories accusing Captain Newenham A. Gray of being here in the interest of the German Government and not for the purpose of obtaining supplies for the Allies are recalled by a suit filed against him in the Supreme Court. Besides the accusation of sailing under false colors socially and so gaining an introduction to the Army and Navy Club, the Captain was said to be an object of interest to the Federal Government, which was investigating his antecedents in an effort to find out if he was seeking our army and navy secrets for the benefit of Germany.

The suit against the Captain grew out of his activities in getting contracts in the interest of the Allies. The plaintiff is Frank E. Webb and the codefendants are Robert Michaelis and Nathaniel G. Prince, Englishmen interested in getting war contracts from the Allies, and J. Hunter Byrd and George R. Maxwell of St. Louis. Captain Gray has an office at 11 Broadway.

In his complaint Mr. Webb said that he was jointly interested with the defendants on all of the contracts obtained in behalf of the Allies and that everything was going along swimmingly when Byrd and Prince organized the Imperial Contracting Company to take over the obtained contracts for the purpose, it was alleged, of depriving the other members of the syndicate of their share of the profits.

A temporary injunction was issued by Justice Delehanty restraining the distribution of any profits pending the suit. It was said that contracts amounting to $12,000,000 had been obtained by the syndicate and that among the orders received was one for 100,000,000 rounds of cartridges and 12,000,000 rifles for the British Government and 25,000 horses for the Italian Government.

So far only one of the defendants has answered Mr. Webb's complaint. That was Mr. Byrd, who said that Mr. Webb was introduced to him as an expert in all classes of war munitions, and especially in textiles, but that later Mr. Webb admitted he was not an official textile inspector for the French Government, as he was represented to be, and that the representation he had been an army Captain in the Philippines was also false. The nearest he had got to being connected with the army was to file numerous applications with the War Department to be appointed to the Quartermaster General's department, but he failed in receiving this recognition.

Captain Gray was recently accused in a newspaper of having incorrectly described himself as having once been connected with the British Army. It was said that the army records did not contain his name. When the Captain was asked about the accusations made against him he refused to answer.

SOMETIMES the liking for Kellogg's Toasted Corn Flakes shows itself very early in life. And the littlest member of the household is the most clamorous of demand!

It's a grand way to get youngsters to take plenty of good top milk. And the tender golden flakes have just the crisp consistency for little teeth to crunch.

When mother says "Corn Flakes" she means Kellogg's—and not one of the three hundred or more imitations and substitutes.

Baby knows the difference at once—simply refusing to eat flakes that are tasteless and tough.

Remember, please, that you don't know Corn Flakes unless you know Kellogg's—the original Toasted Corn Flakes—their goodness insured by our responsibility to over a million homes.

Then too there is the Waxtite package that keeps the fresh, good flavor in—and all other flavors out.

THE PROBLEM STILL UNSOLVED.

One who soberly views the situation in Mexico in all its aspects can derive no encouragement from the latest action of the Pan-American conference. Peace seems as far off as it was a year ago. The best we can hope for, unless the Administration adopts a new plan of action on its own account, after the last meeting of the South American diplomats with Secretary Lansing, now set for Oct. 9, is a continuance of the guerrilla warfare between Villa and Zapata on one hand and the not very effective forces of Carranza on the other. The worst to be feared, in case Villa and his associates get the impression from the reports of that meeting that the United States Government has committed itself to recognition of Carranza, would be an attempted invasion of American territory which would have to be resisted by our soldiers and might be the beginning of enforced intervention.

There are unauthenticated reports of extensive military operations contemplated by the Carranzistas. To counterbalance these are trustworthy reports of four or five separate attacks by the Villa and Zapatista troops on the environs of the Mexican capital, one at Xodrimilcho, which is about as far from the National Palace as East New York is from Times Square. The privations of the populace in Mexico City have not been relieved, and the American residents have appealed to the Red Cross not to discontinue its work. The outrages continue in the northwest. Yet the Latin-American diplomats seem to be convinced that Carranza has established a Government which merits recognition. The Washington correspondent of The World, which has editorially favored Carranza, declares that "nobody in "Washington wants Carranza per-"sonally recognized except the paid "agents and the potential concession "grabbers." If President Wilson does not recognize the wholly inefficient Government of this weak, irascible Coahuila lawyer after Oct. 9, what will he do?

Carranza is afraid to leave his hiding place in Vera Cruz to go to Mexico City. He distrusts his own soldiers. He is trying to secure the support of the American people through the work of hired advocates and dispensers of "news." Recognition of him, in the circumstances, might, as we have pointed out, force us into intervention. We do not want to intervene. We have no desire to occupy Mexico or to be at war with its inhabitants. Carranza's argument, however, that we have no right to make suggestions to him touching the internal affairs of Mexico is merely bombastic nonsense. It is our right and our duty to adopt every possible peaceable means to bring about the restoration of order in the neighboring republic. By our historic policy we have virtually made ourselves responsible to the European Governments for the losses they have suffered. Vast sums of English, German, French, and Spanish money have been invested in Mexico. If we do not act presently the European creditors will be inclined to take the matter in their own hands. Are the American people to be expected to view that sort of thing complacently? As for the American lives sacrificed, the $800,000,000, more or less, of American investments in Mexico, the property of our citizens destroyed, we are not expected to mention such things. A writer in The Independent suggests an immediate embargo on the shipment of all arms and ammunition to Mexicans of all factions, supported, if necessary, by a blockade of the seaports. That would be a somewhat severe course to take, but as 75 per cent. of the Mexican people have had nothing to do with the war, except to suffer the privations it has caused, it would be, at least, humane, and it would serve in time to stop the fighting. The Pan-American experiment having failed, as it now seems, (for its only effective outcome would have been the acceptance by Carranza of the suggestion made in the note of Aug. 11,) some other course must be adopted at Washington or the havoc will continue in Mexico until the European Powers interfere.

THE KERNEL OF IT.

A year ago it would have seemed foolishly unnecessary to state such an elementary fact as that which the Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton so admirably stated in his sermon of Sunday:

> We must let all the world know that American citizenship is a sacred thing, and its rights cannot be violated by any one anywhere without a reckoning.

But today it must be regretfully admitted that it is necessary to say such things, and even to defend them, to restate the axioms. All over the country there are Americans busily engaged in denying what formerly passed for the most self-evident truths. If they do not deny them in words they do by acts. It is being argued that there is something truculent and militaristic about taking any action to preserve the sacredness of American citizenship or to call to a reckoning any one who violates its rights.

We even see public men proposing that when the American right to use the high road to Europe is violated American citizens should stay off it to avoid trouble. Not from persons so highly placed, but with ugly frequency, we hear it said that the men, women, and children who have lost their lives were pleasure seekers who went at their own risk, and that other Americans should not be troubled on their behalf. There has grown up in the country a strange, slack conception of citizenship, its rights and duties, which will some day have a dreadful recoil.

For the basis of governmental action in behalf of injured citizens is not vengeance; it is protection for those who are left. It is the same basis on which rests the idea of police action and punishment by law in city and State; not that the man who took another's life or property should be punished in a spirit of vengeance, but that the next man who walks that way may be safe. It is the concern, not of the Lusitania's dead, but of every living American, that American citizenship should be respected; and if it be put on no higher ground, it is the selfish personal concern of every one of us. It ought not to be necessary to say such things. A year ago it would not have been. For the creation of a body of ignorant opinion which makes it necessary to say them, the men who have lent their aid to it should blush, and may some time have occasion to repent.

THEY CAN AFFORD TO WAIT.

A week from today the New Jersey primaries will be held. The first day of registration fell in the untimely savage heats, and the percentage of stayaways was even unusually ample. Next Tuesday duty may call considerably louder, but a placid indifference about the woman suffrage amendment seems to prevail among the voters. The woman suffragists are alert and active. They have engaging orators. Their methods and demonstrations are various. They strike the eye. They clutch the attention. They are heard respectfully. The politicians are as polite to them as they know how to be. How sincere are pledges made casually in the street or elsewhere in response to requests from comely advocates of the Cause will be known on the night of Oct. 19. At present the only streak of visible and audible enthusiasm is with the women who want the vote. The menfolks who are to give it to or withhold it from them are for the most part painfully inert, "apathetic" is the classical political adjective of description.

It is the offest of "off" years. Politics is but a faint expectation, a query. The great events abroad and their multiple results and replications here, economic, financial, and sentimental, fill the mind, to the exclusion, in a measure hitherto unknown, of purely domestic questions. Even our bread and butter is become an international matter. The scope of the American mind has been enlarged. Our long provincialism has been stirred, is being shaken off. We are not merely spectators of the tragedy of national destinies in Europe; we are affected vitally. A renaissance of prosperity, the gigantic rising of the United States to the seat of financial world power, is going on before our eyes. New trade opportunities and expansions await. Grave international controversies and injuries are still unsettled. Resentments and divisions, born of the war, and alien agitation and interference exist among the people. What hope at such a time is there for woman suffrage?

If women were subject to actual oppression and wrong, irremediable save by arming them with the ballot, there would be no languor among the voters even now. But paper chains won't clank. It is not apparent that the women are suffering "injustice." Their legal position has been steadily ameliorated. In influence, education, range of occupation, economic and social freedom they have steadily advanced. Why this haste to make voters of all the women of legal age in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New York and Massachusetts because some women in those States want to vote, how many or what proportion nobody knows and the suffragists seem content not to know?

Before a suffrage amendment is approved in any State a house-to-house canvass, a census fairly conducted by pro and anti enumerators together, should determine whether the majority of the women of the State is pro or anti. To thrust on all a responsibility ardently desired by some would be an "injustice" to the former and at least a doubtful advantage to the State. Let the woman suffragists wait. Their "reform" is not ripe. It is viewed with indifference, doubt, or hostility by a great number of men, with indifference or hostility by a great number of women. The suffragists have to win these if they can. Meanwhile, presumably, they will be educating themselves for political and public life. They will come to it, if they come to it, better prepared. Postponement will be for their own good and that of the State. It seems to be the opinion of the politicians that the motion to postpone will be carried.

THE PEACEMAKER.

Dr. William Forgo of this city was wafting Mr. Bryan over the sea a few days ago to bring peace to a world in arms. In his ardor to close the gates of Janus the olive bearer would "for love of the cause not only "sacrifice his time, but also pay his "expenses." A heroic resolve, a sublime altruism. If the country was loath to lose that familiar voice, it felt that its loss was Europe's gain. It was resigned. If the parting would be melancholy it was a comfort to know that the missionary was an unselfish volunteer and on nobody's salary list.

Some cog has slipped. Some evil genius has frustrated virtue. Dr. Forgo's and Mr. Bryan's hope has been disappointed. On Sunday Mr. Bryan was in Boston, speaking on arbitration and war referendums, the intermezzo of parts one and two by a band. "He received, it is understood," says a Times dispatch, "$1,500 for his appearance." The gates of Janus are still wide open. The apostle of peace is still reluctantly compelled to take gate money. Why must there be an awakening from so fair a dream? Who has kept peace and Bryan from the outstretched hands of Europe?

AN UNSENTIMENTAL TRANSACTION.

There should be no sentiment in business, or almost none. It may be that business sometimes ruins sentiment, but, on the other hand, it is absolutely certain that sentiment enough will ruin business. For the sake as much of one as of the other they should be kept apart. If we should choose to give food, blankets, war hardware, guns, and ammunition to a belligerent whose cause we wished to see prevail that would be sentiment, and nobody's business. It would incidentally be war. But so long as we are selling these things, taking in payment therefor the buyers' promises to pay, by all means let it be held to a business basis.

There ought to be as little sentiment as difficulty about placing in this country a joint Anglo-French loan up to a billion dollars. We have three billions of credit potentiality lying idle in our banks. Our power to lend has only been discovered. It has limits, but they are undiscovered. They will assert themselves in time. Meanwhile, it is altogether a matter of good business—that is, of what the borrowers can afford to pay and what we can afford to take.

Since the conference on ways and means and terms began we have heard a lot about the sentimental aspect of the transaction. England for the first time in history is obliged to borrow. She is, therefore, stiff and awkward, but really very certain of having popular sentiment on her side. That is nonsense. We are sure the English Commissioners have never encouraged it. In any way you please to argue it, the case comes back each time to a simple matter of terms. And if the Commissioners think that 5 or 5½ per cent. is a very dear rate at which to sell British credit abroad, we beg to remind them that to sell its credit at home, where sentiment should count for something, the British Government had in one year to raise its rate of interest from about 3 to 4½ per cent., and to guarantee the last buyers against loss. The 4½ per cent. war loan last Summer carried a conversion clause permitting holders to exchange at par for higher interest-bearing issues in event of the Government having to raise the rate again. The Government, to sell its war loans at home, was obliged to make them very attractive. To sell a war loan here is has only to make it attractive, and if it be attractive enough, pro-German or any other kind of sentiment may be altogether disregarded.

GOVERNMENT HELP FOR COTTON SPECULATORS.

At the President's request his secretary yesterday called attention to the President's view that Southern banks should content themselves with a rate of interest 2 per cent. above that which they themselves pay for money lent to cotton planters preferring to hold their cotton for higher prices rather than accept the current price. It might be that the banks would accept the advice and yet the President's benevolent intention might fail of fulfillment.

This is not a theory, nor a supposition without a basis in recent experience. The fact is that those who wish to borrow in anticipation of higher prices care little for the rate of interest they pay, so much greater would be their profits if their expectations of an advance were realized. What the planters preferring to hold their crop rather than sell it care about is the amount which they can borrow rather than the interest they must pay. What the lenders think about is the amount they surely can realize from the collateral in the event of the borrowers' views of the market being wrong. This is the point upon which last year's proposal was wrecked, some paltry thousands being applied for of an amount available for loans aggregating $135,000,000.

The trouble was not about the interest, but about the margin, the views of the bankers being incompatible with those of the persons for whose benefit the capital was pledged by benevolent capitalists. Now the Government takes the place of the subscribers of last year's unwanted loan, and there is similar scant appreciation of this year's benevolent proposal. The planters are not rushing their staple into the warehouses provided for the purpose, and the President of the Farmers' Co-operative and Educational Union tells why. They want loans "to expire at the option of the farmer," and they are weary of the talk about loans on other terms. They want the loan to run until the market is right, and the bankers want a due date for their advances. If the market should prove disappointing the planters' losses would exceed their interest due as much as their profits would exceed them if the market went right. It is because the bankers think that those who would profit by the rise should take the risk of the fall that the plan to help the planters sticks on the ways.

Incidentally it may be added that the planters are doing better than might have been expected. Their crop is worth nearly 4 cents more a pound than a year ago, when the low price warned them not to raise too much. If they disregarded the warning why should the Government interest itself to save them from the results of neglecting bankers' advice? There could be no better way of providing a cotton problem for next year.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Is Size of Earnings Reprehensible?

Of several puzzling passages in the truly remarkable "confession" made by Dr. Hillis from the pulpit of Plymouth Church on Sunday, perhaps the one lending itself most easily to comment of an interrogative sort is that in which he said:

> In the interest, also, of other plans, not selfish in nature, I decided to invest a sum of money which I had accumulated as a lecturer and writer. I am ashamed to say how much the sum was, in view of the low wages paid to poor working people.

Evidently the compunction of Dr. Hillis is due to a present feeling on his part either that he had been paid for his writings and lectures more than they were worth, or else that as a clergyman he had no right to earn money in a way that for another man would be perfectly honest.

The first theory of his regret or remorse ascribes to him what most people would call a morbid sensitiveness, for certainly the American public was under no compulsion either to read or to hear the doctor if it didn't want to do so, and it paid for these privileges a price established in a free and open market. As for the other explanation, where is he going to draw the line as marking what material recompense a clergyman as such can, and what he cannot, in consistency with his obligations, receive from those whom he serves? At one extreme is the contention, not infrequently made in the past, that he should get nothing at all, and at the other that he should take whatever his abilities command. Common practice probably leans in the latter rather than in the former direction, for few indeed are the clergymen who hesitate, when opportunity offers, to progress from minor to major charges, with the incidental advance from a small to a large salary.

That the income of Dr. Hillis exceeded "the wages paid to poor working people"—that it even exceeded them by much—hardly proves it to have been excessive, especially as, in earning it he presumably intended not to harm, but to help, the poor working people toward better remuneration, and not improbably did so, either by improving their characters and elevating their ambitions or by touching the hearts of their employers. It seems needless for Dr. Hillis to reproach himself for having had a considerable sum of money with which to go into timber speculations. His fault, if any, was in going into them and subjecting himself to subsequent—distractions.

His Plaints Grow Wearisome.

If Dr. Dumba were wiser or better advised, he would realize how much more admirable and provocative of sympathy it is to accept failure as the fortune of war and to make the best of whatever poor circumstances permit than it is to assume and maintain the attitude and tone of the man with a grievance.

Grievances, even when real, are rarely of intense, never of permanent, interest to other people, and when they are unreal—when the troubles that have befallen one are the natural and inevitable results of one's own actions—then pulling a long face and declaiming against the injustice of the world and its inhabitants is absurd at first and soon becomes intensely wearisome.

Dr. Dumba's grievances are not real. To make out a seeming case he has had to convince himself and is trying—quite hopelessly—to convince others that his recall was demanded because he called attention to certain laws of Austria-Hungary. His long letter of protest and complaint to Secretary Lansing contains not a line about his proposal to break down an important American industry, the perfect legality of which had recently been proclaimed to himself and his Government. It does contain many lamentations over the fact that the conditions created by the war, not by the United States, have decreased his facilities for communication with Vienna.

Our Department of State, naturally, sees no need to answer his letter, though probably a brief acknowledgment of its receipt will be made. Dr. Dumba might well be "thinkin' on his marcies" instead of exploiting imaginary wrongs or real misfortunes. His treatment has been much milder than he had reason to expect after the nature of his activities had been discovered, for he has been spared the humiliation of a forced departure, and he has not been subjected to the slightest manifestation of public resentment. It is understood here that he merely tried to serve his country according to his lights, and, if only he would subside into becoming silence, most people would be at least a little sorry for him, just as most people were for poor Sackville-West, who was more heavily punished for a slighter offending.

He Gave Advice on Hyphens.

Utica celebrated last week the anniversary of the battle of Antietam, in which the Thirty-fourth Regiment, New York Volunteers, composed chiefly of Herkimer County men, took a prominent part and suffered heavy losses. There was a big parade of surviving veterans and admirers who marched in their honor, and then, of course, there were speeches in the park where the hero of Oriskany sits on his horse and observes the passage of the changing years.

Of the orations, most attention seems to have been earned and won by that of Franz Sigel, Department Commander of the Sons of Veterans, who started by saying, "I stand before you a full-blooded German," and then proceeded to talk in a highly unhyphenated way. Pride in his origin he confessed, or rather proclaimed, but he declared himself as American as any of his hearers—not German-American, but plain American. There were some, he said, who failed to mark the distinction, and he added:

"In failing to do so they fail to live up to that pledge they made when they were naturalized. It is for them I speak; that they may take thought on the subject, and so thinking may modify their future conduct, and become real American citizens. I think that they will do this, never forgetting the line of demarcation that runs hard and fast between political allegiance and sentiment for the homes of their fathers."

Danger in Rooting.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Now, with the advent of the football season, Umberto Sorrentino, the famous Italian concert singer, issues a warning to his friends among the young men and women singers of America. This is to the effect that "rooting" for their favorite football team is one of the most dangerous, or even disastrous, things that they can possibly do with a singing voice, for it is likely to result in either a strained condition of the vocal chords or in a laryngitis or pharyngitis from which it may take weeks fully to recover, if, indeed, recovery is ever complete.

The game is highly exciting, no doubt, and the individual players may possibly derive considerable psychological stimulus from the yells and shouts of encouragement or admonition of their friends. But it is a practice that safely can be indulged in only by those who are leather-lunged and copper-throated. Indeed, these glorious peals of sound that sweep down the gridiron fields are identical—so far as technical production is concerned—with high notes taken at top voice. And all students of musical history know that the famous tenor, Rubini, actually fractured his collarbone while singing a double forte on B flat. The recent accident to a contralto soloist in a Connecticut church choir is also fresh in the musical mind. This young lady, while attempting an unusual note, burst an artery in her throat. The accident, needless to say, terminated fatally.

E. F. BOWERS, M. D.

Islands to Pawn.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It would seem that if Great Britain is unable to provide collateral securities of unquestioned value for the loan which it is proposed to float in this country, a security of another character is available.

It has long been a matter of historical observation that Great Britain alone of all foreign nations maintains a chain of fortified positions at no great distance parallel to the coast of this country. A security of a definite character and of a certain value would be found in the mortgage of Bermuda, Jamaica, and British Guiana. A historical parallel would be found for such a course in the history of Sweden.

The good faith and intentions of any nation under existing conditions of government may be undoubted, but no one can foretell the effects of revolution, which, as past history has shown, has resulted in repudiation of political and financial obligations. The pledging of such definite possessions as those suggested would eliminate any question of this character.

Accidents from Women Drivers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In regard to Magistrate House's opinion of women drivers of automobiles, I have completed in three years' term as county physician of Bergen County, N. J. During that time I saw the results of many automobile accidents and in no case was a woman the driver of either car where two automobiles were involved. It seems to me that if the Magistrate's opinion of woman were to be regarded as sound, there should have been at least "one little woman" out of all this considerable number of drivers too weak to control his car or who "lost his head."

S. E. ARMSTRONG, M. D.

Rutherford, N. J., Sept. 6, 1915.

Mr. Ching's Idea.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Now is the time to explore and expand the Chinese market, to uphold and maintain the John Hay open-door policy in China, to safeguard American interests there and in the Pacific, and to free the Far East from influences detrimental to American interests. The recovery and the maintenance of American commerce in China are of equal, if not of greater, importance than the interest on the proposed billion-dollar loan in the long run. It would not only safeguard American interests in the Orient and in the Pacific, but also strengthen the Chinese-American friendship.

WALTER CHING.

A PROTEST AND—A PLEA.

A brown sail adrift in the twilight,
That was golden an hour ago;
A white rift of waves on the harbor,
Where the Autumn's first "northers" blow.

A brown cheek aflush 'neath my finger,
Grown paler now under my touch;
Because I would bid Summer linger,
Ah, Sweet! do I ask too much?

I have followed your feet thro' the shallows
O'er many a sun-baked beach;
And waited beside you at moonrise,
When the silence of each spoke to each.

Were you then but the moth of a season?
Your bright wings now drooping and sere?
Or—will you listen to reason,
And still go on loving me, dear?

EDNA MEAD.

THREE WAYS OF REASONING.

How American Feeling May Be Classified Roughly.

Tannersville, N. Y., Sept. 6, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In a recent issue of your paper there was a letter from Mr. E. Woodward Duke, Assistant Secretary of the National Security League, in which he asks if "some of your readers would kindly explain that mysterious 'kink' in human nature which has, in spite of some 'loud talking,' prevented a general rush of red-blooded Americans to arms or to preparedness, although for months the papers have devoted a great deal of space to this subject—the facts are well known."

We know that the average American is not a coward or a "softy." It is just possible he has been thinking carefully. "If my soldiers should stop to think carefully," said Frederick the Great, "not one of them would remain in the ranks."

We have had in the last year a problem suddenly penetrate our consciousness which was at once a national and a personal one. Putting aside those who had already made up their minds that the time had come in the development of the human race to give up collectively what we had long since given up individually—the reliance upon force to settle disputes—most people fall, I think, roughly speaking, into three classes.

It was perfectly natural, after the shock of seeing Europe in a cataclysm, that our first sensation was one of fear lest the same thing happen to us, as we realized we were absolutely unprepared for war in the modern European sense. Our first impulse was to get ready, and get ready quickly, for anything that might happen. We must have soldiers and sailors, submarines, aeroplanes, dreadnoughts, and big guns! A number of young men, with imaginations easily fired, made up their minds over night, joined camps, talked about war, and rushed into print. It was a new, overpowering idea, coupled with an inherited instinct. Unfortunately, such men are apt to be physically the most fit. Their loss to the nation would be an irreparable one. They are needed as fathers. These men, and the women like them, who formed numberless "committees," are the first class. They have what might be called primitive patriotism; they are brave, attractive, and sincere, but their reasoning is immature.

The second class is composed of those who talk the most and the loudest and call other people "craven," "pusillanimous," "peace at any price," "cowards," "softies," and "old women." They are exceedingly apt to be themselves old men, those who would be most unlikely to see any active service. They form a definite, distinct type—a head-shaking, eye-snapping, cane-twirling type! They also have their counterparts in the fair sex. Quite unconsciously they give one the idea that it is their personal safety and their own interests on which their minds are fixed.

In the third class are those who, at the outset, went through the same mental process as the first class, but who have more elastic minds and who, unlike Frederick the Great's soldiers, are stopping to "think carefully." They realize that the whole European civilization is built on the idea of force. That Germany is by far the most extreme example does not blind them to the fact that all the warring nations have sinned; that they have all relied on force and secret diplomacy rather than upon law and fair dealing; that it is a system which is an anachronism and which has failed more utterly than anything else within the range of their knowledge has failed. They have eyes to see and ears to hear, and they have used them.

The belief that we have got beyond the dispensation of "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth" is very strong in many minds. The pacifist's idea is as yet an unpopular and colorless one. It is only in the making, but I submit that the feeling in the air is the reason many strong, courageous, adventurous young men are thinking twice before they turn their backs on the greatest chance they will ever have to help free the human race from the dreadful obsession that the crime of war is inevitable and the fallacy that armed preparedness prevents it. Perhaps, too, they know some facts which are not in "the newspapers" about the international industry of war, which has had Europe in its clutches and has reached out its iron claw to us across the Atlantic. The appalling strides that the armament business is making in this country are enough to make one wonder what it is all for!

But if we are to be really a happy nation we must have a positive and not a negative peace; we must make such horrors as the Eastland disaster impossible. Suppose the Eastland had been sunk because of criminal negligence on the part of German officials! The Lusitania is not a disgrace to us as a nation; Germany bears that odium. But the Eastland, with its upward of 1,500 dead, is our shame. Our failure in government has made such things possible.

How to Write a Letter.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Supplementing my recent letter concerning the desirability of regularity in the pagination of correspondence, allow me to quote a passage from Professor Edwin C. Woolley's "Handbook of Composition," Page 137, which I have just discovered:

> When four-page sheets are used all four pages may be written on. The letter should be so written that a person reading the first page has at his left the fold and at his right the coinciding edges opposite the fold. If the substance of the letter occupies less than two pages of the sheet the first and third pages may be written on and the second be left blank. If the substance of the letter occupies more than two pages it is best, both on the ground of good usage and on that of the reader's convenience, that the pages be written on in their natural order, namely, 1, 2, 3, 4; not in the order 1, 3, 2, 4 or 1, 4, 2, 3. On the same grounds it is best that the lines of writing on all the pages be at right angles to the fold, not parallel with the fold.

A Plea for Two Cats.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

At the Bide-a-Wee Home, 410 East Thirty-eighth Street, there are two cats that have never been separated, and now ask for a good home together. They belonged to a poor little old lady who is no longer able to pay her lodging in a tenement house and has to be sent to a public institution, where she is not allowed to keep her cats with her. Besides making this dear old lady happy, whoever takes these cats will find them pets well worth having. Miss Champion, Secretary of the Bide-a-Wee, and an authority upon the subject, vouches for them eugenically and as to character and disposition.

There have been many requests for the cats individually, but will The Times help us to find them a home where they will not be separated?

Nurses in Marseilles.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In her communication to The Times Elizabeth Van Slyke says she found that the men in the military hospital in Marseilles were suffering from neglect because they had only one orderly for 200 or 300 men, and the Sisters on duty were prohibited by their religious profession from giving them many kinds of services.

I have had three years' training in a Sisters' hospital, as well as five years' special work, and I never once knew or heard of one thing their religious profession prohibited them from doing to help, or relieve in any way, man, woman, or child. It would be very inconsistent for a woman to enter a religious order to do nursing and have the same order prohibit her from doing it.

WHAT STUFF THE GUARD IS MADE OF.

Views of a Regular Army Officer Detailed as Instructor of State Militia—Harsh Discipline Makes a Soldier.

By ALBERT T. RICH,

Captain Seventy-first Infantry, National Guard, State of New York; First Lieutenant Third United States Infantry.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why do the persons writing letters about the National Guard continually harp on and sneer at the fact that it is requisite that the national guardsman be prepared for service with the regulars? Is not the average guardsman capable of being trained to a state of preparedness as well as the regular? I have found in the time that I have been detailed with the National Guard that the average guardsman is very keen about his military work and is anxious to be a soldier ready and prepared to defend his State and country with the same spirit as the regular. I do not believe that he is influenced to a great extent when he enlists by the fact that he is going to wear a gaudy uniform or that he will be entitled to wear his uniform on special public occasions, such as dances, receptions, &c.

One of your correspondents wrote: "He would never have enlisted if he had supposed he would be peremptorily called in the regular service for any length of time and if he believed such to be the case now he would take his discharge at the earliest possible moment."

The writer must realize that a great majority of the men who enlist in the National Guard are married men and he places a stigma on their attempt to display their loyalty and patriotism. A married man realizes that he is placing his services at the disposal of his State and his country, and I firmly believe that he would unhesitatingly offer his service in time of war. A man when he enlists should provide for such a contingency and arrange for the future support of his family. I feel confident that practically all the married guardsmen that answered the call in 1898 had previously arranged for their families. A man who does not arrange for the future subsistence of his dependents would not become a suitable subject for any military training, and therefore would not be desired in time of war.

Another of your correspondents said: "A day or two ago a Lieutenant wrote about the necessity for training the men of the Guard to take trenches at night. This is on a par with other twaddle that has appeared along that line, that the national guardsman should be equal to the regular, and does not take into consideration that the regular is a professional soldier and the guardsman is a professional clerk or has some other similar vocation."

I do not know who the Lieutenant was that wrote regarding the training of the national guardsmen to take trenches at night, but I desire to congratulate him on his conception of military training desired for the Guard. The close-order formations and drills are necessary for the purpose of instilling discipline, teaching precise and soldierly movements, and inculcating that prompt and subconscious obedience which is essential to proper military control. In my opinion the most important part of the education of a soldier is field training. The excellence of an organization is judged by its field efficiency. The field efficiency of an organization depends primarily upon its effectiveness as a whole.

A guardsman may be able to have his uniform tailored and his shoes polished for a parade or a social function and still not be a soldier in any sense of the word. A green recruit is fully able to cope with such circumstances and look very "pretty." It is the man who can apply himself to circumstances which would arise in field service and adapt himself that counts in the long run. In order that the soldier may be competent of executing common sense in time of war he must be trained in the various details which will arise at that time. He must be able to care for himself physically; cook his own meals with a handful of chips, and not require a fire that would require the combined efforts of an entire company to put it out; load wagons correctly, have a working knowledge of map reading, road sketching, reconnoitring, and selection of topographical positions; methods of signaling, care and preservation of his equipment, and innumerable other things. Full consideration is taken of the fact that the guardsman is in many cases a professional clerk, &c., but I have met very few guardsmen who would give this as an excuse for not gaining all the knowledge they could of field service.

I think that I can speak knowingly on this matter, as I have in the last year organized and drilled a company in the National Guard of this State, and I have found that the men, if properly instructed, will take a great deal of interest in both the armory close-order drill and the field service. I have questioned many noncommissioned officer of the Guard and have found that the general complaint is that they get altogether too little practical instruction in field work.

I have been credited with the desire to eliminate dances from the armories and substitute drills therefor by some of the Guard. Such is not the case. I most heartily approve of dances in the armories as a social relaxation which affords pleasure for the men and their friends. What I do contend is that if dancing interferes with the discipline and efficiency of the men, find some other means of social relaxation. A good soldier can soon be a good dancer, but a poor soldier would only be unsuited at a dance, for the reason that he would not have the pride of the well-instructed and disciplined soldier at heart.

I can state from personal observation that the soldier who has been trained in field service looks with some pity on those who have not had the opportunity of receiving the same. Therefore, is it not better to train men to take trenches at night and allow them a feeling of pride than to deprive them of this merely because it is considered unnecessary to mix the professional military training with the professional civil training? The father of one of my men stated to me that his son had come back from camp filled with enthusiasm of the field service instruction that he had received there; that he knew how to handle himself if he should be sent out alone in active service on some important mission, and that he could control any number of men in his company in the field by merely using the arm signal code. The father spoke with a great deal of pride of his son, and said that it was a great thing for the National Guard to allow the young men to receive this field training, as it gave them training to act as individuals, and not as machines.

All men can gain by following the example of trained men, and I cannot conceive of any harm being done to the guardsman if he is trained as the regular is trained. I was told when I organized my company in this city that the regular army methods would not stand in the Guard by some that had a very slight conception of what such really was. The men "that knew and could understand" instructed me to use them. I did, and I know from results that my men have not been degraded in any way, but have apparently thrived under the harsh, brutal regular treatment. I know that while my company was at Camp Whitman many of the men of my company and of other companies visited the camp of the regulars (Thirtieth United States Infantry) and watched them at their work. I noticed many signs of copying their methods by my men. Does that indicate that the interested guardsman did not desire to become as proficient in the military work as the regular?

RUSSIA AND AMERICA.

Why One Moves to Promote Friendly Relations with the Other.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

While the people of America are waking up on commercial matters and making plans to become the bankers of the world, it will be well for them not to forget Russia. This immense nation is looking to us for supplies, capital, and a better understanding, as never before. A land of 170,000,000 people, it is reaching out to America with the hope of teaching us its life, its ideals and its desires, and it is time we were giving attention.

Recently published items about the establishment in this city of a Russky Narodny Dom, or Russian national house, and of the visit of the great commercial experts, such as the President of the Moscow Chamber of Commerce and others, to our shores emphasize the coming "rapprochement" of the two nations, in which we cannot help being benefited.

Not long ago there was organized in Petrograd, with offices at No. 46 Liteiny Prospekt, a "Society for the Promotion of Friendly Relations Between Russia and America," (Obshtchestvo Sblizheniya Mezhdu Rossiehe i Amerikoi,) at the head of which is Baron Rosen, former Russian Ambassador to the United States, numbering among its members some of the leading social and business lights of the empire, and which has the sanction of the Imperial Russian Government. The following statement of a circular letter recently issued by this society is translated for your readers:

> The war has wrought a great change in the life of Russia, and after the war is over it cannot, and must not, fall back into its old channels. We are undoubtedly faced with the necessity of beginning a new existence.
>
> Which of all the countries of the world can give us the necessary leading and instructive example in following that path?
>
> It is our deep conviction that the only country in point of territory, population, natural resources and general conditions that can adequately fulfill that function for us is the United States of North America. Here we can see an actual demonstration of the best means of applying science to agricultural occupations—how transportation systems can be organized over wide areas, various nationalities united in a harmonious whole and apparently incongruous elements fused into the national unit, &c.
>
> We are through with Germany, but, being in need of a long list of wares, of capital and of technical experts, (as there are things we do not produce,) and of a market for our raw material, we must seek another country, and such a one, along with England, should be the North American United States.

This address was signed by M. Pokhitonoff, a noted scholar and man of affairs of Petrograd, and distributed to Russian representatives in this country.

What are we doing to meet these earnest, far-sighted people? In Washington, D. C., at the Home Club of the Department of the Interior, a well-patronized Russian class has been organized, and employes of the Department of Commerce in that city are taking up the study of the language in a practical manner. Russian is for the average American not more difficult than French to pronounce, but the grammar is not easy. Still, its beauty and richness amply repay our careful study, to say nothing of the big advantages of a commercial nature likely to flow from a command of the language by our students. Let us meet our Russian neighbors half way in their program of better acquaintance and improved commercial relations!

FAME IN SUSPENSE.

A Further Discussion of the Discovery of Hypochlorites.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have no desire to enter into discussion with Dr. Baxeres de Alzugaray relative to the antiquity of the use of hypochlorites as disinfecting agents, but I wish to give credit where it is due.

First, it must be remembered that chlorine as an element was not discovered until 1774 by Scheele, just prior to the discovery of Priestly, and later, in the nineteenth century, calcium, sodium, &c., (which is lime,) were proven to be alkaline metals by Sir Humphrey Davey by use of the voltaic battery. Disinfectant qualities of chlorine in connection with calcium and sodium were noticed by Bertholet shortly after this, but its use cannot be dated further back than the early part of the nineteenth century, when Greyton Morveau and Duputren pointed out its value as a disinfectant; even then it was not generally used. In fact, its popularity dates only from the time chloride of lime was used for bleaching purposes. Further, the general theory of disease was largely developed after Pasteur's immortal work on fermentation in 1862, although it had been suggested two centuries before by Robert Boyd. He was working on fermentation and, subsequently, on "Diseases of Wine, Vinegar, and Beer," and also on his wonderful work "Pebrine and Silk Worm Disease," and later in a work on anthrax, which was followed by Koch and his immortal work; also on application of his discovery by Lister. Hence it must have been after these discoveries, in the latter part of the nineteenth century, that its usefulness as a germicide became known.

It was after these discoveries that medicine ceased to be an empiricism and became a science. I did not claim that Wolff was the discoverer of hypochlorites, but I did and do claim that Wolff is the discoverer and made the artisan application of electrolyzed sea water whose beneficent effects were due to hypochlorites and gases in solution, and I further reiterate that Wolff demonstrated, by artisan application largely, the value of hypochlorites in solution in an original way. It was Wolff who placed hypochlorites in the drinking water of New York in 1893 during the outbreak of typhoid fever, with beneficial results, and who demonstrated facts, before known, that ten parts of gases to 10,000,000 parts of water removed every form of objectionable matter. I was the Commissioner ex officio of the New York Board of Health. To me, as to others, it was a revelation. Scientists and scientific journals commented in most complimentary terms on the discovery.

As I said in my previous letter, it was prior to the latter application, while Health Officer, that I used hypochlorites as a germicide, disinfectant, and antiseptic deodorant—frequently in preference to the poisonous bichloride solution of mercury—and I found it preferable to all else as a deodorant. I wrote the letter of Aug. 11 to give honor to whom honor was due after reading articles giving credit to the Rockefeller Institute, attributing the discovery to Drs. Carrel and Dakin and upon which Dr. Carrel has been made officer of the Legion of Honor for a discovery of the properties of a solution Wolff used twenty-five years ago.

Former Health Officer and Commissioner of Health of City and State of New York.

"Moloch," a graphic and dread picture of war, was presented to New York for the first time last evening at the New Amsterdam Theatre. It is a play in five scenes by Beulah Marie Dix, the woman who wrote "Across the Border," and like that earlier work of her pen, this, too, is a protest raised in the theatre against war as something at once futile and unspeakably monstrous. The story of this grave play is one of misery unrelieved. Written with rare and unswerving sincerity, "Moloch" is arresting, vivid, impressive, and utterly cheerless.

Of all the war plays, long and short, that have come to the New York stage since Aug. 1 a year ago, this is of the finest and highest quality by far. It is closest kin to the preceding piece by the same author, but inevitably it provokes comparisons not with "Across the Border" but rather with "Under Fire" at the Hudson. The latter is the conventional war play; a superficially modernized but none the less recognizable military melodrama of the old style, a tale of valor, told to the strains of inspiriting martial music, and, from first to last, incorrigibly optimistic and entertaining.

"Moloch," on the other hand, is a dramatic study of war written in bitter earnest, and as such is just about as cheerful as Poland. To many of those who filed soberly out of the New Amsterdam last evening, there must have been something grotesque in the urgent clamor of the uniformed youth inviting one and all to ascend forthwith to the gayety of the Midnight Frolic.

In a prologue, three acts, and an epilogue, "Moloch" tells the story of a family in a country made desolate by war. The country is unnamed, the enemy is unnamed, and, in this case at least, this procedure has the curious effect of giving something of universality to the play. Through what is, after all, only the thinnest disguise, you recognize England as the country, however, and the Germans as those spoken of throughout as "The Foreigners."

You see a peaceful community caught up in the rush of war newly declared. There are the young folk departing jauntily to the front; there is the glamour of it seen even through the tears of the women. The girls at the window are laughing and tossing roses down to the men marching by below.

That is an early picture. There are glimpses then of an invasion and of the firing line itself, but at the end you see just the wreck of that first home, a ruined and miserable household, listening incredulous to the news that their country has come to an open break with her late ally. The news comes in just the same way as it had come before, and as though mechanically the same response is made.

Here is a suggestion of war as something unending, irresistible, insatiable. It echoes the title with its reference to

> * * * Moloch, horrid King, besmeared with blood
> Of human sacrifice, and parents' tears.

There is conveyed, too, and with great subtlety and force, the suggestion of war as a nightmare, a dreadful adventure incredible to folk nursed and taught in the ways of peace, such as the people in this play—and such as we.

In the intervening scenes between prologue and epilogue, there are pictures of war in action that are grisly enough. There is one intensely dramatic moment when a frail and gentle boy Lieutenant of the invading Foreigners is stabbed in his sleep by a crazed woman in the house sheltering him.

There is another where a captive aviator, writhing with pain, is tortured by being put against a wall and told himself to give the signal to the men standing with guns aimed at his heart. There is one episode in which a conscript, made hopelessly out of a half-witted waif from the woods, is shot down at his refusal to march to the firing line. These are but samples.

Mrs. Dix-Flebbe has done her work intensely, and there is good and meaty writing in the text of this play. Only in the epilogue does she become discursive, and as if taking the cue from her, the players will then, when a bearing as of people dazed and dulled would be richer in meaning.

For the most part the playing is admirable. All told, the conspicuous performance of the evening is given by Gareth Hughes as the young Lieutenant of the invaders. It is a brief rôle, which he makes very effective and touching. Mrs. Whiffen, the well-beloved, is delightful as the Spartan mother of the family, whose loyal devotion to the traditional standards is part of the quiet and significant irony of the play.

Creighton Hale is capital as a buoyant boy of a soldier and Holbrook Blinn, who did the staging, is effective in a negative rôle. Lillian Albertson plays with genuine feeling, and there are some good moments in Paul Gordon's performance, but he does not husband his force for the outburst expected of him in the third act.

The production is on a huge scale, and it is admirably handled. "Moloch" is deeply impressive, but those who have had their tastes formed by the dramatic soda pop usually served over the Broadway fountain will feel considerable sympathy for the youthful usher who slipped away into the corner last evening to vent himself of this gravely uttered criticism:

"Pretty strong stuff!"

BERNARDI IN MANY ROLES.

Quick-Change Artist Makes His American Debut at Colonial.

Constantine Bernardi, a protean actor from the halls of Europe, made his American début yesterday afternoon in the Colonial Theatre. Mr. Bernardi is reputed the greatest artist of his kind since Fregoli, and while he gave a remarkable demonstration of the art of the quick-change performer, the fact that he spoke English with a difficult accent served as a great handicap to his act.

Mr. Bernardi took the audience into his secret and by means of transparent scenery showed his dressers making the changes. In one sketch he gave distinct characterizations of a dozen people who visited a manager's office in the course of a few minutes. A few seconds was sufficient time for him to jump from one costume to another and completely change his appearance. Then in the orchestra pit he conducted in disguises that transformed him into images of some of the world's greatest composers.

His performance included some clever feats of magic, not the least baffling of which was his escape from a chair suspended in air in which he had been sitting hidden by a cloth. When the attendant removed the cloth and showed the empty chair he then revealed his own identity as Bernhardi himself.

JAPANESE SOPRANO ARRIVES

Mme. Tamaki Miura to Sing Madama Butterfly—Belgian Artists.

Mme. Tamaki Miura, the Japanese operatic soprano, arrived yesterday on the Philadelphia from London to sing the tite rôle in "Madama Butterfly" with Max Rabinoff's Russian Ballet and Opera Company when it opens in Chicago on Oct. 5. Mme. Miura has sang in opera in Europe and is the only prima donna of foreign opera in Japan.

Four Belgian operatic singers from Antwerp and Brussels arrived yesterday from Liverpool on the Orduna to give concerts through the United States and Canada for the benefit of the Belgian widows and orphans of the war. They are Mlle. Octavie Belloy, Jan Collignon, Mlle. Gabrielle Radoux, and Mlle. Daisy Jean. Willis Flanagan, an American tenor, who has been singing in Italy in opera, is with them. They gave two concerts on the steamer on the way over.

French Actors Will Entertain.

M. Lucien Bonheur of the French Theatre is to give a talk this afternoon at a meeting of the Westchester County Art Alliance, which is to be held at the home of Mrs. Walston Brown, in Dobbs Ferry. Members of the French company are also to recite.

Albert D. Smith Left $1,498,882.

An accounting of the estate of the late Albert D. Smith of Orange, who was head of the cotton commission house of A. D. Smith & Company of New York, was filed in the Surrogate's office in Newark yesterday, by the Fidelity Trust Company, as Trustee. It showed the estate to be worth $1,498,882. The income, which goes to the widow and daughter, amounted to $77,079. They have a life interest in the estate.

THE WEEK IN THE THEATRES.

These are the new plays the young season has brought forth, their stars, and the theatres in which they are to be found: "Hit-the-Trail Holliday," with Fred Niblo, in the Astor Theatre; "Grumpy," with Cyril Maude in his famous characterization, at the Empire; "The Duke of Killicrankie" and "Rosalind," with Marie Tempest in the principal roles of both, at the Lyceum; "The House of Glass," a new melodrama, in the Candler; "The Boomerang," in the Belasco, "Under Fire," a war melodrama, at the Hudson; "Some Baby," at the Fulton; "Chin-Chin," the only play held over from last year, at the Globe; "Rolling Stones," in the Harris Theatre; "Common Clay," with John Mason and Jane Cowl, in the Republic; "Cousin Lucy," with Julian Eltinge as Lucy, at Cohan's Theatre; "Young America," in the Gaiety Theatre. The spectacular film, "The Birth of a Nation," is still being shown at the Liberty. In the Vitagraph a feature having preparedness for its theme is being shown.

In addition to the Italian protean actor, Bernardi, the new program at the Colonial includes T. Roy Barnes, who has returned to vaudeville from his brief engagement in farce; Victor Morley and company in "A Regular Army Man," Lyons and Yosco in their familiar musical act, and Ida Brooks Hunt, who sings songs from her light opera roles.

Wilton Lackaye appeared in the dramatic playlet, "The Bomb," yesterday in the Alhambra Theatre. Arthur McWatters and Grace Tyson gave their "Revue of Revues," and Frances Dooley and Corinne Sales offered their amusing diversion which they call "That's Silly." "The Corridor of Time" was acted by Hallen and Fuller.

"The Surgeon," a playlet, was presented by Noah Berry, Marguerita Abbot and company yesterday at the American Roof. The Ogden Four appeared in a program of songs and Bud and Nellie Helm gave a comedy skit.

Rol Cooper Megrue's melodrama of the trail of jewel smugglers, "Under Cover," which was last season's attraction at the Cort, began a week's engagement yesterday at the Standard. Florence Malone Rockliffe Fellowes, Robert Druce, and Harry Crosby played the leading roles.

In the York Theatre James Forbes's comedy of stage life, "The Show Shop," was acted. This is the amusing play produced last Spring in the Hudson, and Zelda Sears and George Sidney remain in their original roles.

"A Full House," Fred Jackson's farce of last Summer at the Longacre, is this week's offering in the Lexington Theatre. George Parsons, May Vokes, and Herbert Corthell, who were the principals of the original cast, continue in the roles they created.

"It Pays to Advertise," the Hackett-Megrue farce that had the longest run of any drama last season, at the Cohan, is the current attraction at the Bronx Opera House.

A new two-act burlesque entitled "Two Husbands and One Wife" was presented yesterday in the Columbia Theatre by the Girl Trust company. Frank A. Burt was the leading comedian and Maudie Heath and Nellie Francis were his principal assistants.

The Tip-Top Girls company began a week's engagement at the Yorkville Theatre yesterday. Two one-act burlesques and a vaudeville olio were presented by a company that included the Princess Luba Meroff, Frank Harcourt, Nellie Lockwood, and Helen Spencer.

The shades of Joe Weber and Lew Fields visited their old Music Hall last night. They were not spectral apparitions but the projections of the two comedians on a screen from a film for which they acted. "Mike and Meyer's Children Elope" was the title of the picture in which Mr. Fields and Mr. Weber appeared in the characterizations made famous by them.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Eugene Brieux's drama "Damaged Goods," has been made into a motion picture by the Mutual Film Corporation. Richard Bennett and the company that appeared with him in the original production acted the picturised version. A private showing of the picture will be given Monday morning at the Broadway Theatre.

Lou Tellegen, who returned last week from California, where he had been acting for the movies, is to be starred in a new play by Jules Hois, a French dramatist and Academician.

SELL SODA CHECKS AS THEATRE TICKETS

Speculators Swindle Aliens at Movie Exhibition of "German Side of the War."

EIGHT PERFORMANCES GIVEN

Eager Crowds Watch Pictures, More Than 5,000 Gathering for Opening at 44th Street House.

Ticket speculators played a new game yesterday by selling soda water checks to some who could not read English in the crowds which lined up yesterday in front of the Forty-fourth Street and Forty-third Street entrances to the Forty-fourth Street Theatre, where the first moving picture exhibition of "The German Side of the War" was given.

Advertisements of the show contained in large letters the word "Today," and this gave the impression to many that the pictures would be exhibited for one day only. Crowds were turned away at each of the eight performances which took place yesterday.

More than 5,000 persons, many of whom complained in foreign tongues of the discomfort of being caught in such a jam, had gathered before the theatre before 11 o'clock yesterday morning, when the first show started. Ticket speculators wormed their way to the box office, bought all the tickets they could, and resold them to those in the rear of the crowd at prices advanced from 25 cents to 50 cents and $1.

When this way of making money was found too slow one of the speculators got the idea of selling the soda water checks, which were obtained from a store near at hand. These were only sold to those who, from the thickness of their accent, were judged to be unable to read English. The soda water checks and the moving-picture tickets were both pink and the same in general appearance.

Some of the soda-water checks were sold for $1 apiece, and others at 50 cents, the speculators shouting as they made sales that the show lasted for one day only. At the beginning of each performance there was a scramble at the entrance to the theatre, and the ticket takers were so hard pressed that many soda water checks were accepted before the fraud was discovered.

The men whose soda-water tickets were rejected made a furious protest and then went out into the street to look for the speculators. Early in the afternoon it became too hot for the soda-water ticket salesmen and they disappeared, but ordinary scalping continued at such a rate that the management of the theatre telephoned to Inspector Dwyer for more policemen. Half a dozen policemen were on duty late in the afternoon, and they put a stop to the resale of tickets. Many of the scalpers were pointed out to them, but no one in the crowd was found to make a complaint and no arrests followed. The show is to continue indefinitely.

The crowd was greater than ever for the evening shows. At 7 o'clock it ran from the entrance to the theatre, near Broadway, west to Eighth Avenue and then south to Forty-third Street. Thirty policemen kept the lines in order, and some of those near the front of the theatre were kept busy repelling scores who tried to get through the doors without undergoing a long probation in the line.

The crowd was so great that W. C. Willets, manager of the theatre, said he would keep on running exhibitions all night if necessary. A few got tired of waiting and went home, however, and the others were all able to see the show by 11 o'clock, when the eighth exhibition ended. According to Manager Willets, the house was filled to its capacity of 1,500 each time, so that a total of 12,000 saw "The German Side of the War." With a policeman for every twenty feet of the line in the evening, the ticket speculators did not attempt to pursue their calling.

GERMANY ON THE SCREEN.

Movie Report on the Armies of the Kaiser at 44th Street Theatre.

The peculiar competence of the motion picture camera as a war correspondent was again attested yesterday, when an extended cinema report on Germany at war was put on exhibition at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre under the direction of the enterprising F. Ziegfeld, Jr. Most of these deeply interesting pictures show the armies of the Kaisers on the French, Russian, and Italian fronts, and were taken by E. F. Weigle of The Chicago Tribune. One half of the proceeds are pledged to a German fund for the relief of blind and crippled soldiers. In the eighty minutes it takes the six reels to unfold, there is afforded an impressive and depressing evidence of the smoothness, speed, and immensity of the German war machine.

You see soldiers setting forth in debonnair fashion for the front, you see armless and legless soldiers being patched up in the hospitals. You see across a broad rolling field the dust of an interminable column, and you see a patch of woods grow suddenly and mysteriously populous with German infantrymen. You see the little machine guns in incessant action, and the huge thirty-centimeter guns aimed at Przemysl, and tearing up the whole landscape when they are fired.

Some hint of the immense audience awaiting this movie record of a tour within the German lines was given by the box-office queue, which at times yesterday reached all the way to Broadway. It, too, seemed largely a German line, and the frenzied applause at the appearance of Wilhelm himself upon the screen could not have been outdone had every seat been taken by reservists. But the pictures are interesting to all of us.

ALEX. CARR AT THE PALACE.

He Shares the Honors with Sylvester Schaeffer.

Alexander Carr, late member of the sentimental firm of Potash & Perlmutter, returned to vaudeville yesterday afternoon as the leading player of a playlet called "An April Shower." It is considerably better than the average short play devised for the two-a-day, and, with its strong resemblance to the Fannie Hurst type of story, is just such a pocket-size comedy as might be written for David Warfield by the indefatigable Edgar Allan Woolf, who can write a vaudeville sketch to order and does so frequently. As a matter of fact, he did write "An April Shower" for and with Mr. Carr, who appears in it to advantage.

Sylvester Schäffer, the young German who can do so many things, does ten of them ranging all the way from painting in oils to feats of marksmanship. Josie Heather, an ultra-demure recruit from England, found favor with yesterday's large audience, and there is plenty of laughter left in the unreplenished antics of the Ward brothers. The taller Ward still squeals with greater virtuosity than any other artist on the American stage.

PEOPLE'S THEATRE PLANS.

Emanuel Reicher to Establish Stations for Membership Enrollment.

Emanuel Reicher has opened offices for the Modern Stage and the American People's Theatre, both of which were founded by him, in the Knickerbocker Theatre Building. Here information can be had about the plans of both societies, and free membership cards to the latter organization may be obtained. These cards will entitle the holders to copies of a magazine to be published with each play free of charge. Twelve stations in various parts of the city where people may join the People's Theatre have been established.

In an interview published in THE TIMES Sunday with Mr. Reicher, he was quoted as saying that the season of the Modern Stage would consist of seven performances. It will be made up of seven programs, each month to have a single play or group of short plays.

BELL AS FINANCE CHAIRMAN.

Indianapolis Mayor Handled Contributions to County Committee.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 20.—Mayor Bell, who is on trial charged with fraud committed at the last election, was Chairman of the Democratic County Finance Committee in the 1914 campaign, and was suggested for the position by County Chairman Fred Barrett, according to J. W. Joseph, Treasurer of the Democratic Committee, who testified today. Joseph's memory had to be refreshed from his testimony before the Grand Jury before he could say who suggested the Mayor for the position. Barrett was indicted with Mayor Bell.

"Some of the sub-treasurers reported to the Mayor's office in the City Hall," continued the witness. "The money collected by them is not accounted for in my report unless it was included in the funds presented to me by Mayor Bell."

Dr. Melville E. Heiner, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for County Coroner, testified that he attended two meetings of candidates at which Mayor Bell presided.

"At one meeting," the witness said, "fear was expressed that the Kervan crowd would get out an injunction to block the burning of the ballots after the primary in a South Side precinct. Mayor Bell said, 'We have Judges and clerks that are all right, and Judge Charles Orbison said we need have no fear, that his court will be closed for a week.'"

A number of witnesses were called by the State to show that men purporting to vote the Democratic ticket from certain street addresses were not known in those neighborhoods. Some of these witnesses were women. All were excused without cross-examination.

SUES RUSSIAN INSURANCE CO.

Liquidator of American Union Seeks to Recover $264,217.

Charles Johnson, Insurance Commissioner of Pennsylvania, as liquidator of the American Union Fire Insurance Company, which became insolvent and was dissolved in conformity with an order and decree filed with the County Clerk in Philadelphia, Penn., on March 27, 1913, brought a suit yesterday in the Federal District Court to recover $264,217.93 from the Warsaw Fire Insurance Company of Warsaw, Russia.

Commissioner Johnson alleges that in 1911 and 1912 the American Union Fire Insurance Company entered into contracts with the Warsaw Company, the business of which is conducted in this city by Fewter & Folsom, Incorporated, for the reversion to the latter company of 50 per cent. of the reserved line policies which had been underwritten in the United States, Canada, and Newfoundland, with the understanding that the policies should affect both companies in like proportions as to premiums and losses. The amount sued for includes a demand loan of $115,360.67 made by the American Company.

FORD TO SEE DANIELS.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Secretary Daniels today made an appointment to see Henry Ford of Detroit, who, it is understood, will submit a plan for a new type of diminutive submarine. The appointment for the conference was made through a friend, it was explained, and not by direct communication with Mr. Ford.

Newspaper reports from Detroit have stated that the new submarine would be equipped with a gasoline motor, and would be one-fourth the size of those now in commission, and less expensive to operate. Mr. Daniels said today that he was glad to receive ideas from any source to improve the submarine arm of the navy, or in any other way develop the navy, and that he would listen to Mr. Ford with an open mind.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 20.—Henry Ford, who recently announced his plans for world peace by agitation against armament, assisted provisionally by a fleet of deadly submarine "fishboats," gasoline driven, to blow up recalcitrant navies, left tonight for New York. From there he will go to Washington Wednesday for a conference with Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy. He expects also to see Thomas A. Edison at East Orange, N. J., although he has no appointment with the Chairman of the Daniels Navy Advisory Board.

Mr. Ford is inclined to give credit to Professor Herschel C. Parker, the Mount McKinley climber and scientist, who recently wrote to Mr. Ford and revealed to him the scheme which Mr. Ford repeated in his "fishboat" plans. It was this letter, Professor Parker's friends are reported to have stated, which inspired Mr. Ford to his pronouncement. E. G. Liebold, secretary to Mr. Ford, threw some light on the previous failure of Mr. Ford to give Professor Barker credit for the "fishboat" scheme.

"Since the announcement of his $10,000,000 endowment for peace propaganda," said Mr. Liebold, "Mr. Ford has received an average of 600 letters daily. Some of these letters, like that of Professor Parker, contain valuable ideas. It would be folly for Mr. Ford to try to read them all, but he has read a good many of them, and there are still some awaiting his perusal when he returns. Out of the mass of this correspondence he has, of course, acquired many new thoughts concerning his propaganda and other defense matters. It certainly was not his intention to slight Professor Parker in his statement."

JOSEPH A. FLANNERY DIES.

Lawyer Who Grew Rich in Condemnation Suits and Was Disbarred.

Joseph A. Flannery, one-time lawyer, who until his disbarment in 1912 made a fortune estimated from $1,000,000 to $3,000,000 through the condemnation of property by the city, died yesterday at his Summer home at Hewlett, L. I. He was 40 years old and left a wife and two daughters. Mr. Flannery was admitted to the bar when he was 21 years old.

Beginning the practice of law, he made a specialty of condemnation proceedings. He became a member of Tammany Hall, and with the increase in influence he began to turn his knowledge of condemnation proceedings into a fortune.

The motion to disbar Mr. Flannery was made in April, 1912, by the Bar Association, through William D. Guthrie. It was based upon a report made by Hamilton Odell, as referee, who conducted hearings into the matter for sixteen months. He was ordered disbarred by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court on May 17, 1912. Ex-Fire Commissioner Johnson had complained that Flannery had sold to the city for $252,000 property at Hunt's Point which he had bought for $80,000, and also charged commissions for finding a purchaser, who was himself. It was also charged that Flannery practiced deceit upon the Condemnation Commissioners in the case of the Hester, Eldridge, Canal, and Forsyth Street school, and in connection with property owned by the Cammann heirs.

CORNELIUS J. FIELD DEAD.

Builder of Electric Railroads Was an Associate of Edison.

Cornelius J. Field, an electrical and mechanical engineer and formerly chief engineer and General Manager of the Edison Company of Brooklyn, is dead at his home, 825 Prospect Place, Brooklyn, in his fifty-fourth year. In 1889 he was appointed chief engineer of the Edison United Manufacturing Company, and a year later became General Manager of the Brooklyn Edison Company and retained this position until 1891.

Mr. Field then went into construction work and built electric railroads in Buffalo, Newark, Worcester, Mass.; Bridgeport, Conn.; Philadelphia, and a number of other cities, constructing in all more than 500 miles of line. In 1895 he became consulting expert to a number of banking corporations and ten years later went to the West Indies and Europe and built several electric lines and a number of sugar plants. In 1909 he joined Thomas A. Edison, who had then perfected his storage battery for traction use, who turned over to him the development of the bus end of the business.

RED SOX AGAIN DEFEAT TIGERS—YANKEES TRIUMPH IN LAST INNING—DODGERS SHUT OUT

MULLEN'S PINCH HIT DOWNS WHITE SOX

Yankees Take Last Game of Series with Chicago in a Ninth-Inning Rally.

Now that it doesn't matter whether the Yankees win or not they keep right on winning. They beat the expensive White Sox yesterday by a score of 3 to 2. That ended the season's series between the clubs. The White Sox won fifteen games and the Yankees seven. Five of the Yankees' games were won by the score of 3 to 2.

Donovan's big regiment won yesterday by a sudden rush in the ninth inning. Carroll Brown pitched a while for the Yanks, but not long enough to lose the game. Cy Pieh also pitched a while, and then Old King Cole finished the pastime, and did some smart twirling in the ninth inning, when Chicago runners inhabited the bases and promised to make trouble.

Each train into the city brings a new consignment of Yankee recruits. The Yankee bench was crowded to suffocation, and the overflow extended out on to the field. There were more players on the bench than there were fans in the grand stand. Manager Donovan expects another carload over the Erie today. A lot of old familiar faces were seen yesterday. Charley Mullen, Pius Schwert, Pete Daley, and Frank Gilhooley, who have all sojourned here before, have returned to play an encore. They have been brought back on the theory that, like wine and old friends, they improve with age. Maybe. We shall see, as the man said when he put his spectacles on his nose.

At the start the Sox couldn't figure how they could lose with Brown pitching. Crafty Manager Donovan crossed them, however, and sent in Pieh after a while. Then he shifted to King Cole. Eddie Murphy's pass, Weaver's sacrifice, and a single by Eddie Collins gave the Sox their first run. An infield single by Weaver, Brown's wild throw to first, E. Collins's sacrifice and an error, whereby Hartzell muffed Jackson's fly, gave the Chicagos their second run.

The Yanks tied it up in the seventh. Hartzell shot a single to left and Cook skied to centre. Hendryx singled to right and sent Hartzell to third, and Roy counted when Eddie Murphy threw wild to third. Hughey High, batting for Pieh, walloped a triple to right centre and scored Hendryx. High tried to stretch the bang into a home run, but he was out at the plate, Ray Schalk giving Hughey the shoulder and sending him spinning on his ear in real football fashion. Bob Shawkey kicked to Umpire Nallin for the roughouse work, but Bob was exiled to the clubhouse.

The Yanks won in the last half of the ninth. Hartzell got a pass and went to second on Cook's single. Hendryx singled and jammed the sacks. Alexander fanned. Charley Mullen, fresh from Richmond, spanked out a single, and sent Hartzell home with the joyful answer. The score:

More Players for Yankees.

Secretary Harry Sparrow of the Yankees announced last night the names of some of the players the club had obtained in the draft at Cincinnati last week. The promising talent includes Blodgett, a left-handed pitcher from Omaha; Ross, another left-hander from Chattanooga; Cable, an infielder from Bradford, Penn., and Shocker, a pitcher, from the Ottawa club of the Canadian League. Secretary Sparrow also announced that the rumor that the Yankees had drawn Ping Bodie from San Francisco was a base exaggeration. Bodie was once with the White Sox and was sent back to the coast. The Yankees did not sign Whiteman the outfielder from Montreal. "Whitey" was once with the Yanks and was released.

Browns Get Player Riley.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Sept. 20.—The National Baseball Commission today awarded Player Riley of the Wichita Club to the St. Louis American League Club. The St. Louis Club claimed Riley under an agreement in which Player Clyde E. Wares was released to the Wichita Club. Wares was later repurchased by the St. Louis Club, and Wichita claimed that this repurchase made the claim on Riley null and void. The commission, however, ruled that the agreement held good, regardless of the repurchase of Wares.

Pitcher Bluejacket Slightly Hurt.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 20.—James Bluejacket, pitcher for the Brooklyn Federal League baseball team was among twenty persons injured when an interurban train of the Illinois traction system was derailed near here today. His injuries were not serious. Most of those hurt were in a sleeping car which rolled down a fifteen-foot embankment. Injuries were confined to cuts and bruises.

World's Series to Start Oct. 9.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 20.—August Herrmann, Chairman of the National Baseball Commission in a statement today, said that the world's series would probably start on Saturday, Oct. 9. Mr. Herrmann said that the championship season in the East does not close until Oct. 7, and it is the custom to give the contending teams a day to get ready for the big event.

Burkett Out of Worcester Club.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 20.—Jesse Burkett, for several years manager of the Worcester team of the New England League, and a part owner, today withdrew from connection with the club. His stock was placed in the hands of Secretary John J. O'Donnell, and will be sold to local men.

DETROIT'S PENNANT HOPE IS CRUSHED

Red Sox Take Third Straight Game from Tigers—27,000 See the Game.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 20.—The Boston Red Sox proceeded on their gallop for the American League championship today by beating the Tigers again, making it three victories in the series of four games and fourteen wins in the twenty-two games played between the two clubs this year. Today Detroit got away to a two-run lead, and Boston went to the sixth inning before it could overtake Hughey Jennings's clansmen, but in this session a pass and two hits, one of which was a triple by Duffy Lewis, put Boston ahead 3 to 2, which was the final score.

Jennings sent Dauss, who beat Boston last Thursday, out to repeat his victory, but his great change of pace, while it bothered the Sox considerably, was far from an infallible weapon of defense. "Babe" Ruth, who pitched for Boston, was effective when he was not wild, this weakness causing him to be withdrawn in the eighth inning when the Tigers had three men on bases. Foster, whom the Tigers beat earlier in the series, was the relief man and he saved the day by fanning Catcher Baker.

Another large crowd turned out, the turnstiles checking off more than 27,000 and bringing the attendance for the four-game series to the total of 107,400.

The two clubs picked up the fight where they left off after twelve innings on Saturday, and today's battle was every bit as exciting.

In the first inning Ruth passed Bush and then hit Vitt, Cobb sacrificing and then Bobby Veach drove out a left field single for the two runs which had to stand as the Tigers's total for the day. After this Detroit had a man on base in five of its remaining eight innings, but had no punch left.

Boston got its first run in the first inning on a pass to Hooper, Speaker's out at first base, and Hoblitzel's hit to right, later being unable to take advantage of several fine chances for runs with men well advanced on the bases. In the sixth, however, the lid was blown off, Hoblitzel drawing a pass, and then coming all the way around on Lewis's three-base hit, which shot over Burns's head and rolled to the deep right field corner. Gardner then hit to Young, whose throw to the plate was fast, but Stanage could not make his play, and Lewis was safe with what proved to be the winning run by the smallest margin. Stanage protested so vigorously against the decision by "Silk" O'Loughlin that he was put out of the game.

Even with the score 3 to 2, however, Boston's troubles were not over. In the seventh there were Tigers on first and second bases when Ruth fanned Vitt for the third out, and in the eighth a pass to Cobb, a low throw to first by Gardner on Burns's bounder, and another ticket to pinch-hitter Kavanagh, filled the corners. Ruth then served a wide one on Baker, Manager Carrigan here pulling him from the game and sending in George Foster. Foster's first pitch was a ball, but he then settled down to work, and finally cut the middle of the plate for a third strike, while Baker stood with his bat on his shoulder.

In the third inning Cobb singled, but was caught at the third base by Hooper's great throw following Veach's clean drive, and two innings later, when Dauss got a Texas leaguer over Hobby's head to right field, Hooper whipped the ball back to Barry at first base, and the Tiger pitcher was caught before he could return after rounding the bag. This helped Boston greatly. Bush followed with another hit. In the Red Sox's second inning Gardner was left on third base after opening with a hit. Hooper started the third with a single, but was doubled up with Scott, these two chances being the Sox's best except in the innings in which they scored. The clubs made six hits each, and there were few thrilling fielding features. The score:

Athlete Platt Adams Injured.

Platt Adams, the best all-around amateur jumper in the world, will be out of competition for about six months as the result of a pulled tendon in the left leg, which he received while playing baseball in Newark on Saturday. The injury to the Newark athlete will prevent him from competing in some of the biggest athletic events of the Winter season. The loss of Adams is only one of the serious blows the Mercury Foot athletic ocntingent has received this year. First it was Homer Baker, then international half-mile champion, who was incapacitated through a motor cycle accident. Baker is still in such bad condition that it is difficult for him to walk, although this accident occurred several months ago. Then Kenneth Curtis, the pole vault champion, was laid up with an injured foot, and though he tried to get in shape for the national championships at San Francisco he is still on the hospital list.

Moulton Seeks Trainer's Position.

Dan Moulton, one of the most noted professional sprinters of bygone days and until a few months ago connected with Leland Stanford University of California, has applied to the College of the City of New York for the position of trainer. Moulton severed his connection with Leland Stanford to take charge of the athletic field of the Panama-Pacific Exposition, and in his absence his place was filled. The veteran trainer was in charge of athletics at the California institution when George Horine made his world's high jump record of 6 feet 6⅛ inches. He also received some of the credit for the success of Edward Beeson of the Olympic Club, who is holder of the world's high-jumping record of 6 feet 7 5/16 inches.

It is doubtful if Moulton's application will be received favorably by City College, for while the local institution now has one of the finest athletic fields in the East in the Lewisohn Stadium, it has no money for track and field sports.

Marty Cross Knocks Out Lorenz.

Some interesting boxing was witnessed in the two ten-round bouts last night at the Olympic Atheltic Club of Harlem, one of which ended in a knockout. This was the main bout, in which the principals were Marty Cross, a brother of Leach Cross, and Battling Lorenz, a welterweight of Boston. The latter was hopelessly outclassed from the beginning of the bout until near the end of the third session, when the east side welterweight sent over a right cross to the jaw, and ended the contest.

Willie Astey of the west side was entitled to the honors over George Mass, a former amateur bantamweight champion, in the other ten-round contest. This was a fairly even bout until the eighth session, with both boxers alternately assuming the aggressive, and each accomplishing about an equal amount of effective boxing. In the ninth and tenth rounds, however, the west sider spurted, and this work earned him the honors by a shade. Mass was cut over his right eye.

Farrell Signs with Giants.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Sept. 20.—Taylor ("Chick") Farrell, an outfielder who led the New England League this season with a batting average of .345, today signed a two-year contract to play with the New York Giants.

COMISKEY BASEBALL GENIUS

Old Roman Excels in Every Branch of Game Except as a Player.

Baseball enthusiasts of the "good old days" type look upon Adrian C. Anson, manager and Captain of the famous old Chicago White Stockings, as the greatest manager of bygone days. He was by far the most spectacular figure of his time, a wonderful player, an inspiring leader, a man who had the advancement and integrity of baseball at heart. Yet to say that, because he was a great ball player and captained one of the most remarkable teams in history, he was the superior of any other leader of his time is snap judgment, according to J. C. Kofed of Philadelphia, who regards Charles A. Comiskey, the "Old Roman" and present owner of the Chicago American League team, the peer of the old-time leaders.

In defending the right of Comiskey to the honors invariably ascribed to Anson, Kofed has the following to say:

"When the National League was formed and the late A. G. Spalding induced Anson to leave the Philadelphia Athletics and manage the Chicago White Stockings a powerful team had already been secured for Chicago. Spalding, White, Barnes and McVey, Boston's Big Four, and Glen Hines, Peters, and others were in the Windy City. When Anson took the lead the team was ready for him.

"The game then was in its formative stage, and such players as these needed little direction on actual plays. In fact, Anson was excluded from the 'signal plays' of the Stockings' great infield, Burns, Pfeffer and Williamson executing them without the aid of their leader.

"Those giants overwhelmed their opponents by their massive frames and great reputations even before the contests began. During one season they actually played in full dress suits, stiff white shirts and all, which may give an idea of how contemptuously they regarded their opponents.

"As a player Anson had few peers. As a man, too, there are few who can meet the standard he has set for himself. But as a manager? Without even considering his failure in New York under the Freedman régime, it is hard to see where he can be adjudged the best major league pilot of his day. When his great players could no longer accomplish miracles on the field, Anson was involved in the general ruin. From '92 to '97 the Chicagoans were never in the running. Aggressively Anson was a wonder, constructively a failure.

"The real Nestor of baseball was Harry Wright, a man to whom the game owes more than it ever can pay. It was Wright who organized the first professional team in the Red Stockings of Cincinnati. He was the first man to win six major league championships aside from the two national titles he won with his Red Stockings. In matter of championships won, Anson and Wright stand alone among the managers of the past. Compare them with Frank Selee as team makers and their lustre is considerably dimmed. Selee built championship squads in Boston, and then he went to Chicago, where he gathered the men with whom Frank Chance won so much glory. Yet Selee, to my mind, was not as great a leader as either Anson or Wright.

"When Chance took over the Yankees he had no Evers, Tinkers, Klings, or Browns. So the team stayed in the cellar where it had been before the husky Californian came to the metropolis. As a field leader under a Mack or Comiskey, Chance would have had no equal, but, as a builder of teams he lacked the penetration and clairvoyant power that some managers possess.

"As a business man Jim Mutrie of the old Giants, was without a peer in baseball annals. As a manager Mutrie was fairly successful, winning two pennants during his nine years stay in New York.

"During 1892 and 1893 the Baltimore Orioles were the joke of the National League. The following season, with one of the greatest teams the game has ever known, they forged ahead and then captured three consecutive pennants. Ned Hanlon was the manager, and with such brainy men as McGraw, Jennings, Robinson, Keeler, and the rest to execute his orders and utilize their own wonderful baseball brains, he was successful. When he lost these men, like Anson, he failed to bring together another band with serious pennant intentions.

"You may notice that the name of one of the greatest men baseball has ever seen or may hope to see has not been mentioned. In his day a wonderful player, a manager of the first water, one of the biggest hearted, keenest Americans in the land—Charles Comiskey typifies to my mind the ideal manager of the period. He was one of the constructive geniuses of baseball. When he first covered first base in the big league it was the custom of the guardian of his station never to field his position as it is fielded today. It was his duty merely to take throws. Comiskey revolutionized that. He taught his contemporaries to range over toward second, so increasing the efficiency of the infield fully 25 per cent. The 'hit and run' was another of Comiskey's inventions—as were a score of tricks now utilized in ball games every day.

"Comiskey was, perhaps, the greatest field leader of his time. He had the knack of 'getting the last ounce' from his men, and they respected him and fought for him as they would have fought for no other man under the sun. He was Anson's equal as a player, Selee's as a builder of teams, Mutrie's as a business man. In no single line was any pilot of the past, from Hicks Hayhurst to Frank Chance, his superior.

"Comiskey built up the St. Louis Browns into the champions of the American Association during 1885, 1886, 1887, and 1888, winning the world's championship from Anson's White Stockings in the second year. Individually the Browns were not the brilliant stars that Anson's men were, but Comiskey's wonderful leadership and spirit brought victory when defeat was looming with ominous darkness above them.

"The greatest of his time?

"Wright, Anson, Selee, McAleer, Hanlon, Chance, all the great managers of the past, have adherents among old-time fans. They were excellent handlers of men, those pilots who have made baseball history. But where in that grand galaxy of talent can one find a man so determined yet gentle, so daring yet not foolhardy, so brilliant, brave, and witty as Charles Albert Comiskey—the best loved man in the game?

"Leaders of his type appear but once in a score of years. It is not that the man in the bleachers three decades ago admired Anson less, but he loved Comiskey more. And so we all love and admire the greatest pilot the past has seen, Charley Comiskey."

Three Recruits for Giants.

The Giants have signed three more recruits and will give the youngsters a chance to show their skill before the season is over. Manager McGraw has signed Pitcher Fred Herbert of Toronto, the twirler who was to go to the Giants in the proposed Marquard deal, which fell through. Ben Dyer, the infielder who trained at Marlin with the Giants a few seasons ago, has been recalled from the St. Paul Club of the American Association. McGraw has also signed Catcher Bradley Kocher of the Toronto Club.

Yamada Again Defeats Coleman.

Koji Yamada administered another defeat to Hal A. Coleman, national amateur Class B title holder, in an exhibition match at Maurice Daly's Billiard Academy, Forty-ninth Street and Broadway, last night, by the score of 250 to 225. The contest required 26 innings, and, although Yamada maintained a lead throughout, it was interesting. Coleman played a consistent game, but was unable to offset the big runs made by the Japanese. Yamada's highest run was 69, and he had an average of 9 16-26. Coleman made a high run of 32, with an average of 9 2-25.

WAGNER'S LONE RUN DEFEATS BROOKLYN

His Double, Followed by Another by Baird, Shuts Out the Dodgers, 1 to 0.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 20.—There may still be those who labor under the impression that Honus Wagner, after twenty years of baseball, is not such a powerful factor in the game as was once the case, but you couldn't prove it by any member of the Brooklyn team. He scored one tally against the Dodgers this afternoon, and that was enough to give victory to the Pirates by a count of 1 to 0.

For the opening game of the series Robbie sent Ed Pfeffer to the mound, as Ed has been a more consistent winner for the Brooklynites than any other of the pitchers. Opposed to him was Bob Harmon, and the game was a pitchers' battle. Pfeffer was hit hard at times, but he managed to hold the Pirates safe until the seventh inning. It was then that Hans Wagner got his only hit of the game, and it was the foundation for Pittsburgh's run. There had been long hits before—a double by Johnston and a triple by Viox—but in each instance the Brooklynite had been able to escape from the difficulty without damage to the score board. This time it was different. Wagner crashed his bat against one of Pfeffer's slants and sent it out to left field for a pair of bases. Hans raced down to third when Viox went out at first, and then Baird brought gloom to the Brooklyn camp by smashing a double to right field, and Honus came to the plate with the winning run. There you have the combination that beat Brooklyn.

While Pfeffer was being soundly thumped, Bob Harmon was imbued with some of the cunning of his team mate Mamaux. He wasn't unhittable, but it was almost that as far as Brooklyn was concerned. Just three men, O'Mara, Wheat, and McCarty, bumped the ball safely, and there was only one of the Dodgers who went as far around the circuit as second base. This was Smyth, who took the place of Wheat after the first inning. He was fortunate enough to get one of the two passes that Harmon presented, and stole second. The journey ended there. Strangely, not one of the men who singled went beyond first base. The score:

Toney Allows Braves Three Hits.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Sept. 20.—Toney's masterly pitching enabled Cincinnati to win from Boston today, 4 to 1. In the second inning Connolly doubled, and after Maranville had been retired Gowdy was intentionally passed and Hughes singled, Connolly trying to get home. Killifer's throw was good, but Clarke dropped the ball and Conolly scored. Hughes pitched fair ball with the exception of the third inning, when he hit Groh, who stole second base and scored on Herzog's double. The latter scored on Griffith's single. Barnes, who succeeded Hughes in the eighth inning, was hit for a triple by Killifer, who scored when Evers fumbled Herzog's drive. Herzog stole second and third and scored on Griffith's out. Score:

FISH AND GAME NEWS.

Fishermen who like to catch perch will do well to try Weequahic Park Lake, in Newark, where they are very plentiful at present. Among the catches made on Saturday were the following: Dr. Buerman, 6; M. Feller and R. Wright, 6 each; J. Baker, 2 perch, 2 catfish, and 2 crappie; H. Nixon, 6, and George Warmsley, 6.

Waterfowl have great powers of flight. The canvas back duck covers from 130 to 160 feet a second. The blue-winged teal and the green-winged teal, the blue bills and the red heads are only a little slower. Mallards, pintails, wood ducks, black ducks, and others can easily fly faster than a mile a minute. Even such large birds as cranes, swans, and pelicans, and geese can fly at a speed of more than 100 feet a second. The speed of waterfowl has often been measured with great accuracy. Two men take positions on a duck pass a measured distance apart. The first man carries a stop watch and a gun, the second a gun only. As the fowl pass the first blind the timer shoots in order to frighten the birds into full speed and starts his watch. As the ducks pass the second blind the man there fires a shot and the timer stops his watch. The usual length of the course is a quarter of a mile, although a mile track is sometimes used.

Yellow-leg snipe are plentiful on Long Island and at present, as the following recent catches will show. At Oak Island Frank Lucas, Charles Murdock, and Fred Messing on Saturday bagged fifteen apiece. In the Freeport Meadows, off Hempstead Bay, Alexander Mulholland, James J. Hill, and Frank Atwood bagged the limit, as did Carl Andrews and George Wilbur off Long Beach.

The Neversink River, a stream about a mile from Guymard, N. Y., has always been noted for its fine trout fishing, but during the past few weeks some fine catches of black bass have been made there. George Fredericks was up there last Saturday and on his return showed ten beauties that he had caught.

Mr. and Mrs. George Ryan and their son, Dave Ryan, returned Saturday from a fishing trip spent at Lake Winola, Penn. They spent two weeks at the lake, and during that time landed thirty-one bass and forty-six pickerel. The largest bass taken was caught by Mrs. Ryan and weighed 3 pounds 2 ounces.

The gunning on the meadows in the southern part of New Jersey is driving the reed birds and snipe to the beaches in greater number than ever before. The surf fishermen often have the company of from ten to 100 birds that are picking up feed from the beach. The snipe are exceptionaly wild, and the reedies are thin. There are plenty of them on all the meadows below Barnegat.

John Corish, the boathouse keeper at Branch Brook Park Lake, reports the following catches at the lake: F. L. Chandler, one three-and-a-half pound bass; J. Muench, one four-pound Oswego bass; M. Higgins, four bass, and R. V. Addis, three bass. Frogs and live bait are giving the best results at present. Recent catches at Weequahic Park Lake included the following: J. Dockett, a two-and-a-half pound black bass and four perch; F. Smith, a three-pound calico bass, and J. Clayton, three bass and three perch.

A NEW TENNIS BOOK.

Latest Volume Gives Many Valuable Hints by the Expert Players.

The latest book on lawn tennis has just been published by J. Parmly Paret and S. Wallis Merrihew, publisher and editor of American Lawn Tennis. Sixteen years ago Paret won the all-comers' tournament at Newport. He was defeated in the ensuing challenge round. The book contains a great deal of sane advice to beginners and to players who have not reached the upper fifty in the ranking list. This advice is supplemented by a compilation of opinions on various points of the game written by a number of its foremest players in this and other countries. The opinions were gathered in unusual fashion, and in them are many sidelights on the methods of tennis stars. Over forty questions were sent to leading players, and the quotations attributed to each of them are extracts from their replies.

Many readers may note with some surprise, however, the fact that the opinions of leading players that are presented contain none from either William M. Johnston, the 19-year-old Californian who won the national championship at Forest Hills, or from his principal victim, Maurice E. McLoughlin, who was rated as the world's best player. The book was written, of course, before Johnston upset calculations at Forest Hills and before 17-year-old Harold Throckmorton won the interscholastic title; otherwise the assertion in the first chapter that "it takes ten years of hard work to reach championship form, except in isolated rare cases," might have been omitted. Johnston, however, receives credit for driving "one of the fastest balls seen in tournament play."

R. Norris Williams, 2d, the 1914 holder of the national title, answered a number of the questions about singles play. But to every question concerning disputed points in doubles play the former singles champion sent in this answer:

"I don't play doubles; I only try."

One of the questions asked was:

"Would limiting the server to one ball, cutting off the second service, in doubles only, stop the present advantage of the serving side?"

Tom Bundy, McLoughlin's doubles partner, answered laconically, "No." Karl Behr was equally brief. "Yes," was his answer. F. B. Alexander said: "Men with good ground strokes have no trouble in breaking through now; why change and demoralize the game?" R. D. Little said that the service would still be an advantage, "but not an improper one, as it now is." Others were divided in their opinions on this, as on a great many of the other questions. J. C. Parke wrote that "it might be worth testing."

One question, the answers to which probably will interest many players, was: "Do you think thin 'sneakers' or heavy-soled shoes are better for hard play?"

Williams replied, "Sneakers." Bundy agreed, adding that spikes should be used for turf. Behr recommended the heavy-solded shoes; so did R. D. Little. Dean Mathey qualified his answer, recommending "sneakers if the arch does not suffer."

A good many of the points that perplex the average player are dealt with at considerable length. It is recommended that the game be learned in the following order: First, the grip of the racquet; second, the making of the strokes; third, the use of the feet, legs, eyes, arms, and weight of the body; fourth, placing the ball; fifth, technique of the twist ball; sixth, position in court; seventh, angles of attack and defense; eighth, strategy; ninth, deception and counter deception. Light racquets, from 13½ to 14¼ ounces in weight, are urged for beginners. An important suggestion is made regarding the manner of hitting the ball. The player is advised to avoid depending on his or her muscles for the desired force, but is told to learn to swing the racquet so that the force will come principally from the momentum and weight of the racquet itself. This manner of striking is compared to the snap of a whip, and it is pointed out that it not only produces the fastest tennis but saves the strength of the player. The player is advised to grip the racquet tightly and to hold it by the extreme end, although some of the best players differ in this. While still in beginners' classes the players are told to keep their eyes on the ball itself, instead of attempting to study the face or actions of opponents.

Regarding preparation for a stroke the book says that beginners spoil 80 per cent. of their strokes by waiting until the ball has bounded before drawing back the racquet. The best they can do then is to make a sort of jab at the ball to make up for the lost time during which they should have swung back. Another common fault of beginners is waiting to watch their shots. They are urged to prepare immediately for the next shot. Small-handled racquets are recommended, and beginners are told to shun wrapped and other artificial handles. The question of whether the thumb should be held up, along the handle, or closely wrapped about the handle is thrashed out thoroughly. For defensive play, at least, the latter method is said to be the best.

Another question thrashed out thoroughly is whether or not the grip should be changed for the backhand stroke. Answers from the leading players on this point are printed and nearly all of them say that they change the grip for this stroke. Most of the experts wrote that they gripped their racquets at the extreme end. Tom Bundy, in this connection, gave away one of his little secrets of play. He has his racquets shortened three-quarters of an inch, and then grips the racquet at the extreme end.

Attention of the beginner is called to the fact that the playing centre of the racquet is very small and that the resiliency decreases rapidly as the sides are reached. Many ruined strokes are attributed to the fact that beginners have difficulty in hitting the ball with the centre of the racquet. Many beginners, the book says, develop the habit of advancing the left foot in playing the backhand stroke, and points out that this awkward position cuts off the back swing of the racquet.

Tennis Players Fail to Show Up.

Although thirty-two players were drawn in the first open tennis tournament of the Sunnydale Country Club of Mount Vernon, only two contestants put in an appearance on the courts yesterday. These were: E. Lewisohn and D. Tier, and the former won in straight sets at 6—4, 6—1. The entries included a number of the leading players of the metropolitan district, including Harold A. Throckmorton, national interscholastic champion, Dr. William Rosenbaum, Abraham Bassford, Jr., Charles Chambers, Lindley Dunham, Herbert W. Foster, Benjamin M. Phillips, A. M. Lovebond and W. Rand, 3rd. The committee announced that players failing to show up today will be defaulted.

Another Title for Miss Bjurstedt.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Sept. 20.—Miss Molla Bjurstedt of Norway and Miss Carrie Neeley of Chicago captured the finals in the women's doubles of the tri-State tennis tourney here today. They defeated Mrs. Malcolm McNeill, Jr., of Chicago and Miss Ruth Sanders of Cincinnati in straight sets, 6—1, 6—0.

NINETEEN STARTERS IN TROTTING RACE

Vaster the Victor on Columbus Track—Russell Boy and Volga Win.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 20.—Russell Boy and Volga were winning favorites at today's opening of the Columbus Grand Circuit races. Russell Boy, over a track that was not fast, did three miles around 2:08 in taking the King Stake, while Volga set a year's record for two-year-old trotters with heats in 2:11¼ and 2:09¾, when she won her division of The Horse Review Futurity. In her last heat, when she entered the 2:10 list, Volga finished easily four lengths ahead of Walnut Tree.

Nineteen starters in the 2:11 trot made the field the largest that the Grand Circuit has known for nine year. Duchess, the first choice, won the first heat and was able to step away from every horse except Vaster in the next two. The Winnipeg gelding took them by scant heads, but the final one was not so closely contested.

Bessie R., an Indiana half-miler, came out in the 2:14 pace. She took the first two heats, getting the earlier one in 2:05¼ without being extended. Camelia, the first choice, got a flying start in the third heat and managed to ward off Dwight Logan, which was racing beside her all through the stretch. Bessie R., cut off at the start, finished fourth. The race had to go over, and will be the first event taken up tomorrow, when the Hoster-Columbus $10,000 trotting stake and The Review three-year-old futurity trot, worth $8,000, are to be decided.

A. A. U. OFFICERS RE-ELECTED

No Controversy Arises at Annual Meeting of Metropolitan Association

The long-expected controversy in the ranks of the Metropolitan Association of the Amateur Athletic Union is still another year off, for at the annual convention of the organization held last night in the theatre of the Seventy-first Regiment Armory the dove of peace reigned, and all the officers, with the exception of the members of the Registration Committee, were elected without opposition. Frederick W. Rubien, who has headed the association since the death of James E. Sullivan a year ago, will be President for another year. Jacob W. Stumpf jumped from the Chairmanship of the Registration Committee into the chair of Vice President, and Andrew F. Tully will remain the Secretary-Treasurer at an annual salary of $300.

The delegates honored Handicapper Obertubessing for the good work by giving him another term.

The only semblance of dissension during the meeting came with the vote on the members of the Registration Committee by the Board of Managers. When the vote was counted it was found that George Mathews and Charles Elbert of the present committee were retained for their fourth and third terms, respectively. They will have as associates John J. O'Hara of the Caldwell Field Club, Stephen A. Byrne of the Trinity Club, and Charles F. Ericksen of the Scandinavian American Athletic League. There were nine candidates for these positions, and the vote was: Mathews, 67; Elbert, 59; O'Hara, 63; Byrne, 60; Ericksen, 69; Harold Dibblee, Seventy-first Regiment A. A., 48; James A. McKenna, Ozanam Association, 32; Charles F. Lynch, 14; Frank Foran, St. Anselm's A. C., 50.

The defeat of Dibblee and McKenna was a surprise, for they were considered almost certain victors. Mathews and Elbert, running as "independents," made an exceptionally good showing. A subscription for the memorial to the late James E. Sullivan was started when Congressman Murray A. Hurlburt, representing the Annunciation Athletic Club, a new member of the A. A. U., answered the plea of Justice Bartow S. Weesk for funds for this cause by donating $10. This sum was received after the Sullivan memorial had become almost a dead issue, but before individual and club members stopped subscribing $1,214.35 had been added to the $1,452 collected last year, and this with the $2,500 subscribed by the National A. A. A., brought the total for the fund to $5,163.35.

The subscribers last night were: Unknown, $100; Annunciation A. C. $25, increased $15 from original subscription; County Clerk William Schneider, $25; Pastime A. C., $20; Bronx Church House, $25; Holy Cross Lyceum, $10; Public Playgrounds Commission, $50; Shinnecock Club, $10; 635 boys and girls of Bohemian Gymnastic Association, $6.35; Gus Sacks, $50; Smart Set A. C., $10; St. Christopher A. C., $10; Sunday School Athletic League, $25; Lester Stevens, $25; Long Island A. C., $10; Church A. L., $10; Union Settlement A. C., $10; Mohawk A. C., $10; Passaic Valley Club, $10; Emanuel House, $10; Edward O'Brien, for Newark Diocesan Union, $10; Hudson County A. L., $10; Mount Vernon Y. M. H. A., $5; Educational Alliance, $10; Inter Settlement A. A., $10; Scandinavian American A. L., $10; New York A. C., $350; Irish-American A. C., $100; Millrose A. A., $100; Terence aFrley, $25; American Walkers Association, $10; Seventy-first Regiment A. A., $15; Greek-American A. C., $5; Fordham University A. A., $25.

With the approval of Mrs. Sullivan, a special committee of the Metropolitan Association, composed of Messrs. Quinn, Rubien, Ferris, and McAleenan, have secured a plot in Calvary Cemetery, and on Nov. 14, the day before the annual meeting of the Amateur Athletic Union here, the remains of Mr. Sullivan will be interred. They now rest in a valut in Calvary.

The past year was by no means prosperous, financially, for the local association. According to the report of Treasurer Tulyy, the association lost $1,189.87, but this was due largely to a donation of $500 to the Sullivan Memorial Fund, and the heavy expenses incurred in sending athletes to the national championships at San Francisco. The junior championships for the first time in years were conducted at a small profit, and the gymnastic championships also came through on the right side of the ledger.

The hundred and more members of the Board of Managers present spent a long time wrangling over the recommendations of the Registration Committee, and it was some time after midnight before the convention closed. A recommendation was unanimously passed that the Board of Managers hold quarterly meetings.

The following were elected as delegates to the National A. A. U.: F. W. Rubien, Bartow S. Weeks, P. J. Walsh, H. Obertubessing, J. W. Stumpf, and F. J. V. Delaney. The alternates selected were J. J. O'Hara, Murray Hurlburt, W. H. Brady, J. J. McHugh, James P. Cooke, and George B. Hepbron.

FAST POLO AT RUMSON.

Piping Rock Team Defeats Deal and Wins Leg on Cup.

Piping Rock polo team easily defeated the Deal four in the final match for the Monmouth County Cup, which was played yesterday on Herbert Field, at the Rumsen Country Club. The score was 13 to 6¼ goals.

This trophy, which is one of the two offered by the Rumson Country Club at its annual tournament, is open to teams of four whose aggregate handicap does not exceed sixteen goals. It becomes the property of the club winning it three times, and is played for annually on the grounds of the club. Individual prizes are added.

The cup was first put into competition in 1912, to commemorate the opening of the new polo field. In that year a home team obtained a leg on the trophy. In 1913 and 1914 Great Neck won legs. The North Shore team did not enter the competition this year.

Piping Rock carried an aggregate handicap of nine points against two by their opponents, thus the victors were allowing Deal seven goals. The latter were unable to make one earned point and they lost three-quarters by safeties, finishing the match with less score than they started.

The playing of H. East of the Piping Rock Club was the feature of the match. He has been at the top of his game throughout the tournament and has given a wonderful exhibition of polo. Yesterday he was again all over the field and virtually scored at will.

While the losers put up a plucky game they were outclassed and had no defense against their stronger opponents. The line-up:

Piping Rock—John O'Day, 1; H. East, 5; Ralph Kirlin, 0; A. Notter, 3; total, 9.
Deal—H. R. Guggenheimer, 1; G. C. Sherman, 0; J. E. Meyer, 1; M. D. Bamberger, 0; total 2.

Halpin in New York A. C. Games.

Tom Halpin, the Boston A. A. middle distance runner, now traveling faster than ever after his long lay-off from cinder path competition, will compete in the New York A. C. Fall games at Travers Island next Saturday. He will try to break Mel Sheppard's 600-yard record of 1:10 4-5. Halpin requested the Mercury Foot organization to arrange a race for him with Ted Meredith, national quarter-mile champion, but this the club declined to do, being opposed to special contests, and believing also that Meredith is not now in the best condition. The Boston A. A. representative has equaled 49 seconds in three trials recently.

FOOTBALL PRACTICE AT COLLEGES

FOOTBALL PROBLEMS OF ARMY AND NAVY

The Situation at West Point Seems Easier Than the One at Annapolis.

Army and Navy enter upon the 1915 football season with vastly different problems to solve, meeting, in the course of their preparation for the annual battle, this time in New York, different sets of opponents. Two elevens harder to judge than these on the eve of the final game could hardly be found in the East. They meet in common no standard eleven, and as both have but the one goal in view a study of the early season at West Point and Annapolis hardly gives a line on either in the team sense, great as the opportunities are to watch individuals and position play.

In general, however, it may be said that the Army need only attain to the standard of a year ago to maintain its forward place in the East, come victory or defeat in the final game, while the Navy must reorganize the coaching system to the end that better use may be made of some of the fine material that turns up every year at Annapolis. In the course of the last few years the Army has had a settled policy, a distinct plan of campaign, the variations being noticeable only in detail, in building into a well-grounded, sound, true type of attack and defense the special aptitudes of certain men. The Navy, on the contrary, has vacillated not a little, there having been at Annapolis apparently something of a struggle between progressive and conservative opinion. Flatly, the Navy has not kept abreast of the game.

Perhaps the blessing of unusually stalwart material has not been entirely unmixed. It has taken some time to recover from the effect of putting too much dependence in a wonderful line that counted among its members such men as Brown and Howe, and a kicker like Dalton, who might at any moment score from as far back as the forty-yard line. The rest of the Navy's play was not rounded out, and when, with Dalton gone, the Navy attempted much the same type of play built around a man who punted from close to his shoetops, it was natural that the superlatively good block-kick tactics of the Army should give the soldiers command of the game.

In the meantime the Navy depended largely upon power for the attack, an attack that was not sufficiently varied. The forward pass, like the Navy defense against it, became something of a makeshift. Both on attack and defense there must be vast improvement in this branch of the game this year, and the best evidence that there will be such improvement lies in the presence at Annapolis of Lieutenant Jonas Ingram as head coach, and Huntington R. Hardwick of Harvard as his assistant. There can hardly be a doubt that these two keen, broad-minded students of football will put on the passing game cleverly executed and in its proper place and proportion. A little greater freedom in the play of the line would also prove a help, as well as a complete readjustment of the relative positions of the backs when meeting the open type of game. After that it is a matter of material and generalship in action.

The Army has a far more difficult task before it than appears on the surface. The soldiers have lost an entire backfield and a whole squad of ends. They have lost Prichard, one of the greatest field generals the game has seen, whether under the old or the new rules, and his twin terror, Merillat, the great receiver of the forward pass, and a wonderful runner from his position. Few ends have ever got around so fast in that peculiar pinwheel play that wrought so much havoc with the Navy two years ago. An excellent line remains, pivoted on McEwan, who looks to be in even better shape than last year, but a line with little hope of reinforcement by material coming up from the plebe class.

The soldiers must develop an entire backfield, two new quarter backs, and half a dozen ends, and this is the problem with which Lieutenant Charles D. Daly and his aids are wrestling just now. There will be, of course, a thorough trial of Neyland, last year's companion to Merillat, with Oliphant also working in the quarter back position. Neyland is an athlete of the all-around type. He has developed co-ordination of hand, foot, and eye, not alone by football, but by baseball—his remarkable record as a pitcher last year is still fresh in every one's memory—and by boxing. He is fast and he is tall—tall enough to continue that little habit of Prichard's of looking over the opposing line that so disconcerted the sailors at Philadelphia. He is long of arm, having a fine sweep with the forward pass, and there is in him the making of one of those rare types, the fast and heavy quarter back. He is weighing at present 170 pounds net. Of course he is by no means a fixture, but to the outsider he looks to be rich in promise.

Oliphant had too much to forget last year to make a really fine player in a single season at West Point. Certain mannerisms that were not drawbacks in the type of game played in the part of the country from which he came proved too risky in the East. He is about due for a good season this year, because he is a hard and earnest worker, and has had a year's excellent experience under one of the best coaching systems in the country. Most of the other backfield candidates look to be a little light, and there is need of more and better kickers.

Should the Army solve its problem of building up the open game once more to work smoothly with the other forms of attack, and the Navy work a regeneration in its type of play, which seems at this writing not unlikely, there should be a great battle at the Polo Grounds to conclude the season. It has been the fashion in the past to say that neither team played football in a class with the leading colleges in its final game. That fashion has been steadily going out, and it is to be noted not alone that the annual clash draws the best football men in the country to the scene of battle, but that these men go away with a little broader knowledge of the game than when the first whistle blew. Out in the Middle West they are still analyzing last year's game—a perfect game from the Army side to set before any quarterback.

Rutgers to Play in New York.

NEW BRUNSWICK, Sept. 20.—Charles Reed, manager of the Rutgers football team, announced today that a game with Washington and Jefferson in New York was practically assured for Nov. 6, in addition to the games with Hamilton Fish's All Stars at the Polo Grounds, and New York University at Ohio Field.

A game has also been definitely arranged with the Springfield Y. M. C. A. College team at the Federal League Park in Newark on Oct. 30. Negotiations are under way with Colgate for a game either in New York or Newark.

Anglo-American Cricketers Win.

In the final game of the championship series of the Van Cortlandt Park Cricket League, played at Van Cortlandt Park yesterday between the Anglo-American and Yonkers teams, a close finish was the result, the former team winning by the margin of 2 runs. J. Riddett of Yonkers was high score man with 15, while doubles were added by E. Shaw and T. Baker for their respective teams. the totals were: Anglo-Americans, 37; Yonkers, 35.

Willie Beecher an Easy Victor.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 20.—At the reopening of the Knickerbocker A. C. tonight Willie Beecher of New York demonstrated his superiority over Frankie Mack of Boston in a ten-round bout. Mack showed to advantage in the opening rounds, but slowed down after receiving a few of Beecher's punches. Mack landed frequently, but his blows lacked power, and the final rounds were decidedly in favor of the New York boy, who was strong at the finish.

JAMES MORTIMER DEAD.

Well-Known Dog Judge and Superintendent Dies at Hempstead.

James Mortimer, the dean of dog judges and bench show Superintendents, died yesterday morning at 10 o'clock at his residence in Hempstead, L. I. Mr. Mortimer was in his 73d year, and for almost four decades was prominent in the kennel circles of the United States and Canada. Mr. Mortimer was in failing health at the last show of the Ladies' Kennel Association of America at Mineola in June. Two weeks ago Mr. Mortimer went to Toronto, Canada, to act as one of the judges at the annual bench show in connection with the Canadian Industrial Exposition. He became ill and was unable to fulfill the appointment

Mr. Mortimer was born in Credeton, Devon, England, and came to America forty years ago. Like all his countrymen he was extremely fond of pointers, and when he arrived here he soon sought out persons with a similar taste, and eventually became manager for the Westminster Kennel Club at Babylon, L. I., the members of which kept up a large kennel of gun dogs on the premises. It was under Mr. Mortimer's advice and management that the Westminster Kennel Club secured several excellent gun dogs. At the death of Charles Lincoln, Mr. Mortimer became Superintendent of the greatest of all kennel fixtures in America, the Westminster Kennel Club's show in New York. Year by year the show grew in its entries and quality. Mr. Mortimer never lost his interest in pointers and foxhounds. It was the "Devonshire" that was in him apparently that always cropped up. Some years ago he became fond of Sealyham terriers, since his wife was born at Fishguard and close to the old estate of the Edwardeses of Sealyham. Mrs. Mortimer, two sons, and two daughters survive the deceased. The funeral services will take place at the Mortimer home, Hempstead, on Thursday, at 2:30 P. M.

It was generally expected in the kennel circles yesterday that Harry Mortimer will succeed his father as Superintendent of the Westminster Kennel Club shows.

DAY IN COLLEGE FOOTBALL.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 20.—The Yale football squad held its first practice on the home grounds this afternoon, Frank Hinkey sending the first and second elevens through two sharp ten-minute halves. Part of the practice was held behind closed gates, and this policy will be pursued during the rest of the week, in preparation for the first game of the season with the University of Maine on Saturday. The squad now numbers sixty, and about twenty additional men are expected to report this week.

The work of Harry Legore was the feature of the play. No scoring was done by either eleven, but Legore made several long runs. He has been playing on the second eleven for the past week, but will undoubtedly be the selection for full back in the game with Maine. "Chub" Sheldon and Van Holt played at the tackle positions on the 'Varsity, and Mosley and Allen, the two freshman ends of last year, were on the wings. Kent, formerly of St. Mark's, and Kositsky were the guards, and Way, the former guard, was at centre. He had been tried at this position on the second eleven for two days. Lowry, a novice, was quarter back. Captain Wilson and Mal Scovil were the half backs, and Guernsey full back. The veterans, Legore and Jim Sheldon, played full back and guard, respectively, on the second team. The men are practicing for the present on the old football gridiron.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 20.—Harvard's football team got its first taste of the real game this afternoon, the 'Varsity scrimmaging against the scrubs for more than an hour, the coaches trying out practically all of their first-string men. Except for the absence of Watson and Gilman the first team as it started play represented Harvard's best strength. Watson, the quarter back, was overcome by the heat last week, while Gilman, the 1913 tackle, is taking no chances with a bad ankle. Wallace's eligibility not being decided, the coaches used Wiggin of last year's freshmen eleven at centre. He will probably play the position in Saturday's game. Bigelow and Parsh were the tackles, Cowan and Duncan guards, and C. Coolidge and Soucy the ends. Willcox was at quarter, having for his backs Mahan, Ming and McKinlock, all of whom have played two years. The 'Varsity held the ball all the time, playing straight football and making several touchdowns against a very well-organized scrub team. L. Curtis, a substitute end last year; Harte of the 1917 freshmen, and Caner, a tackle, arrived at Cambridge today.

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 20.—The Cornell football men were put through a hard scrimmage this afternoon, the first and second and third and fourth teams alternating in taking the field. For most of the time play was started on the twenty-yard line. The line-up of the 'Varsity began to take form today. Shelton, Eckley, and Ryerson were tried at ends. Jameson, last year's substitute, and Gillies, a big recruit from last year's freshman eleven, were the tackles. Anderson, last year's regular, and Snyder, a former substitute, were placed at guard and Brown, substitute centre of a year ago, played that position on the 'Varsity today. Barrett was at quarter back and Collins at left half back. Shiverick, a likely looking recruit from the freshman team, was at right half, and Mueller, a substitute of last year's team, was at full back.

A squad of about forty men reported to Tom Reilley, coach of the New York University football team yesterday. The candidates had a varied practice that started with schooling in handling the ball and work on the tackling dummy, and ended with a light scrimmage practice in breaking through a defensive line. Sulzer, a 280-pound candidate from Hartford, and Morris, formerly of Brown Preparatory, are now candidates for line positions. Williams, who played tackle on the Cushing Academy eleven, also reported. Among the other men who joined the squad were Loeflelhous, from Stuyvesant High School; Lyons, a tackle from Orange High School, and Freer, a half back from the High School of Commerce. There will be an abundance of material for the back field positions.

All fears that Alex Yule, the Fordham full back, would not return to the Bronx university this year were dispelled when the Maroon veteran reported yesterday. Yule was Fordham's biggest point scorer a year ago. Tom Corriden, last year's left end, also made his first appearance yesterday. The practice was the hardest of the season, and included the first scrimmage. No attempt was made to choose a 'Varsity line, veterans appearing on both sides. The back field spent part of the time practicing kicking and forward passing.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 20.—Additional candidates for the football team at the Naval Academy arrived today. Eight of them were placed with the first squad, including Schildhauer, a former enlisted man, who will try for guard. The arrivals included Miles and Ward of last year. The full squad is expected by Wednesday. Coach Ingraham was assisted by Harwick, the former Harvard player, who will be here the entire season; Logan, who played quarter back on the Crimson last year; Hollenback of Pennsylvania, and Lieutenant Smith, a former academy player.

CARLISLE, Penn., Sept. 20.—The Carlisle Indian football players came out of Saturday's game against Albright College in good physical condition notwithstanding the extreme hot weather. This afternoon Coach Kelly eased up to some extent. After a short signal drill the 'Varsity scrimmaged for thirty minutes against the reserve eleven.

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Penn., Sept. 20.—The process of elimination was begun today by Resident Coach Keady with his squad of Lehigh football men, and some of the veterans will have to work hard to retain their positions. Bigelow, a former Minneapolis University player, and Nutter, a Boston man, were the 'Varsity ends today. Robinson, at centre, was another new man. Crawford took Halsted's place at full back, the latter being on crutches with a sprained ankle. Particularly good work was done at half back by Boland, Tomlinson, and Hazletine.

EASTON, Penn., Sept. 20.—Another Exeter man is a candidate for the Lafayette football team. Clough, the former quarter back of the New England team, reported at the practice on March Field this afternoon and played in the backfield. Coach Crowell gave the squad the first scrimmage of the season, which lasted twenty minutes.

PASSAIC, N. J., Sept. 20.—Passaic's oldest resident, Benjamin Franklin Fell, of 42 Ascension Street, celebrated the beginning of his 100th year today by taking his usual daily walk. Mr. Fell was born Sept. 20, 1816, in London, England.

Mr. Fell attributes his long life to the fact that he never drinks liquor and that he never smokes. He eats heartily and sleeps well.

Anthony Comstock Improving.

Special to The New York Times.

SUMMIT, N. J., Sept. 20.—The condition of Anthony Comstock, the vice crusader, who has been ill at his home here for the last week from intermittent fever, was declared by Dr. John Burling, the attending physician, to be much improved today. A blood test was made yesterday, and this morning it was declared that "Mr. Comstock is considerably improved."

ASTOR CUP RACE DRAWS BIG ENTRY

Twenty-eight Nominations for Sheepshead Bay Event—Nine Foreign Cars Will Compete.

It was announced yesterday that twentye-ight entries had been received for the 350-mile Astor Cup race which will be held at the Sheepshead Bay Speedway Oct. 2. This total may be increased, as all nominations mailed yesterday and bearing a postmark of not later than midnight will be accepted. Of the cars entered nine are of foreign make.

The list of drivers includes all of those best known in the auto racing world. Every winner of a classic event this year will compete for the Astor Cup and the $50,000 in money prizes. Among the contestants will be Harry S. Harkness, President of the Speedway corporation, who will re-enter the racing game as pilot of one of the Delage cars. He is the son of the late L. V. Harkness, and ranks as one of the best amateur drivers in the country. In 1905 he made a new record between Boston and New York, and also established new figures for the climb up Mount Washington.

Under the conditions of the race the candidates must enter the elimination trials which will be held at the Speedway Friday and Saturday. It is required that to be eligible to enter the actual race for the trophy a car must maintain an average of eighty-five miles an hour for a two-mile trip around the course. The positions in the races will be determined on the basis of these elimination trials, the one making the fastest lap getting the pole in the first row. It is believed that every one of the cars will qualify at the high speed demanded.

Ralph de Palma, who has won many of the classic events, will drive the same Mercedes with which he won the last 500-mile race at Indianapolis. Dario Resta, winner of the Vanderbilt Cup and Grand Prize races, will drive the Peugeot in which he made the ten-mile record average of 108.03 miles an hour on the Speedway last Saturday, and with which he won the 100 and 500 mile races at Chicago. Bob Burnham will also drive a Peugeot, as will Ralph Mulford, John Aiken, and Howard Wilcox.

Barney Oldfield will be at the wheel of a Delage. There are four Stutz cars entered. Among the drivers of these will be Gil Anderson and Earl Cooper, who have won a number of victories this Summer. Eddie Rickenbacker will drive the same Maxwell which carried him to victory in the Providence and Sioux City races and which led all of the American cars at Indianapolis. Another American team of which great expectations are entertained are Eddie Pullen and Glover Ruckstell, who will drive Mercers.

The drivers and the cars in which they will compete are:

Ralph De Palma, Mercedes; Barney Oldfield, Delage; Harry S. Harkness, Delage; Earl Cooper, Stutz; Gil Anderson, Stutz; driver not named, Stutz; driver not named, Stutz; Dario Resta, Peugeot; Bob Burman, Peugeot; Ralph Mulford, Peugeot; John Aitken, Peugeot; Howard Wilcox, Peugeot; Bob Moore, Sunbeam; Eddie Pullen, Mercer; Glover Ruckstell, Mercer; Eddie Rickenbacker, Maxwell; driver not named, Maxwell; Jean Porporato, F. R. P.; driver not named, F. R. P.; Louis Chevrolet, car not named; Eddie O'Donnell, Duesenberg; Pete Henderson, Duesenberg; driver not named, Duesenberg; Irma Vail, Mulford Special; Tom Alley, Ogren; Ora Halbe, Sebring; Grover Bergdoll, Erwin Special; driver not named, Erwin Special.

RUGBY AND OUR GAME.

Nevada Coach Compares Main Essentials of the Two Sports.

J. R. Glasscock, coach of the University of Nevada football team, commenting on the American game after the university authorities decided to abandon Rugby for the home brand, said:

"The question of American football versus Rugby is a very vital and interesting subject. Were I able to discuss the absolute merits of both games pro and con, it would indeed comprise a volume of no small dimensions. The average American youth demands for his recreation a game that introduces all the principles of strength, courage, and skill. American football embodies these three principles to a nicety.

"Like Rugby, the present American game does not need weight as an essential to a perfect fighting machine. The boy who thinks quickly, acts upon his own impulse in all emergencies, is worth ten times his weight as mere weight goes.

"In Rugby possession of the ball meant very little, the ball changed hands constantly and the ground gain was usually on long runs, kicks to touch, or high centres or dribbling rushes.

"It is not the long runs that count in the American game, but the consistent gaining of three or four yards through the enemy's weak places, and to do this we must have the ability to concentrate and mobilize rapidly at points where the attack is least expected. In Rugby the forces were too scattered to do this effectively.

"Waterloo may or may not have been won on the Rugby fields of Eton or Harrow. I have some doubt as to the outcome of that famous battle if it hadn't been for Bluecher and mass formation, thrown in at the right time. The tactics used by the German militarists of today in the Russian campaign, that of massing the greatest amount of troops at the right time, in the right spot, are similar to those used in American football, and it has been found repeatedly that this force when applied correctly will plow through any loose formation, whether the finale be Petrograd or between our opponent's goal posts."

Rice Leads Newspaper Golfers.

Newspaper golfers teed up yesterday for their second annual championship of New York City on the links of the Scarsdale Golf and Country Club at Hartsdale, N. Y. Grantland Rice led the field at the end of the first thirty-six holes with a total score of 155, twelve strokes less than last year's champion, William W. Harris. Rice's big lead was the result of his fine 72 on the afternoon round.

Conditions governing the championship provide for the entire field to play eighteen holes on the first day and the best sixteen to play an additional eighteen holes the same afternoon. Next Monday at Scarsdale the best eight will play thirty-six holes, medal play, the title going to the player who makes the best total score for seventy-two holes.

Coincident with the two rounds were two medal handicaps. In the morning Alfred P. Roth, with 88, 13—75, tied with Charles Leonard Fletcher, with 86, 11—75. Later in the day Rice won the handicap with 72, 5—67. The scores:

Dress Suits in Demand.

While there are many who believe that the dancing craze has had its "run" as a fad and is passing out, clothiers who specialize on the making of dress suits do not find any decrease in the sale of their goods. On the contrary, the demand for evening dress has assumed larger proportions, if reports are to be credited. The tendency in goods of this kind is in the direction of making suits for evening wear more comfortable. This has been accomplished by eliminating linings wherever possible and cutting down the weight of the fabrics used. Sales, it is believed, have been stimulated in this way.

Spring Dress Gingham Prices.

More interest was added to the local dress gingham situation yesterday when Jarvis & Prankard, selling agents for the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company, announced that they had reduced prices on A. F. C. dress ginghams and Amoskeag seersuckers to 8½ cents, which figure is a quarter of a cent lower than the one quoted on these goods a week ago. It was said yesterday by a member of Smith, Hogg & Co. that no further reduction in prices would be made on their fabrics, they having priced Red Seal zephyrs and York seersuckers at 8½ cents a yard on Monday last. It is understood that no reduction from the original prices named will be made by another prominent factor in this part of the cotton goods field.

War Contracts in Abeyance.

Very little in the way of progress on war contracts could be discovered yesterday in the piece goods market. There are many rumors afloat concerning large contracts for uniform cloth said to have been placed by the English and Russian Governments with the leading factor in the market, but the reports lacked confirmation. A well-posted man in the market who has secured a large amount of business of this sort estimates that fully 50 per cent. of the woolen machinery in the country is engaged at present on contract work. This estimate, he said, excludes worsted machinery and that which is devoted to making three-quarter goods.

Heavyweight Goods Scarce.

With conditions much improved in the clothing industry, several well-posted buyers believe that a scarcity of heavyweight goods will develop this Fall. The mills have been proceeding cautiously and, according to all reports in the piece goods market, there is a dearth of stock goods. The situation in dyestuffs has also made it necessary for the mills to devote their attention entirely to orders in hand, and prevented any preparations against the future. Another condition that will doubtless have its effect in bringing about a shortage of heavyweight goods, is that a very large number of mills are engaged on goods for supplying foreign armies.

Neckwear Business Brisk.

The men's neckwear manufacturers have no complaint to make concerning the volume of Fall and holiday business being done. In fact, the trade is in better shape than it has been in past seasons. One of the features that stands out in present trading is the demand for the better grades of neckwear. This is rather remarkable in view of the fact that for holiday business the cheaper merchandise is generally taken. Roman stripes and plaids, large jacquard effects, stripings, and embroidered goods are among the designs favored. The demand is about equal for stripes and figures. For next Spring there are indications at hand that point to a wide use of ribbon effects on the de Joinville order.

Service to be Extended.

Commenting on the wide difference in service, rendered in one case to the consumer by the retailer and on the other by the wholesaler to the retailer, a prominent manufacturer said yesterday that the time is soon coming when the service idea will spread into the manufacturing and wholesaling business. "The retail stores," said he, "have found the great advantage of selling service as well as merchandise. All things are very nearly equal nowadays as far as buying opportunities are concerned in the retail field. Where one store surpasses another is not so much in the better bargain it is able to offer as in the way in which the customer is handled, the promptness of delivery, and the constant desire to please. The manufacturer and wholesaler must soon adopt the same methods."

Futurist Decorations Liked.

No little attention is being shown in local decorative circles in the increasing interest being taken by householders in the so-called futurist decorations. All sorts of weird colorings and patterns are said to be finding their way into wall-papers, draperies, &c., as a result of this vogue. Not to be outdone, a furniture dealer in the metropolitan district is said to be showing a futurist bedroom suite. The bed, for instance, is white enameled, with the tops of the posts in black. On the outside of the footboard, and on other conspicuous places unique designs in vivid peasant colorings are displayed. It is said, however, that none of these designs is so located as to smite the eyes of the sleeper. Opinions differ as to the vogue for black and white decorations, but they are apparently as much in favor as at any time since the use of them began.

Why Advances Cannot Be Paid.

It has always been a source of mystery to many woolen men why the clothiers will refuse to pay a small advance on the goods they use in their manufacturing. The increase may amount to 10 cents a yard, and yet the clothier will reject the cloth with the remark that the "increased price takes the cloth out of its proper schedule." If the selling agent for the mill accepts this explanation and goes no further, he is left in the dark concerning the real facts of the case. At 10 cents a yard advance, it will cost the clothier 35 cents more to make a suit of that particular kind of cloth. It might be supposed that he would pass the benefit of having a higher priced cloth in the suit along to the retailer. As a matter of fact, however, the margin upon which most clothiers operate is so small, that the advance of 35 cents would make it profitless to sell the suit at its regular price to the retailer.

Burlaps Quiet, but Higher.

Yesterday was said to be the quietest day the local burlap market has seen for nearly two weeks, but there was no apparent effect on prices. Ten-and-a-half-ounce, forty-inch goods are available around 7.70 cents, but neither they nor ten-ounce goods, which may be had for arrival in the next few weeks at 7.45 to 7.50 cents, are in liberal supply for spot or nearby shipment. Eight-ounce goods are also scarce, being held around 5.45 cents, while 7½-ounce burlaps are to be had for spot and arrival to Oct. 15 at 5.30 to 5.45 cents, the former being the spot figure. Thirty-six-inch, eight-ounce goods have sold freely of late at 5.25 cents, but are now hard to get at that price. Bullish reports from Calcutta and the resultant increase in the price of jute are held responsible for the advances on the fabrics. There is no guarantee that the prices here quoted will stand very long, for a renewal of buying must necessarily result in higher quotations.

Gray Goods Prices Advance.

A further rise in cotton yesterday and more good buying resulted in further price advances in the local gray goods market. Printcloths were in especially good demand, and more or less business was done on all the constructions listed below. It was largely for spot and near-by delivery, from all accounts, the mills and the buyers still being apart on prices for the later shipments. Sales of 39-inch 56-44s were reported during the day, for spot and near by, at 3 7-16 cents, and it was said to be difficult now to get 38½-inch 64-60s for any delivery at 4⅛ cents. Sales of 38½-inch 60-52s and 60-48s were also reported at prices which showed an advance of a sixteenth of a cent. A fairly good sheeting business was done and good sales of drills were reported, in which 3.95s figured at 4⅞ cents and 4.20s at 4¾ cents. Business in fancies and specialties continued good. Spot printcloth prices were:

39-inch, 80-80s	6c	38½-inch, 64-56s	4c
39-inch, 72-76s	5½c	38½-inch, 60-52s	3 11/16c
39-inch, 68-72s	4¾c	38½-inch, 60-48s	3 9/16c
39-inch, 56-44s	3 7/16c	27-inch, 64-60s	2 13/16c
38½-inch, 64-60s	4⅛c	27-inch, 56-52s	2 9/16c

BUSINESS NOTES.

The first gathering of the Women's Neckwear Salesmen of New York will be held at the Brevoort House, Eighth Street and Fifth Avenue, on Friday night at 8 P. M. Among the guests will be Max Engel, President of the Women's Neckwear Manufacturers' Association, George Pierson of L. Bamberger & Co., Newark, and James Mackay of the Lesan Advertising Agency.

He has taken an interest in the National Millinery Company, with offices at 209 South State Street, Chicago, and will be general manager of this concern. The National Company is now operating millinery departments in various cities, and Mr. Landaw's immediate attention will be [illegible] additional departments [illegible] season.

CHEMICAL EXHIBIT OPENS.

Display of American Dyes Attracts Greatest Interest.

What American ingenuity, enterprise, and capital are doing to rapidly build up an independent domestic dyestuff industry, adequate to meet the requirements of the textile and allied industries of this country were impressively demonstrated yesterday at the opening of the First National Exposition of Chemical Industries at the Grand Central Palace.

Of particular interest was the result of the development of the United States in the field of coal tar industries, which for years has been a valuable commercial asset of Germany. According to exposition officials, the embargo on German dyestuffs with the attending stimulation to the American industry has resulted in the output of dyes here being quadrupled within a year. At the present rate of production it was figured that within two years this country will be able to get along without the assistance of European countries. All the color manufacturers of the country had booth exhibits and these excited great interest.

The most popular individual section at the exposition was that of Thomas A. Edison, whose products, such as carbolic acid, pharmeceutical preparations and derivatives from coal tar and other products, formerly largely produced in Germany, were shown publicly for the first time.

The facility with which synthetic rubies and sapphires are made surprised many of the women visitors. The substance from which they are made is white to begin with, but the chemical processes finally develop odd and exquisite colors, resulting in the end in the gems to be found in every jewelry store.

During the week many of the important technical societies will hold meetings in the exposition hall. The tariff question will be discussed today by Howard H. Gross of Chicago, President of the Tariff Commission League, while other addresses will be delivered under the auspices of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers, the New York Section of the American Electrochemical Society, the American Institute of Mining Engineers, the Industrial Division of the American Chemical Society, the Technical Section of the American Paper and Pulp Society, the New York Section of the American Chemical Society, and the American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Appraisers Sustain a Number of Protests by Importers.

The Board of General Appraisers yesterday sustained claims by Hensel, Bruckmann & Lorbacher on what was invoiced as "gum insoluble." The Collector classified the commodity as gum arabic and took duty at the rate of one-half cent per pound. The importers' claim was for free entry as a crude gum not specially provided for. Judge Brown decided that the importations in question cannot be regarded as commercial gum arabic owing to the fact that other ingredients were mixed with the gum. The Collector was reversed.

The board continued the process of clearing the files of jewelry protests filed under the Tariff act of 1909 by sustaining protests of Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne. The jewelry, which was of various kinds, was taxed 85 per cent. ad valorem under the provision for articles of personal adornment, whereas the protestants claimed 60 per cent. under the "jewelry" provision.

Wheeler Brothers and A. Hamburger & Sons, Los Angeles, were sustained in protests relating to the classification of towels, doilies, and covers composed of flax and cotton and ornamented by hemstitching or spoke-stitching. The Collector returned the goods under the act of 1909 as drawn work and took duty at 60 per cent. ad valorem. The board decided that some of the goods were properly dutiable at 45 per cent. ad valorem as cotton manufactures, and the balance at rates lower than assessed.

The board took favorable action in protests by Thomas Meadows & Co. having to do with the rate of duty on Turkish towels made of cotton imported under the tariff. The Collector decided that the goods were pile fabrics and took duty at 40 per cent. ad valorem. Judge Cooper held that the claim for duty at 25 per cent. ad valorem as "towels made of cotton" was more specific and should govern, the Collector being reversed.

BUSINESS TROUBLES

In the City.

CHARLES KATZ, residing at 1,229 Park Avenue, formerly President of the Eastern Brewing Company of Brooklyn, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with known liabilities of $115,692 and unknown liabilities for a large amount as maker and indorser of notes of the Eastern Brewing Company, and no assets.

BERNARD DORF, manufacturer of cloaks, suits, and dresses at 23 West Twenty-sixth Street, has made an assignment to Howard Babcock. A petition in bankruptcy was also filed against him by these creditors: Weng & Laguna, $917, Leon Bernstein, $75, and Janet Bernhart, $35.

SALTZMAN & LEVY.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Louis Saltzman and Max Levy, who composed the firm of Saltzman & Levy of 118 West Twenty-second Street, by these creditors: Henry L. Bunin, $236; Alexander Goldstein, $200, and Charles Cohen, $120.

GIACOBBE PRESS, INC., printer of 141 East Twenty-fifth Street, has made an assignment to Arthur Werner. British Chief Buyers of Wool.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The offerings at the wool auction sales today amounted to 8,000 bales. The demand was moderate and prices were steady. Russia bought the best grades of scoureds, but home traders were the chief buyers. Americans were quiet, as it is difficult to obtain licenses to export crossbreds.

WOOLEN MILLS NEED DYES.

Some of the Materials for Blues Now Cost as High as $5 a Pound.

Following last week's announcement by Dr. Thomas H. Norton, the Government dyestuff investigator, that silk manufacturing interests will be unable within a very short period to obtain many colors for dyeing purposes, came the statement yesterday that the woolen cloth industry is similarly embarrassed.

After a prominent woolen manufacturer had conferred with Dr. Norton yesterday relative to the dyestuff famine, the doctor made the following statement:

"My caller represented very effectively the decreasing amount of dyes available for use in the woolen mills, and quoted various instances of the almost prohibitive cost of coloring materials which now prevails. Some of the blues which are so very largely used can now be obtained only at a cost of at least $5 per pound. Formerly the cost in cents was so small that dyeing was a negligible factor in the cost of production.

The attention of the representatives of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce was drawn to the great difficulty now encountered in securing an adequate supply of peroxide of hydrogen for bleaching purposes in the woolen industry. The manufacturer in question was promptly placed in direct relations with the newly established firms for the manufacture of barium dioxide. Barium dioxide is the material used for the immediate production of hydrogen peroxide, and the present high cost of the latter chemical results from the dependence heretofore placed on dioxide made in Europe."

The investigator's mail brought a letter from an Indiana knitting mill employing 2,500 hands. Two-thirds of this number have already been laid off as a result of the dye shortage. The concern's dyehouse is completely idle, and it has 160,000 dozen pairs of undyed hosiery. Similar conditions are reported from knitting mills in other sections of the country.

The attention of the Government investigator was called to the completion of the new works for the manufacture of sulphur colors by A. Klipstein & Co., an old-established firm of color handlers. Dr. Norton said that if the new works could establish a satisfactory method for the production of sulphur black one of the most trying needs of the situation would be met.

Another development of the day was the receipt of a letter from persons in the State of Washington, who control an immense deposit of alumina. While alumina does not contain very much gold, the deposits carry more than 20 per cent. of potash. Worked on a large scale, Dr. Norton said, the deposits might play an important part in the temporary solution of the potash question, and possibly in its permanent solution.

MACHINERY FOR EXPORT.

Much Interest by Manufacturers in South American Field.

Manufacturers of machinery and machine tools in all sections of the country are greatly interested in placing their products in the various countries of South America, according to J. A. Massel, Special Agent of the Department of Commerce, who has just returned to this city after a visit to the chief manufacturing centres for these goods.

"Everywhere I went," said he yesterday, "I found the most lively interest in the subject of South American trade. Most of those I met seemed to have the right ideas in the matter of getting business in the countries to the south of us and indicated that they were ready to spend the initial sums required to lay the foundations for permanent export relations. These men realized that time and patience are required to accomplish the desired end. They also stated that they were prepared to grant reasonable credits under proper safeguards in order to meet the competition of English and German manufacturers already strongly intrenched in the South American field. In Wheeling I was very much impressed by the interest manifested in the Government's propaganda to extend American trade.

"Many raw products from South America before the war came from England and Germany, where they had undergone more or less processing before being sent here. Manufacturers in different lines at Wheeling said they propose as soon as possible to bring South America's raw products directly to their factories and put them through the processes formerly undergone in Europe. It was significant of the general interest felt that all my conferences were held with heads of firms, all of whom extended a warm welcome to the Government's representative."

Mr. Massel will be at the local office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce during the next two weeks, and will be glad to confer with those interested in the machinery and tool trade in South America. He is located in Room 409, Custom House.

SCARCITY OF PLATINUM.

Supplies of Iridium and Palladium Are Also Meagre.

Manufacturers of platinum jewelry in this country are facing a serious shortage of raw material as a result of the embargo declared on that metal several weeks ago. So serious is the outlook, in fact, that at a recent meeting of the National Jewelers' Board of Trade, the President was authorized to appoint a committee to thoroughly study the situation and secure quotations from various importers, in order that the possibility of having the embargo lifted might be discussed in full with the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Julius Wodiska, a manufacturing jeweler of this city, told a TIMES reporter yesterday that the supply of platinum in this country is by no means liberal. The supply of iridium, which is used as an alloy with platinum to harden it for commercial purposes, was said to be limited here to 2,000 ounces, and this metal was quoted yesterday at $70 an ounce. The supply of palladium, which is used to make a solder for fastening together parts of platinum jewelry, it also limited, and it is now held at about $50 an ounce. Yesterday's quotation on soft platinum was $51 an ounce.

It was also stated by Mr. Wodiska that applications to the British War Department for licenses to import platinum from that country had been refused without a definite reason being given, even when the importer offered to make an affidavit to the effect that the platinum wanted would be used entirely for domestic consumption. He also said that no shipments of platinum are now on the way here.

"I have been informed," Mr. Wodiska continued, "that no shipments of platinum have been received in either France or England for the last five months, and that prospects of further receipts this year are poor, for the reason that the mining of this metal in the Ural Mountains of Russia, the chief source of supply of crude platinum, is abandoned about Oct. 1 each year for several months because of the intense cold. No reason has been given, apparently, why shipments from Russia have not been made, but it may be due to a shortage of labor at the mines as a result of the war.

"Because of the reasons outlined, it is supposed that the supply of platinum in both France and England must be limited, and that the bulk of it, if not all, must be needed there. Much of this metal is said to be used in stills and other chemical apparatus for the manufacture of acids, these acids supposedly playing a part in the making of war munitions. Some of the stills used are said to contain anywhere from 800 to 1,000 pennyweights of platinum, or 40 to 50 ounces. As the Germans use platinum chemical apparatus, too, it may be that the embargo was declared by France and England as much to keep this metal from finding its way into Germany as to conserve it for the home needs of those countries'."

BUDGET AXE STILL SWINGS.

Requests of Judge Tiernan and Sheriff O'Grady Denied.

The sub-committee of the Tax Budget Committee continued yesterday in the Municipal Building to pare down salaries of city employes. The request of Sheriff Joseph F. O'Grady of Richmond County for two deputy sheriffs at $1,000 each was denied. The total budget for the office this year was $32,675, but the Sheriff had requested $39,725 for 1916, while the examiners recommended only $34,360.

Representatives of the Sheriff's office in Queens asked the sub-committee for $48,537 for 1916. The examiners recommended $46,101. For 1915 the office got $45,947.

J. Harry Tiernan, County Judge and Surrogate of Richmond, put in a request for $24,135. For 1915 he got $21,600. He said he was the only Surrogate in the five boroughs who at times "could find nothing to do." When litigation was slack in Staten Island, he said, he sat as a County Judge to help out in the Bronx, Queens or Kings. His request for a rise in the salary of Andrew Wells, a clerk in his office, from $1,800 to $2,400 was not allowed.

Representatives of the five county organizations of civil service employes which form the United Associations of County Employes met last night at Terrace Garden to protest against the manner in which salaries of city employes are being reduced. Abraham Breckstone of the Employes' Association of New York County said the civil service employes were sure of eight votes in the Board of Estimate. He told of a meeting of elected officials of the five counties which County Clerk William F. Schneider was to call in a few days, and explained that the civil service employes had been invited to join. A resolution was adopted authorizing the President to appoint a committee to attend.

BRITAIN SEIZES COCOA TRADE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Strange things of perhaps international significance are happening in the cocoa trade, according to a special report received at the State Department from Consul General Robert P. Skinner at London. The United States has heretofore enjoyed a large trade in this staple in Northern Europe. New York City alone usually takes the raw cocoa crop of Santo Domingo and markets it in Europe.

This year it seems that Great Britain is doing this on its own account, and the American trade has disappeared. Mr. Skinner quotes the statistics of Great Britain's cocoa trade with the Baltic countries to show that where England, a year ago, had no trade at all in this line, that country now has practically a monopoly.

In March 1914, England shipped no raw cocoa to Denmark, but this year in March there were 1,642,000 pounds shipped there from England. In April, last year, England shipped to Denmark only 1,555 pounds, but this year, in the same months, she sent there 685,336 pounds. To Norway, in March last year, England shipped 21,687 pounds of cocoa, and in March, this year, she shipped 276,388 pounds, while in April she shipped 194,705 pounds to Norway, as compared with 12,586 pounds in April a year ago. To Sweden England shipped in March, this year, 492,647 pounds of cocoa, where she shipped in the same month, last year, but 10,562 pounds; and in April, this year, she shipped there 1,150,746 pounds, as compared with 16,500 pounds in the same month last year. To the Netherlands there was shipped in March, this year, 1,532,970 pounds of cocoa, while in March, last year, the British shipment was 496,616 pounds, and in April, this year, the shipment was 1,867,126 pounds, while in April, 1914, the shipment was but 290,884 pounds.

Mr. Skinner says, where exportation from this country to the smaller neutral countries of Northern Europe is attended with difficulty and hazard, all similar goods are going forward from England without trouble. In cocoa, for example, England shipped into these countries, he says, during July, 7,039,067 pounds without any difficulty, whereas in the same month of 1914 her entire export of cocoa was only 1,283,583 pounds.

In tobacco England is doing an enormous business, according to Mr. Skinner. The exports in July were 6,664,880 pounds, as compared with 851,809 pounds in the same month of 1914. England shipped, in July, to Russia 235,918 centals, as compared with 43,529 centals in the same month of 1914; to Sweden, 27,879 centals, as compared with 4,667 last year; to the Netherlands 54,509 centals, as compared with 4,636 centals. The same thing is being done to a large extent in petroleum, lubricating and lamp oils, and in rubber.

THE RATE OF EXCHANGE.

How It Figures as a Factor in Imports from Hongkong.

That depreciation and disturbance in rate of exchange are not confined to the currencies of European nations as a result of the war was shown yesterday in a reappraisement proceeding brought before Judge McClelland of the Board of General Appraisers. While the case stood in the name of Otto Isenstein & Co., the ultimate consignees were Magnus, Mabee & Reynard, importers of Oriental goods.

At the hearing it developed that the merchandise was purchased from Meurer Frères of Hong Kong, China, the brokers being Rockhill & Vietor. The goods were shipped from Hong Kong in the second quarter of the current year. At that time the equivalent of the Hong Kong Mexican dollar, as proclaimed by the United States Director of the Mint, was $0.394, whereas the exchange price of that currency unit was $0.4675.

John Gibion Duffy, counsel for the New York importers, told the General Appraiser that Meurer Frères quite properly invoiced the goods in the actual purchase currency at $1.80 Hong Kong Mexican per pound, as at the time of purchase it cost $0.4675 United States gold. Customs Examiner Wright, who passed the merchandise, took the view that he must consider the inflated exchange rate and advance the entry to the equivalent in Hong Kong currency at the Director of the Mint's rate of the cost of procuring exchange for the Hong Kong currency total of the invoice.

No question of fact was raised at the hearing, it being conceded by the Government counsel that the invoice was in all respects bona fide. Judge McClelland, at the conclusion of the hearing, announced that he "was not charged with the appraisement of money but with the appraisement of merchandise, and that the entered value in terms of Hong Kong currency was wholly sufficient under the statute." He then formally sustained the entered value.

While the case may be appealed by the Government, there is no assurance that this will be done. The war is raising many questions owing to strained money exchange in various countries. This condition of affairs is recognized both by importers and the Government as abnormal and hardly worth litigating beyond the Board of General Appraisers.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Favorable Loan News Reflected in Stocks and in Exchange Rates.

Both the stock market and the exchange market rose yesterday, each in reflection, to some extent, of the news of progress in the negotiations for the placing of the Anglo-French loan in this market. News of that sort is distinctly good news, for it is very generally recognized that the granting of credits to our largest customers in Europe is called for for the protection of our trade interests. The righting of the international exchanges is the immediate object sought, but the ultimate object, so far as we are concerned, is to safeguard our trade against the restriction of demand which would result from the placing of barriers between our customers and ourselves through further unsettlement of the exchange market.

While the news regarding the loan negotiations is favorable, it is necessary to bear in mind that the transaction is an unusual one in many respects, and time must necessarily be taken to carry the negotiations through to a successful conclusion. While a practical understanding has been reached on some very important points, there are other points which have not yet been agreed to, nor has all the general approval of the loan been reduced to specific pledges in its support. The success of the issue is regarded as assured, but the transaction cannot be looked upon as closed until a large enough group of bankers and investors have been heard from to assure the taking up of the full amount which may eventually be offered. That amount it is not at all likely to be less than $500,000,000. How much more than that remains to be determined.

It was natural that the stocks most influenced by the news of progress in this important international financing were those which are included in the group of issues in which speculative interest has been greatest. A special factor in the buying of some of these stocks was the impression created last week by the big cash distribution by the General Motors Company. This was still much in the minds of traders yesterday, and induced buying of other stocks, some of which are looked to by traders for distribution to be made out of the abnormally large profits of recent months. The rise in prices extended to most issues, but it was not all inclusive. In some instances profit-taking sales led to substantial net declines, but these were the exceptions and not the rule. Some of the major stocks, it was noted, moved relatively little.

LONDON MARKET UNSETTLED

Money in Good Supply and Discount Rates Incline to Ease Off.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Money was in good supply and discount rates were inclined to ease off today. Cable transfers opened weak on a demand for dollars, but later recovered and sold from $4.68¾ to $4.69.

The stock market was unsettled by politics, Russian news, and budget uncertainties. Business was dull and confined to a few colonial stocks and rubber and oil shares at about unchanged prices.

American securities responded to the strength in Wall Street, and values were raised, but business was only moderate and confined to Canadian Pacific and United States Steel. The closing was steady.

The Exchange will be closed Saturday, Sept. 25.

Prices Steady on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—Prices were barely steady on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 67 francs 25 centimes for cash. Exchange on London, 27 francs 41 centimes.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Bethlehem Steel Slight Gain.

In a market such as yesterday's it seemed rather curious that Bethlehem Steel should leave off with a net gain of only one point. It was not exactly a war stock market, yet enough of the razzle dazzle proclivities of sessions when Bethlehem has been rampant was evident through the strong upward movements of the motor issues. Then, too, New York Air Brake, a bona fide war stock, if there is one, leaped forward more than 12 points. A casual observer of Bethlehem might have decided that, having reached a point of exceptional market value, the stock was suspended a little above the prospective buyer's reach and at a point where the holder was willing to watch his shares without being tempted to sell. Total sales were no more than 800 shares. Past experience has gone to show, however, that these days of quietude are wont to be deceptive. There have been numerous occasions when the stock has taken on unexpected vigor after lying dormant for a time, and others when a dull day preceded a drop.

⁂

Cotton Oil's Good Year.

A statement prepared by the American Cotton Oil Company in connection with the sale of $5,000,000 two-year 5 per cent. notes to the First National Bank shows the war did not prevent last year from being a good one. Net earnings in the fiscal period ended Aug. 31 were about $2,500,000, which covered interest charges five times over and left a balance of $1,388,000 for the common stock after providing for the 6 per cent. preferred stock dividend. The statement did not say whether any of this had been reserved for special purposes, but if not the balance for the junior shares was close to 7 per cent. for the year. The year's results make a favorable appearance in comparison with the annual earnings in the preceding six years. They amounted to $1,844,000. The balance sheet, the statement said, showed on July 31 current assets of $14,701,325 and current liabilities amounting to $2,127,599. These figures took no account of capital invested in buildings, real estate and equipment, which amounts to about $16,000,000.

⁂

Bond Market Hardens.

Bond dealers report a gradual hardening of prices, which is believed in part to reflect the improved state of the foreign exchange market. Since demand sterling rose well above $4.60 there has been a substantial decline of offerings for foreign account, and at the same time domestic supplies have displayed a shrinking tendency. In this the expectations of various bond men have not been realized. They thought the floating supply of a number of leading railroad issues would be expanded by foreign selling to a point where prices would clearly reflect the saturated condition of the market. Contrary to this development, it seems as if investors and dealers, who in recent weeks had been able to take on sound bonds at relatively cheap figures, were holding them closely, either as permanent investments or with the view of a distinctly better market after a time. A bond dealer who bought an Atchison adjustment 4 per cent. bond a week ago at 80⅛ sold it yesterday at 81¼, and reported an even better advance in case of other securities.

⁂

Midvale Steel at 270.

Sales in small lots of Midvale Steel Company stock over the counter yesterday appeared to indicate that this would be a valiant war issue if the floating supply were larger. From an opening price of 220, the issue rose to 270, according to the reports of brokers. The company has outstanding $9,750,000 stock, the bulk of which was brought out in 1910 in a 1,200 per cent. stock dividend. The stock is not listed, and is closely held. In Philadelphia, where the primary market exists, the price has been advancing strongly since reports were practically confirmed a few days ago that a syndicate was dickering for control.

⁂

Developments in Frisco Situation.

There has probably been more negotiation over the Frisco reorganization plan than over any other railroad plan now under consideration. The two big bondholding interests, representing the 4s and the 5s, reached an understanding months ago. About a month ago these two factions, moreover, found an agreement with the New York stockholding faction. Since that time these three interests worked to get a fourth faction into the fold. This fourth faction consists of St. Louis stockholders. A final series of conferences was scheduled for last week. The Westerners came, but they refused to yield in their demands for a greater representation in the new company. The majority interests also refused to yield. The St. Louis men returned home, and there are no indications of further conferences, it is said. The two Bondholders' Committees, supported by the local Stockholders' Committee, will offer a plan of reorganization, probably on Oct. 1. A delay in getting a foreclosure decree may result from the opposition, but the backers of the plan, it is said, pin their faith in the fact that about 95 per cent. of the Frisco principal bonds are deposited in favor of the plan. They maintain that a minority opposition from stockholders cannot hurt them, because the plan, as proposed, will offer the stockholders more than they were ever offered before.

⁂

Bush Efficiency Methods.

President Bush of the Missouri Pacific system has cut the transportation expenses on the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad about $2,000,000 a year since he became its head in 1912. In 1912, with a gross income of $23,200,000, the transportation expenses were about $8,000,000, and in 1915, with gross earnings of $21,823,000, they were about $6,000,000. The ratio of transportation expenses decreased in that period from 35.16 to 28.83. It is pointed out that with limited facilities Mr. Bush succeeded in producing results surpassed by only three Western roads. An old friend of this railroad President remarked in this connection yesterday: "Mr. Bush is the kind of railroad President who sticks close to the tracks. He realizes that the Denver lies in the West and not in New York City."

⁂

Missouri, Kansas & Texas.

Work on a plan of voluntary financial readjustment for the Missouri, Kansas & Texas is proceeding in the hands of the new banking interests who have been asked to submit a plan. There have been no stumbling blocks, and the new interests, after a second inspection of the road, are impressed with the physical soundness of the property. Storms have done some damage on the lines, but the injury can be corrected by ballasting, it is said. "If the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, when it was reorganized twenty years ago, had not closed its mortgages it would not be in need of a financial readjustment today," said a banker yesterday. "The financiers of those days did not realize that the railroad would need millions to develop properly. They issued first mortgage bonds in driblets, a million here and a half million there. It would be a good thing for the road if all these scattered bond issues were unified now under one issue." The plan under preparation, it is understood, will call for some concessions from the bondholders, for which payment may be made in new securities.

SHORT COVERING PUTS UP COTTON

Sold-Out Bulls Aid Movement by Taking on New Lines After Thirty-Point Drop.

NET GAIN 22 TO 25 POINTS

Talk of Cooler and Showery Weather in Western Belt Leads to Some of the Local Buying.

In spite of the fact that Liverpool at the hour of the local opening yesterday showed prices considerably lower than due, the opening range of prices here was but slightly under the previous close. Local traders and commission houses bought rather largely at the lower range of levels, and during the forenoon a steady advance was recorded.

Many of the local bull element who accepted profits on last week's strong markets were satisfied to replace commitments after a recession of 30 points, as they considered that technical adjustment of sufficient size had taken place. At no time during the day was any great quantity of cotton offered for sale, although Liverpool was credited with selling a fair amount, apparently against purchases abroad. During the early part of the session spot interests offered cotton moderately, while New Orleans interests were put down as buyers.

Talk of cooler and showery weather in the Western belt inspired part of the local buying, which, in all likelihood, represented in part short covering by those who had taken a position in anticipation of a good reaction.

While the market displayed decided firmness all through the session, it was quite noticeable that the volume of business was considerably smaller than on any day last week and that the bulk of the transactions probably emanated from Wall Street and professional sources.

Generally speaking, weather conditions are quite favorable, although reference is made to the cooler weather in the Western belt. The average frost date is many weeks off, and therefore cannot be looked upon as a factor at the moment.

In the last half hour of trading there was heavy buying, put down to covering by some of the uptown element. The close was firm, at a net gain of 22 to 25 points.

Southern spot markets, as officially reported, were unchanged, 8 to 20 points advance. The local market for spot cotton was quiet, 15 points advance, 1.85 for middling. Futures closed firm.

HARDING DEFENDS BIG COTTON FUND

Explains Reserve Board's Attempt to Protect Planters Against Exorbitant Interest.

CITES PREVIOUS CHARGES

Says Some Southern Banks Have Been Accustomed to Charging as Much as 120 Per Cent.

Special to The New York Times.

RALEIGH, N. C., Sept. 20.—W. P. G. Harding, Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board's Committee on Cotton, at the annual dinner here tonight of the Raleigh Chamber of Commerce, explained the steps taken by the board to protect the growers of cotton and other commodities. At the same time he defended the plan of Secretary McAdoo to place, without interest, $30,000,000 in Southern Federal Reserve Banks to be advanced to farmers at not more than 6 per cent. The increase in the price of cotton, said Mr. Harding, demonstrated the wisdom of these steps.

Referring to criticisms of the plan to deposit $30,000,000 of the Government's money, to be distributed at a fixed maximum rate of interest, at a time when many banks had money lying idle in their vaults, Mr. Harding admitted that ordinarily the deposit promised by Mr. McAdoo, of which $15,000,000 has already been placed with the Reserve banks at Richmond, Atlanta, and Dallas, would not be needed. But it was necessary, in his opinion, to restore confidence and to overcome the habit of bankers accustomed to pay a high rate for money and then charge proportionately higher rates. In this connection Mr. Harding quoted some interest rates charged by Southern banks, ranging as high as 120 per cent.

"Under the Federal Reserve system there are now twelve independent money centres," said Mr. Harding. "The interest rates have not only been stabilized but they are approximately the same at all of these money centres. The banks in agricultural systems, particularly those in the South, are usually compelled to rediscount heavily at this season of the year in order to assist in the movement of crops.

"It was evident two months ago that unless something was done to stimulate the holders and producers of cotton, the market this Fall would be altogether in favor of the buyers, regardless of the plethora of money held by the banks and the unusually low interest rates at which money could be obtained, and in spite of reports from cotton producing sections throughout the world, which indicated that the available supply of cotton during the next twelve months would not be out of proportion to the world's requirements.

"The Federal Reserve Banks of Richmond, Atlanta, Dallas, and St. Louis, which cover practically all of the cotton producing section, have fixed a rate of 3 per cent. for this commodity paper, so that any country member bank desiring to make a loan to a farmer or merchant against warehouse receipts for cotton may, provided it has taken the loan at a 6 per cent. rate, indorse it over at once to the Federal Reserve Bank of its district and receive credit less discount at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum. It was believed that the nature of the transaction would appeal to the banker and make it easy for him to reduce his usual interest charge, and it is thought that there are many farmers who will this Fall experience for the first time the sensation of getting money as low as 6 per cent.

"The Controller of the Currency has information from sworn representatives to his office regarding the maximum and average interest rates charged by national banks throughout the United States. From the report of June 23, 1915, it appears that there are five national banks in Alabama whose maximum rates of interest average 26 per cent., the rate in one case being 60 per cent. and in another 84 per cent. The average rate of interest which one of these banks was charging on all of its loans amounted to 12 per cent., another 10 per cent.

"In Arkansas, one national bank admitted making a loan at a rate as high as 120 per cent., another one at 50 per cent., another at 60, and another at 25. In Georgia there were eleven banks where the average maximum rate of interest was about 30 per cent. In Texas a number of banks reported rates in excess of 100 per cent.

"These high rates, however, are not confined exclusively to the South, for the reports show occasional rates of 50 per cent. in the East and North, as well as in the Far West and South.

"The members of the Federal Reserve Board felt that in issuing the commodity regulations, which are entirely independent of the Secretary's action in depositing Government funds, they would prove to the Southern farmer the disposition of the Federal Reserve Banks to render aid; while the Secretary, by making these deposits, convinced the farmer of the ability of the banks to carry out their good intentions.

"I repeat, in concluding, that my understanding of the object of the Board in issuing its commodity regulations, is that it was desired, as far as possible, to place the producers, who are also the original sellers of agricultural commodities, on equal terms with the buyers, and I believe that the Secretary of the Treasury, in his independent action, had the same object in view. As far as cotton is concerned, the recent advance in price of that staple seems to afford ample justification for the course that has been pursued."

SOUTHERN BANKERS' DUTY.

President Says They Must Help to Finance the Cotton Crop.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Sept. 20.—President Wilson feels that the whole maintenance of the cotton situation depends directly and immediately upon Southern bankers, and they have only themselves to blame if it does not come out satisfactorily, according to a statement in a letter from Secretary Tumulty to John L. McLaurin, State Warehouse Commissioner, which was made public here today.

Secretary Tumulty's letter was in reply to a communication to the President regarding the handling of this year's cotton crop. In it Mr. McLaurin charged that "certain Southern bankers, working through those of New York, were striving to force the sale of cotton at 10 cents a pound."

Secretary Tumulty's letter referred Mr. McLaurin to the letter regarding the cotton situation which President Wilson wrote W. P. G. Harding, a member of the Federal Reserve Board, and which Mr. Harding read at a recent address to Southern bankers in Birmingham. The President "asks me to suggest that you emphasize the letter that he wrote to Mr. Harding," said Mr. Tumulty.

In his letter to Mr. Harding, President Wilson expressed confidence that Southern banks would content themselves with a rate of interest not exceeding 2 per cent. above the rate which they themselves would have to pay to get money to lend cotton producers for handling this season's crop. The President in this letter also said that "the question of whether this advantageous rate is to be extended to the farmer is in their (the bankers') hands."

The Federal Reserve Board subsequently announced its intention of lending banks $30,000,000, if necessary, to handle the cotton crop.

SEES NO COTTON PROBLEM.

Southern Banker Adds That Growers Are Turning to Wheat.

Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia does not represent the real sentiment of the South when he tries to embarrass the Administration by his demands for the subjugation of other considerations to a demand that England shall let Germany get American cotton, in the opinion of W. P. Holland, Chairman of the Mississippi Bank Commission, and a leading financier of the Yazoo Delta, who has arrived at the Hotel Biltmore.

"The people of the South, cotton growers and all, want first of all to stand by the President," said Mr. Holland. "If it is necessary for the growers to hold their cotton, they will be able to hold half of their crop anyhow, until such time as they can sell it to advantage.

"As a matter of fact, there is a big demand for staple cotton in this country, and it looks as if it will bring more than $10 a bale in excess of what was expected when it was first planted. For the next sixty days it will take what money bankers in our section have to aid in moving cotton. While we shall not be able to take any of the Allies' credit for the present, I do not see why it would not be possible later on. As a matter of fact, I believe the credit will be very beneficial to the commerce and finance of this country, and I am glad it is to be taken.

"Mississippi has just blossomed out as a wheat-raising State. We have been experimenting this year, and our first crop, recently harvested, has proved very profitable. The average yield has been about thirty bushels to the acre. Mind you, no special land in the Yazoo Valley was planted in wheat—just the average kind. In some places the yield amounted to as much as 42 bushels to the acre; in some cases it was as low as 25. Still, the average yield netted about $20 to the acre, and, mind you, that despite the fact that few farmers were prepared to thresh, and had to wait until a threshing machine got to them on its rounds, so that there was necessarily more or less waste, owing to the delay. The result of our wheat experiment is that more of our farmers will raise wheat next year, and many of them are now buying their own threshing machines. The best years in cotton mean only from $25 to $35 an acre for the farmer, and the average profit is only $15. So many have come to the conclusion that wheat is a more profitable crop."

Do you have difficulty in deciding whether or not to pay your assessments?—Whether the new securities to be issued are worth the new money you are asked to subscribe?

Without expressing an opinion, but by setting forth the essential information upon which an opinion would be based, the STANDARD CARD REPORTS are designed to answer these questions.

Before acting take the precaution of consulting the STANDARD CARD REPORTS, now available to individuals at 50 cents each. Banks and brokers have used them continuously for the past ten years.

Benjamin Franklin says:

"Employ thy time well,
if thou meanest to gain leisure."

THIS saying may be applied to money as well as to time.

The man who is not obtaining interest on his funds is not employing his money to the best advantage.

This Company allows interest on daily balances and issues interest-bearing certificates of deposit, payable on demand or at a fixed date.

BARGAINS FOR MEMBERS

There are times in Wall Street when the average customer of the average stock brokerage house cannot have buying orders executed, for when acute uncertainty prevails the average broker does not desire new business. But the exchange member with available capital can go on the floor at such times and personally pick up security bargains at the lowest prices.

That is one reason why $1,000 invested in a seat on the Consolidated Stock Exchange of New York will surely pay.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

While the market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange, as a whole, reacted somewhat from the best levels in the closing dealings, the undertone continued good. During the day there were a number of noteworthy special movements. The motor and rubber stocks early advanced sharply and later American Smelting and Mexican Petroleum rose rapidly. The main underlying bullish influence in the general market was continued confidence in the successful ultimate flotation of the pending big international credit loan.

REORGANIZATION

International Mercantile Marine Company

(International Navigation Company)

Notice that plan of Reorganization has been declared operative, of change in plan and extending the time for the further deposit of securities thereunder to Oct. 1, 1915.

The Plan of Reorganization of the International Mercantile Marine Company dated August 3, 1915, has been declared operative by the Reorganization Committee.

The continuing large earnings of the properties of the International Mercantile Marine Company now indicate that the assured cash resources of the New Company make it unnecessary to require Holders of Stock and Stock Trust Certificates to subscribe to bonds of the New Company at the rate of $2.50 per share, and the Plan has accordingly been changed so that holders of Stock and Stock Trust Certificates may at their election deposit their Certificates of Stock and Stock Trust Certificates without the payment of the subscription.

Holders of Certificates of Deposit for Stock and Stock Trust Certificates already deposited may, if they so desire, obtain a refund of the amounts paid by them upon surrender of their Certificates of Deposit to the Depositary or its Agents, on or before October 1, 1915, in exchange for new Certificates.

Certificates of Stock, Stock Trust Certificates, and Bonds must be deposited under the Plan on or before October 1, 1915, after which date no deposits will be accepted except in the entire discretion of the Committee and subject to such penalties and conditions as the Committee may see fit to impose.

Copies of this notice have been filed with the Depositaries and their Agents.

STARTLING CHANGES IN OUR OCEAN TRADE

Enormous Increase in Exports of Autos, Zinc, Explosives, and Animals.

FARM IMPLEMENTS DROP

Many Other Striking Comparisons in 1914 and 1915—Shipments to Orient Decline.

Changes more startling than ever before have been noted in this country's history are revealed in the statistics of foreign commerce for the fiscal year ended June 30 last. Tremendous increases, or decreases, in the export tabulation, are equaled only by the changes in the schedule of imports.

Commodities in which the United States did only a small business with Europe have become of immense importance in the export field. Stuffs of which this country bought heavily abroad before the war now compose an infinitesimal fraction of its imports.

Here is a table, presented in The Annalist yesterday, showing some details of the year's foreign commerce as compared with that of a year ago:

A noteworthy disclosure which follows a study of these tables is that our exports to China, Japan, and South America actually have decreased considerably despite the optimistic predictions of extraordinary development of trade with these countries. The fact that connections could not be established here immediately on the discontinuance of foreign affiliations probably accounts for this and recent returns indicate a great improvement in this field in the current year.

ONLY ONE LOST ON ATHINAI.

Steamers Tuscania and Roumanian Bringing 469 Survivors to New York

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 20.—One man lost his life in the burning of the Greek steamer Athinai, according to a message received by the Marine Department today. The steamer Tuscania rescued 408 passengers and crew and the steamer Rumanian Prince sixty-one others.

The message from the Tuscania was dated at 7 A. M. today and was the first official word received from the liner since the wireless report last night that the Athinai was afire and the Tuscania had rescued the passengers. The origin of the fire was not stated in the message, which read:

> Heard distress call at 8:30 A. M. yesterday. Arrived on spot at noon and sent line across to help them. Transferred passengers about 4 P. M. Athinai was abandoned about 8:30 P. M. We rescued 408 passengers and crew, and the Rumanian Prince rescued 61. There was only one life lost, that of a man who jumped overboard. We left the wreck burning fiercely in No. 1 and No. 2 holds at 10:30 P. M. Position, latitude 40.54 north, longi-

Among the passengers who sailed on the Athinia on Sept. 16 from Brooklyn were twenty-five Americans, mostly missionaries and students bound for Robert College, Constantinople. Included in the list were the Rev. Fayette H. Henderson, J. Sterling Henderson, Mary Henderson, Walker R. Scott, Edna Giffen, Helen Martin, the Rev. James Hunt, the Rev. Brainard Jameson, Gertrude Jameson, Ernest Watson, and Arthur French.

The agents of the line admitted yesterday that the fire on the Athinai might have been caused by a bomb similar to those on the Sant' Anna of the Fabre Line, and the Atlantic Transport liner Minnehaha. While the Greek line is neutral it has been well known in shipping circles for some months that the steamers were carrying supplies and ammunition to the Dardanelles for the Allies. It was reported at the Maritime Exchange yesterday afternoon that the fire had started with an explosion similar to the on on the Minnehaha.

Captain McLean of the Anchor liner Tuscania sent a wireless message last night to say that he had 341 passengers and 68 of the crew of the Athinai on his ship, and that the Rumanian Prince had the others on board, and both were making for New York. The Tuscania was 458 miles east of Ambrose Channel Lightship at noon yesterday and will be at her pier late tonight or early tomorrow morning.

The first news from the Captain that the passengers and crew of the Athinai had been saved was received yesterday at the offices of the National Steamship Navigation Company in a wireless dispatch which read:

> We were on fire from Saturday at 8 A. M. between No. 1 and 2 holds. Were trying by all means to put it out, but it was impossible owing to the rapid spreading of the fire. Sunday, 4 P. M., in latitude 40.50 and longitude 58.47 west, we were compelled, after our vessel was all aflame, to abandon her. All our passengers and crew were saved. Sixty-one of the crew are on the British freighter Rumanian Prince. All passengers and rest of our crew are coming with Tuscania. BOGIAZIDES.

PROVISIONS.

The market for hog products was irregular during the first part of the day, with lard and ribs relatively firmer than pork, but toward the close the entire list declined under selling, which was thought to be by packers, owing to a very poor cash demand. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 24,000 head; estimated for Tuesday, 12,000 head; Kansas City received 7,000 head and Omaha 2,000 head.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 5,999 packages. Increasing firmness on high-grade fresh creamery, with an advance of ¼@½c. Most of the extras sold at 26½c and the fancier lots at 27@27½c. There was also a little improvement in the secondary grades, but the movement is not free as yet. Exporters are showing some further interest. Renovated slow. Ladles and packing stock steady; demand fair. Creamery, extras, (92 score,) 26½c; higher scoring, 27@27½c; firsts, 24½@26c; seconds, 22½@24c; thirds, 21@22c; State dairy, finest, 25½@26c; good to prime, 24@25c; common to fair, 21@23½c; renovated, extras, 24c; firsts, 23@23½c; lower grades, 21@22c; imitation creamery, firsts, 22½@23c; ladles, current make, firsts, 21½@22c; seconds, 21c; lower grades, 19@20c; packing stock, June make, fine, 20½c; current make, fine, 20c; No. 2, 19½c; lower grades, 13½@19c.

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 8,357 cases. The market opened with a generally quiet trading, although the supply of strictly fine to fancy qualities is small and the call for such seems to be sufficient to take the offerings promptly at firm prices. The average and lower grades are moving slowly, and many lots are showing some deterioration in quality as compared with recent receipts. Near-by white eggs met some demand yesterday and offerings were moderate, containing only a small proportion of strictly fancy goods, which are held firmly; defective lots irregular. Little doing in storage eggs at the moment, although there has been some recent movement, chiefly in Summer packings, with prices ranging from about 23½c downward. Fresh gathered, extras, per dozen, 29½@31c; extra firsts, 28@29c; firsts, 26@27½c; seconds, 23½@25c; thirds and poorer, 21@23c; dirties, No. 1, 21@22c; No. 2 and poorer, 18@20c; checks, good to choice, dry, 20@21c; culls and inferior, 15@19c; refrigerator, firsts, 24@25c; seconds, 22@23c; thirds or poorer, 19@21½c; State, Pennsylvania and near by, hennery whites, fine to fancy, 39@40c; ordinary to good, 30@38c; gathered whites, as to size and quality, 28@38c; Western, gathered whites, 28@33c; State, Pennsylvania, and near by, hennery browns, 33@35c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 26@31c.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.

Last Month's from This Port Compared with a Year Ago.

August exports of domestic merchandise from this port exceeded the same month of 1914 by $109,125,052, according to the Custom House statement of foreign commerce issued yesterday by Chief Statistician Lant. Last month's shipments totaled $141,971,554, or about $13,000,000 less than in July. A year ago in August domestic exports were set down at only $32,846,502. The poor showing of August, 1914, was due to the fact that immediately following the outbreak of war in Europe French, British and Russian vessels were tied up in port for over a fortnight. The Custom House abstract in detail is as follows:

JOFFRETTE BABY ROBES.

Frenchwoman Here Pays Her Way with Dresses Named for General.

The Label Shop at 14 East Thirty-seventh Street, to which the Consumers' League of this city has given its sanction because all its goods bear labels showing they are made under sanitary conditions and for fair pay, has a new line of articles for sale consisting of Joffrette "robes de fillettes et bébés," dresses for babies and little children, made by a French woman of New York, whose men relatives are fighting in France.

She owes on a mortgage and has no money to meet the interest with the money getters awy. But the maker of the little Joffrette frocks told the holder of the mortgage that she could obtain the money if only she could sell her fine needlework. So here are the dainty little handmade "robes de fillettes." The pretty name "Joffrette" is gigen to them because, these days, in France, many girl babies are named after the French war leader, General Joffre.

5 NEW HAVEN MEN ASK SEPARATE TRIAL

Charles F. Brooker Afraid of Evidence to be Put In Against Robbins.

MIGHT PREJUDICE THE JURY

C. M. Pratt, Lewis Cass Ledyard, H. K. McHarg, and F. F. Brewster Want Individual Hearings Also.

Charles F. Brooker, Charles M. Pratt, Lewis Cass Ledyard, Henry K. McHarg, and Frederick F. Brewster, directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, indicted and awaiting trial for alleged violation of the Sherman law, yesterday petitioned Judge William H. Hunt, sitting in the Federal District Court, for separate trials.

In the moving papers Charles F. Brooker says he does not want to be arraigned with Edward D. Robbins, former general counsel for the New Haven, who is alleged to have sanctioned the acquisition of the subsidiary companies which created the monopoly set forth in the indictment. The papers were put in by Royall Victor of the law firm of Sullivan & Cromwell.

In support of the Brooker motion Mr. Victor submitted an affidavit in which he sets forth that the efforts of the Government to prove that Robbins made money on the side through the purchase of the Metropolitan Steamship Company and that he connived at the spiriting away of the books of the Billard Company would unduly prejudice the minds of the trial jurors as to the standing of his client, against whom no such evidence exists. Mr. Victor says:

"I do not mean by any statement in this affidavit in any way to throw legal blame upon Mr. Robbins or to impute to him any guilty knowledge or intent or violation of law whatsoever, my intention being solely to bring the attention of this court to only such facts regarding the case as seem to be necessary to enable the court to understand that the defenses of the defendants in question are in substantial respects radically different."

Mr. Victor quotes from testimony given by William Skinner before the Interstate Commerce Commission in Washington that Robbins had told the New Haven Board of Directors that they were not violating the Sherman Law when they consolidated the various transportation lines in New England.

In his own affidavit Mr. Brooker says he is 68 years old, a resident of Ansonia, Conn., and the President of the American Brass Company. He says he was a Director of the New Haven from 1893 to 1915, and was Vice President of the Harlem River and Portchester Railroad, and "perhaps a few other subsidiaries."

According to the Government Brooker was concerned in the purchase of the Westchester Railroad franchises in which it is alleged $10,000,000 "vanished into thin air."

McHarg and Brewster, asking for separate trials, state that the New Haven in January, 1907, acquired the Boston & Maine Railroad and as they did not become Directors until the following May they ought not to be held accountable because of the ratification of that deal.

Pratt and Ledyard state that on Jan. 1, 1907, they simply exchanged their Boston & Maine stock for stock of the New Haven and were simply vendors and not conspirators. They said that in making the exchange they were misled by the reports of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Commerce and Industries Commission of Massachusetts.

In addition Ledyard in the motion papers said:

"From the time when I became a Director in February, 1908, until after the election of Messrs. Baker and Cuyler in 1910 I participated in and had contemporaneous knowledge of the acquisition of onl ytwo properties which were not already controlled by the New Haven system, namely, the trolley line of the Tarrytown, White Plains & quisition of only two properties which as I have stated, was in no sense an interstate property, and the Newport & Wickford Railway Company, which was wholly in the State of Rhode Island, and has always been operated simply as a spur to connect New Haven with Newport."

SEEK JOBS IN PANAMA.

Many Changes Expected When New Governor Takes Office.

From Panama comes word that in anticipation of the many important changes that it is believed will be brought about in the Panama organization through the appointment of a new Governor to succeed Colonel George W. Goethals, a surprising number of applicants are already busy looking over the ground and filing their applications for places where it is thought the changes will be made. In order that their applications may carry more weight many are writing to their Congressmen here asking for their support and help.

Few applications have been made, however, for the Governorship, since it is generally understood that Lieutenant Colonel Chester Harding, U. S. A., at present Acting Governor, will be appointed. It is not likely that this will take place before November, or perhaps December, for the appointment must be made by the President and then confirmed by the Senate. In the meantime, Colonel Harding will remain Acting Governor until appointed and confirmed.

There are many lucrative jobs in the Canal Zone. All of these pay salaries of $3,600 and more, besides carrying with them certain valuable perquisites. These include a nicely furnished house, rent free, and all commissary privileges. Changes are scheduled to occur in several of the higher civilian positions, but these will not be the result of the change in the Governorship. It has never been the policy on the canal work to make changes in the personnel except to increase efficiency.

Dismissals have never been allowed because an employe differed from his immediate chief or from the Governor in politics. Also political backing, no matter how strong, except in a few cases, has never succeeded in winning a place for party workers from the States. There is now some speculation as to whether this rule will hold now.

In all there are ten executive positions in the canal organization which are filled by civilians and which are subject to the appointment of the Governor with the approval of the Secretary of War. The lowest salary involved is $3,600, while the highest is $7,200.

EDISON SHOWS HIS BATTERY

Tells Fifty Experts of Plan for Small Merchants' Wagons.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Sept. 20.—Thomas A. Edison displayed today to some fifty electrical experts the storage battery on which he had been at work for the last three years. He announced that arrangements had been completed to put the new battery on the market in light delivery wagons which might be rented by the small merchant.

One of the new wagons was displayed in the yard of the laboratory at the Edison plant. It has a carrying capacity of 750 pounds and will travel forty-five miles without recharging. It makes ten miles an hour and is operated by only one pedal, so that almost any one can learn easily to run the car.

Mr. Edison said he had designed the car to replace the horse-drawn delivery wagon of the small merchant. Figures obtained showed that the upkeep of a motor delivery wagon, including current and storage, would equal only about half the cost of feeding and stabling one horse, while the cost of tires, averaged on a monthly basis, would be less than the cost of shoeing one horse.

The price of feed is increasing, while Mr. Edison declared current was daily becoming cheaper, so that the saving effected by the use of the motor wagon would increase steadily.

STRIKE AT B. & O. TERMINAL.

350 Freight Handlers and Trackwalkers Tie Up Traffic.

Most of the traffic in the New York terminal of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad at St. George, S. I., was tied up yesterday when the 350 freight handlers and track walkers went on strike. Most of the coal shipped from Southern and Middle Western points passes through this terminal for shipment to the East, and this traffic was almost stopped, as well as the shipments via Elizabethport to Southern and Eastern points. Strikebreakers got out a few trains with the most perishable goods, such as ice, fruit, and poultry. Thirty of the road's uniformed detectives were assigned to track inspection in place of the striking track walkers.

Spokesmen of the strikers said the crews of handlers had been reduced from time to time and the men required to do too much work. This was denied by John H. Clark, Superintendent of the terminal yards, who said that the strikers had presented no demands or complaints, and that he could not account for their action. The men belong to no union, and as nine-tenths of them are Italians, German influence is not suspected.

Some of the employes in the passenger and freight terminal of the Staten Island Rapid Transit Company also struck, but their places were filled without much trouble.

The 100 freight handlers who struck last week in the Communipaw yards of the Central Railroad of New Jersey went back to work yesterday noon. They had demanded in place of the present rate of 20 cents an hour a regular wage of 25 cents, with 30 cents an hour for overtime and 35 cents for holidays and Sundays. They went back for 20 cents an hour, but with the agreement that they were to have 30 cents for Sundays and holidays, and that increases should be made in the force when necessary to avoid overtime.

A committee of the freight handlers striking in the Lehigh Railroad yards at Communipaw conferred yesterday with officials of the road, who, it is said, granted two of the three demands, and an early end to the strike was expected.

The situation at Elizabeth, N. J., where about 900 men are on strike at various places, was improved yesterday. Socialists had predicted a strike of the 3,000 employes of the Singer Manufacturing Company, but twenty-four men in the machine inspection department who applied for an increase from 20 to 22 cents an hour were refused, and all but three of them were discharged at once. Though no concessions had been made, 89 of the 150 striking employes of the Central Railroad of New Jersey at Elizabeth went back to work yesterday morning.

STRIKES IN THREE STATES.

Machinists at Worcester and Providence Plants Quit Work.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 20.—More than 300 machinists employed in the Cambridge Street plant of the Reed-Prentice Company went on strike today because the company refused to give a forty-eight-hour week and an increase in pay of five cents an hour. The plant employs 385 hands, and is working day and night on war orders. The machinists of the Gold Street plant of the company have made a similar demand, and it is expected that they will join their co-workers unless the demand is granted.

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 20.—A strike of machinists was called at the plant of the Brown & Sharpe Manufacturing Company today to enforce a demand for an eight-hour working day in all departments without any reduction. Officials of the company said that about 2,500 of the 5,800 employes obeyed the strike call.

NEW BRITAN, Conn., Sept. 20.—Demanding a 10 per cent. increase in wages, a minimum daily wage of $2.50 and a maximum of $3.50, molders, annealers and others employed by the North & Judd Manufacturing Company struck today.

Cable Strike in Perth Amboy.

Three hundred men and girls employed at the works of the Standard Underground Cable Company in Perth Amboy, N. J., struck yesterday afternoon. They demand an eight-hour day. They have been working ten hours. It is expected the strike will involve all the 2,000 hands employed if the demand is not granted at once.

What Might Have Been.

Had the "Grape Juice" policy prevailed in 1776, Lord Fitznoodle would now be Viceroy of America, the Fourth of July would have nothing on the First of April, and the only celebrating we would be doing today would be on the firing line of the west front with others of the numerous children of the "mother country."—Austin America.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD.

Franklin Pettit Sells Group of Seven West End Avenue Private Dwellings to McMorrow Brothers as Site for Twelve-Story Apartment House—Bronx and Suburban Deals.

West End Avenue opened the realty market of the week yesterday with an important deal which, with the twelve-story apartment house about to be erected on the property, will represent an investment of practically $1,000,000.

The property includes seven old dwellings on the southeast corner of Eighty-ninth Street, being 590 to 598 West End Avenue and 274 and 276 West Eighty-ninth Street. The purchasers are the McMorrow Brothers, who have been active builders of high-class houses on the West Side, this being their second West End Avenue deal within four months. Title to the plot will be taken in the name of the 590 West End Avenue Company, recently incorporated, with Thomas, Charles P., and James Walter McMorrow as Directors.

All of the property except one plot, that at 590 West End Avenue, was bought from Franklin Pettit, who acquired it for resale to a builder a short time ago. To round out the corner, giving a frontage of 100 feet on the avenue and the street, the three-story residence at 590 West End Avenue, 19 by 82, was purchased from Michael McGuire, who acquired it at foreclosure proceedings a month ago for $22,783.

Slawson & Hobbs were the brokers in the transaction and they were also the brokers in the previous purchase by the McMorrows of the southwest corner of West End Avenue and Ninety-ninth Street, which is also to be improved with a twelve-story house.

The mortgage was made on Sept. 15, 1907, by the Seventy-second Street Company.

OPPENHEIM, ALBERT D.—The People of the State of New York, By the Grace of God, Free and Independent, to Samuel L. Goldenberg, one of the executors named in the will, and Sadie Saxe, Charles J. Oppenheim, Henrietta Cohen, Mathilde Caro, Caroline Fould, the heirs and next of kin of ALBERT D. OPPENHEIM, deceased, send greeting:

Whereas, Albert Saxe, who resides at No. 525 West End Avenue, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, has lately applied to the Surrogates' Court of our County of New York, to have a certain instrument in writing, bearing date the 27th day of February, 1906, together with two codicils thereto, bearing date, respectively, December 12th and 15th, 1913, relating to both real and personal property duly proved as the last will and testament of ALBERT D. OPPENHEIM, who was at the time of his death a resident of the County of New York, deceased.

Therefore, you and each of you are cited to show cause before the Surrogates' Court of our County of New York, at the Hall of Records in the County of New York on the 4th day of November, 1915, at half past ten o'clock of that day, why the said last will and testament, together with the codicils thereto, should not be admitted to probate as a will of real and personal property.

In witness whereof we have caused the seal of the Surrogates' Court of the said County of New York to be hereunto affixed.

Witness, Hon. Robert Ludlow Fowler, a Surrogate of our said County of New York, at said County, the 13th day of September, in the year One thousand nine hundred and fifteen. DANIEL J. DOWDNEY, Executors of Silas P. Hubbell's Will Make Motion in His Niece's Contest.

NOTHING LEFT TO LITIGANT

Promise of Legacy, She Says, Led Her to Keep Silent About Her Father's Families.

The protest filed in the Surrogate's Court by Mrs. Ruth M. Holden of Melrose Highlands, Mass., to the probate of the will of her uncle, Silas P. Hubbell, on the ground that the decedent had agreed to leave her half of his estate, resulted yesterday in a motion made by the executors before Justice Pendleton of the Supreme Court to compel Mrs. Holden to file a copy of the alleged agreement. Argument on the motion will be heard later.

Mr. Hubbell died at Daytona, Fla., two years ago, leaving an estate estimated to be worth $2,000,000. In explanation of the agreement Mrs. Holden said that her father, Sidney Hubbell, had two families. He was married first in 1861, and had three children—herself and two others. Later her father and mother were estranged, and when her father died he had three daughters from a second union. He left these children all of his fortune except legacies of $10,000 to each of the children by his first marriage.

Mrs. Holden said that she was going to contest the will, but was induced by her uncle, for the sake of the family, to remain quiet, he promising to leave her half of all he possessed. So she instructed her lawyers to drop the case. When her uncle's will was filed for probate she was surprised to learn, she said, that his agreement with her was not kept. She got nothing at all, while her brother, Dr. Silas Hubbell, was remembered to the extent of $40,000, the children of her father by his second marriage received $10,000 each and valuable real estate in Florida, and her father's second wife received the family homestead at Chatham, N. Y.

MRS. DONALD ANDREWS HERE

The Former Princess Vetsera Returning from England.

Among the passengers who returned yesterday from England on the Holland-America liner Rotterdam was Mrs. Donald Shields Andrews, who was Mrs. Alma V. Hayne, or the Princess Vetsera of Austria, before she married Donald Andrews of Yale University a few months ago. Their wedding took place at Mamaroneck, N. Y., against the wishes of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Andrews of Cleveland, Ohio, the parents of the bridegroom, who tried to stop it.

A week after the wedding the young couple sailed for Europe, declaring they did not care what Mr. Andrews, senior, thought, as they intended to make their own way in the world together. When the husband returned to New York without his bride he looked very irritable and declined to discuss the matter in any manner.

Mrs. Andrews went to the Hotel St. Regis from the steamer and declined to say anything about her matrimonial affairs.

TO MOVE GREELEY STATUE.

Tribune Association Tells Why It Is Necessary.

The Tribune Association announces this morning that it has made arrangements for the removal of the statue of Horace Greeley from its present site, partly on the property occupied by the Tribune Building and partly on the sidewalk, as soon as the authorities settle upon a new site for it.

Its removal is due to the order made by George McAneny when he was Borough President, requiring the removal of all obstructions beyond the house lines in Nassau Street and in other streets. The order was suspended, for the reason that the statue, which was erected by public subscription, with the aid of the Tribune Association, and presented to the city, was not the property of The Tribune and could not legally be removed by it.

The statue was the work of the late John Q. A. Ward, and the movement in favor of such a statue was started in 1873, one year after the death of Mr. Greeley. At the time most of those interested favored having the statue placed as near as possible to the scene of his labors, and hence its place in front of the Tribune Building. The Tribune says this morning:

"It is the hope of the officers of the Tribune Association and many others who admire the memory of Mr. Greeley for the great work which he accomplished by his public service that a new site may be found for the statue, at least as near to the scene of Mr. Greeley's journalistic labors as the City Hall Park."

NEWMAN ERB IS BETTER.

If Improvement Continues Poisoned Man Will Recover.

DEAL, N. J., Sept. 20.—Newman Erb continues to improve. He is now in the middle of the period at which the mercury he took last week should show its worst effects. He has not an ache or a pain and feels better than he has for months.

He is suffering, of course, from the treatment that has been given to work off the mercury. The doctors seem to think now that he has a great deal more than a fighting chance. If he continues to improve as he has done he will certainly recover.

Francis Neilson, Playwright, Here.

Francis Neilson, M. P., the English playwright, arrived on the Rotterdam yesterday to take a six months' rest in this country. He said he had brought several new plays with him, including a war play, unnamed, and one written from his book, "Life in Bohemia," which deals with life in Washington Square in the seventies.

SUES FOR WIFE'S LOVE.

New Action Added to Tangled Affairs of the de Lukacevics Family.

The domestic troubles of Charles de Lukacevics of Newark, inventor and promoter, who is sometimes dignified with the title of Count, took another turn yesterday when he entered a $10,000 suit in this city against Aaron Frankenheim, a patternmaker, of 27 Beekman Street, charging him with alienation of the affections of Mrs. de Lukacevics.

Frankenheim was named as co-respondent in de Lukacevics's recently filed divorce suit, which followed an action for separate maintenance which his wife had brought against him. Mrs. de Lukacevics in her answer denied all her husband's charges, and she said last night that she knew of the alienation suit and that she could prove without difficulty that she and Frankenheim had not seen each other for five years. Prior to that time, she said, he had made week-end visits to their home as a business acquaintance of her husband, and was a witness during a previous display of their marital difficulties in Long Island courts in 1910. De Lukacevics brought the alienation suit through a New York lawyer, though Newark attorneys have been employed in his other actions.

Shahrazade in New York

In the days when the Sultan's Wife's Sister was fending off an approaching demise, by inventing the short story, the harrowing tale of the Barber's Brother got no further than mere words.

Now Griffith, Ince, Sennett, the modern magic masters, have taken over the story telling business for the world; they are the newest exponents of the Thousand and One Romances. These men are the triple foundation of the Triangle Idea.

Would you have romance? Griffith will book your journey in the realms of his wondrous fancy.

Have you a desire for thrills? Ince will sweep his deft fingers over the harp of your emotions.

Is your wish laughter? Sennett will unwind fathoms of it for you.

Next Thursday evening, at the Knickerbocker Theatre, you'll come to a full realization of what we've been telling you for weeks. For then the first of the Triangle Nights Entertainments will be ready for you.
